THORNBURY, co. Gloucester.

London 120 m. W b N. Pop. 3760. M. D. Sat. Fairs, Easter-Mond.; Aug. 15; Mond. bef. St. Thomas; and Dec. 21; for cattle and pigs.

A market-town and parish in the lower division of the hundred of Thornbury. It is situated in the vale of Berkeley, on the banks of a small rivulet, which flows into the Severn. The town, which is of great antiquity, consists principally of three streets, in the form of the letter Y. The clothing-trade was formerly carried on to a considerable extent, but it is now discontinued. The corporation, now merely nominal, consists of a mayor and twelve aldermen, with a serjeant-at-mace and two constables. A manorial court-leet is held annually, and occasionally a court-baron; also a manor-court for the surrender of admission to copyholds. A court for the recovery of debts under 40*s.* for the hundred is held every Thursday three weeks, and a court of record, for pleas to any amount, for the honour of Gloucester, is held every Tuesday three weeks. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Gloucester; valued in K. B. 25*l.* 15*s.* 10*d.*; patron, Christ Church, Oxford. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious and handsome cruciform structure, with a lofty tower, ornamented with rich open-worked battlements, and eight pinnacles. There are meeting-houses for Baptists, Independents, the Society of Friends, and Wesleyan Methodists. The free-grammar-school was founded and endowed in 1648 by William Edwards; the present income is 57*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*, and twelve boys are instructed on the foundation. Another freeschool for twenty-four boys and twelve girls was founded in 1729 with 500*l.*, left by John Atwells, and endowed with lands in 1789; the present income is 70*l.* a-year. Six alms houses, for fifteen poor people, were founded in the reign of James I. by Sir John Stafford. Thornbury is chiefly remarkable for the remains of an ancient castle, begun by Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, in 1511, but left in an unfinished state when he was beheaded in 1522; the stately gateway, which formed the principal entrance, and the outer walls are in good preservation; the ruins command a beautiful prospect over the Severn and South Wales. In 1539 Henry VIII. and Anne Boleyn were sumptuously entertained here during ten days.

THORNBURY,"co. Hereford.

P. T. Bromyard (125) 4 m. NNW. Pop: 183. A parish in the hundred of Broxash; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Hereford; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; patron (1829) Jonathan Pytts, Esq. Here are some remains of an ancient British intrenchment.

THORNDON, co. Suffolk.

P. T. Eye (81) 3 m. S b W. Pop. 638.

A parish in the hundred of Hartismere; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Sud-bury and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 24*l.* 11*s.* 10½*d.*; church ded. to All Saints; patron (1829) the Rev. Thomas Howes.

THORNE, W. R. co. York.

London 166 m. N b W. Pop. 3463. M. D. Wednes. Fairs, first Mond., Tues., and Wednes. after June 11; ditto, after Oct. 11; for horned cattle, horses, and pedlery.

A market-town and parish in the lower division of the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill. It is situated in a marshy but fertile country, and was formerly only a small village, with a castle near it, the foundations of which still remain, but is now a flourishing town; the streets are paved, and many of the houses are well built. A considerable trade is carried on in grain and other commodities, and many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of rope. Ships are built at Thorne Quay and Hangman's Hill, which trade directly to London. A canal, from the river Don to the Trent, passes near the town, and greatly facilitates its trade. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of York, of the certified value of 48*l.* 17*s.* 10*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 72*l.*; patron (1829) the Earl of Portmore. The church, which is ded. to St. Nicholas, has a square tower surmounted by pinnacles. There are meeting-houses for Independents, Unitarians, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, the Society of Friends, and the followers of Joanna Southcote. The freeschool was endowed by William Brook in 1705, for the maintenance of a master, and the instruction of ten of the poorest boys in the town; the annual income is 148*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.* Another freeschool was founded and endowed in 1706 by Henry Travis, the income of which is about 35*l.* The Rev. Abraham de la Pryme, F. R. S., a celebrated antiquary and historian, was some time minister of Thorne; he died in 1704 at the age of thirty-four.

THORNE, GRAFTON, co. Northumberland.

P. T. Hexham (278) 10 m. W b N. Pop. 247

A township in the parish of Haltwhistle and West division of Tindale ward. House Steads was the site of the Roman station

Borcovieus, near which passed the Roman wall; it stands on the brow of a rocky eminence, the western declivity of which is formed into flights of broad terraces. The area of this fort is level on the north side, but on the south is covered with vast and confused heaps of ruins. The suburbs, divided into streets and squares, extend over several acres, and traces of buildings are visible on the south-west, to the distance of two miles and a half; and on Chapel Hill, a little to the south, are the ruins of a temple of the Doric order, among which several altars, sepulchral inscriptions, and curiously carved figures in relief have been discovered.

THORNE, ST. MARGARET, co. Somerset.

P. T. Wellington (143) 3 m. W. Pop. 145.

Pop. with Alverthorpe.

A township and chapelry in the parish of Wakefield and lower division of the wapentake of Agbrigg; living, a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of York, not in charge; patron, the Vicar of Wakefield. The chapel has been recently erected by the commissioners under the late act of parliament.

THORNEY, co. Cambridge.

London 82 m. N. Pop. 1970. M. D. Tues.
Fairs, July 1 and Sept. 1, for horses.

A market-town and parish in the north part of the hundred of Witchford, Isle of Ely. It is very pleasantly situated on an eminence surrounded by fertile grounds: its present name was derived from the thorns and bushes that grew in the vicinity; but it obtained its ancient appellation, Ankeridge, from the anchorites, who dwelt in the cells of an abbey founded here, by Sexulphus the first abbot of Peterborough, in the year 662; the abbey being destroyed by the Danes, was rebuilt in 972 by Æthelwold, Bishop of Winchester, for Benedictine monks, which became so opulent that at the dissolution its revenue was valued at 508*l.* 12*s.* 5*d.* The only remains of this abbey, which was a mitred one, are portions of the church, a gateway, and some fragments of the old walls. The petty sessions are holden here. The living is a curacy and a peculiar exempt from visitation, not in charge; patron (1829) the Duke of Bedford, in his peculiar jurisdiction. The church, which is dedicated to St. Botolph, originally formed the nave of the conventual church; it was built in 1128, and is partly in the Norman style of architecture. Here is a school for poor children, and the Duke of Bedford allows the master 20*l.* a-year; and by the liberality of his Grace, about twelve poor families are supported in almshouses. A literary society, possessing a good library, was established in 1823.

THORNEY, eo. Nottingham.

P. T. Tuxford (137) 8½ m. E b N. Pop. 264.

THURSO, shire of Caithness, S.

Edinburgh 279 m. N. Pop. 4045. M. D. Fri. Fairs, June 29 and end of Aug. for ten days.

A seaport, market-town, post-town, and parish, pleasantly situated on the north-west coast, at the head of a spacious bay, having a good harbour, formed by the estuary of the river Thurso, in which there is a valuable salmon-fishery. The old town is an ill-built irregular place, containing nothing worthy of observation, excepting the parish church, which is a venerable cruciform structure; but on the south side of it, as well as on the western, or opposite bank of the river, many handsome houses have lately been erected, upon a more uniform plan, with a new church, a town-house, an infirmary, markets, &c., and for the greater convenience of the trade of Caithness and the Orkneys, a branch of the bank of Scotland has been established here. This is a port of the custom-house with a resident collector, comptroller, and inferior officers; the collector and supervisor of excise, and the distributor of stamps for the shire also reside here. The chief exports are corn, meal, salmon, and white fish; and the imports consist of most of the necessities of life, including coal for the consumption of the more opulent. Coarse linen is the principal manufacture of the place, and there are bleaching-grounds and a tannery in the vicinity. Thurso is a burgh of barony, now under the superiority of Sir John Sinclair, Bart.; it was so created by charter of Charles I. in 1633, with all privileges, immunities, and jurisdictions, usually granted in such cases; and is governed by two bailties and twelve councillors, who hold office only during the pleasure of the superior, to whom alone belong the customs of the markets and fairs. The parish, which is bounded on the north by the Pentland Firth, extends around the town to the distance of about three miles, and contains about 4000 acres of arable land, which, for the most part is level, exhibiting a rich succession of well-cultivated fields, interspersed with pretty villas; and near the town is Thurso Castle, formerly the seat of the earls of Caithness, but now of Sir John Sinclair, the enlightened author of a "Statistical Account of Scotland," and other works. The rocks bounding the coast to the westward of Holburn-Head, as far as Brines Castle (an old tower still remaining), present the most imposing scenes of natural grandeur; one of these, called the Clett, is a stupendous insulated mass, elevated 400 feet above the sea, and frequented by myriads of aquatic fowl. Living, in the presbytery of Caithness and synod of Caithness and Sutherland; patron, Sir John Sinclair, Bart., whose family place of sepulture is the south aisle of the parish church. The bishops of Caithness occupied the castle of Burnside, built by Bishop Murray in the thirteenth century, and of which there are still some vestiges. Pictish houses are common here; and in Thurso Park are the ruins of an old chapel, the burial-place of Earl Harold, who was slain in 1190, and over whose remains the present proprietor has raised a handsome monument. Whinstone, freestone, and slate are plentiful throughout this parish, and lead-ore has been discovered, but no mine has yet been opened.

TIBBERMUIR, shire of Perth, S.

P. T. Perth (40½) 4½ m. W. Pop. 1634.

A parish about eight miles long, two broad, and containing 4670 Scotch acres, of which about 4300 are cultivated, and the remainder either underwood or consisting of muir and moss. The surface presents a gradual slope from north to south, but abruptly descends on the east to the plain watered by the river Almond; upon the banks of which are several cotton manufactories, with extensive printing and bleaching fields, and from which a canal to the town of Perth was cut at a very early period, mention being made of it in ancient charters, dated so far back as 1244. Living in the presbytery of Perth and synod of Perth and Stirling; patron, the Crown. The church is ancient. Huntingtower Castle, in this parish, formerly the seat of the Ruthven or Gowrie family, is now occupied by calico-printers. It is celebrated by historians as the scene of the enterprise termed the "Raid of Ruthven," or confinement of James VI. in 1582, by the Earl of Gowrie and his confederates; also for a place named "The Maiden's Loup," from an astonishing exploit performed by a young lady, who, on hearing the approach of footsteps while giving the meeting to her lover in an apartment of one of the towers, rushed to the battlements, and took the desperate leap of nine feet four inches, across a chasm sixty feet deep, to the top of the opposite tower, upon which she alighted in safety. Huntingtower gives the title of Baron to the family of Tollemache, earls of Dysart. At the eastern extremity of the parish are the remains of a Carmelite priory, founded by a Bishop of Dunkeld in 1262; and near it was fought the first battle between Montrose and the Covenanters, in which the latter suffered a complete defeat.

TICKHILL, W. R. eo. York.

P. T. Bawtry (153) 4 m. W. Pop. of Pa. 1884.
Of To. 1834. Fairs, Aug. 21, for cattle and various articles of merchandise.

A disused market-town and parish in the lower division of the wapentake of Strathforth and Tickhill. It is situated in a fertile valley on the border of Nottinghamshire; the streets are disposed in the form of a cross, and in the centre stands the market-cross, a circular stone building erected in 1776; the houses are in general of respectable appearance, but built in a straggling manner. A very extensive trade was formerly carried on in malt, but at present there are not more than three kilns; a few of the inhabitants are employed in a small paper manufactory. Manorial courts leet and baron are held annually. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of York; valued in K. B. 7*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*; patron (1829) J. S. Foljambe, Esq. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious and handsome structure, with a lofty and beautiful tower, and contains several ancient monuments; it appears to be of the age of Edward III., but having been greatly injured by lightning in 1825, it has recently been entirely repaired. Here are meeting-houses for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. The national school, in which sixty boys and forty girls are educated, is supported by voluntary contributions. Near the church is a Maison-de-Dieu, consisting of fourteen almshouses for poor widows. On the south-east side of the town are the remains of Tickhill Castle, which is said to have been erected by Roger de Busli, one of the followers of William the Conqueror; at the commencement of the civil wars this castle was garrisoned for the king, but after a siege of two days it was obliged to surrender, and it was soon after dismantled by order of Parliament. The ruins consist of the mound on which the foundations of the keep are visible, part of the external walls, and a dilapidated Norman gateway. The northern part of the structure, by considerable repairs and additions, has been converted into a modern residence, and the ground within the walls formed into gardens and shrubberies. John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, formerly resided at this castle. In an adjacent vale are the remains of a priory of Augustine friars, founded in the reign of Henry III., now occupied as a farm-house.

dlesex and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 8*l.*; patron (1829) John Fisher, Esq.

TILBURY, co. Essex.

P. T. Gray's Thurrock (24) 3½ m. E. Pop. 249.

A parish in the hundred of Barstable, situated on the banks of the Thames, exactly opposite to Gravesend, with which town and the interior of Kent, there is a constant communication by means of ferry-boats. The living is a rectory with the curacy of West Lea, in the archdeaconry of Middlesex and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 20*l.*; church ded. to St. James; patron, the King. Tilbury Fort stands close to the banks of the Thames, partly in this parish and partly in that of Chadwell; it was originally a block-house, erected in the reign of Henry VIII.; but after the memorable attack of the Dutch fleet in 1667, it was converted into a regular fortification, to which considerable additions have since been made. It is surrounded by a deep wide fosse, and is mounted with several formidable batteries; it contains comfortable barracks and other accommodations for the garrison, which consists of a fort-major, and a detachment of invalids. In the neighbourhood some traces of the camp, formed to oppose the invasion of the Spanish Armada, in the reign of Elizabeth, are still visible. In a chalk-hill, near this place, are several curious caverns, called Danes Holes, they are constructed of stone, narrow at the entrance, and very spacious at the depth of thirty feet.

TILBURY, EAST, co. Essex.

P. T. Gray's Thurrock (24) 5 m. E b S. Pop. with East Lea liberty 264.

A parish in the hundred of Barstable, situated near that part of the Thames called the Hope, where, on Hope Point, is a battery for the defence of the river below Tilbury Fort. The living is a dis. vicarage, with the curacy of East Lea, in the archdeaconry of Middlesex and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 150*l.*; church ded. to St. Catherine; patron, the Lord Chancellor. Here was an ancient ferry over the Thames, said to be the place where Claudius passed in pursuit of the Britons. The lofty tower of the ancient manor-house of Gossalyne was battered down by the Dutch fleet in the reign of Charles II.

TILDESLEY, or TYLDERSLEY, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Newton-in-Makerfield (193) 8 m. NE b E. Pop. 4325.

A township and chapelry in the parish of Leigh and hundred of West Derby, pleasantly situated, and commanding a delightful prospect over seven counties. About the year 1780 it contained only three families; since which time it has surprisingly increased to its present population. The manufacture of cotton, which is extensively carried on, and weaving, agriculture, and the neighbouring collieries, which are very considerable, constitute the principal employment of the inhabitants. The Leeds and Liverpool Canal, which also extends to Manchester, passes within two miles of this place. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Chester, not in charge; patron, the Vicar of Leigh. The church, which is dedicated to St. George, is a handsome Gothic structure, with a spire rising to the height of 150 feet, and was recently erected under the late acts of parliament. Here are chapels for the connexion of the late Countess of Huntingdon and Wesleyan Methodists. The national school, erected in 1827, is calculated to contain 250 boys, and as many girls, and is supported by subscription, and small weekly payments from the scholars. In 1828 a subscription library was established. Here are the remains of a very ancient brick building, called the Dam House; and near it the ruins of another, still more ancient.

TILlicouLTRY, shire of Clackmannan, S.

P. T. Alloa (31) 4 m. NNE. Pop. 1163.

A parish and village, the former of an oblong form, six miles in length, about one and a half in breadth, and containing more than 6000 Scotch acres, of which two-thirds are in the Ochill Hills, including Bencleugh, the loftiest of the whole range, whose summit is elevated 2300 feet above the Forth. The remaining portion of the parish forms the rich valley watered by the beautiful river Devon, and esteemed the Tempe of Scotland. Large flocks of sheep find excellent pasture upon the hills; and the arable fields produce abundant crops of corn, though the surface in some places is covered with large quartzenodules. Coal abounds every where south of the hills; ironstone is also very abundant; and here have been discovered considerable strata of septaria ironstone, which are worked by the Devon Iron Company. The other metals and minerals found in this district are silver, lead, copper, cobalt, antimony, arsenic, granite, basaltes, &c. This parish, which also includes the villages of Coals-Naughton, Earls-Town, and Wester-Town, has been long famous for the manufacture of blankets, plaids, and of a species of shalloon, having worsted warp and linen waft, termed Tillicoultry serge. Living in the presbytery of Dunblane and synod of Perth and Stirling; patron, James Bruce, Esq., whose residence, Tillicoultry House, and Harvieston, the seat of John Tait, Esq., are elegant mansions. The church was erected in 1773, in a central situation. There are some remains of the old structure; also of a Druidical temple; and on an eminence termed Castle Craig, are the ruins of an ancient circular building.

The living is an entire rectory united with the rectory of Ballymacwilliam, in the diocese of Killdare and archdiocese of Dublin, not possessing either church or parsonage, although there is a glebe of twelve acres annexed to it; patron, the King. Area of parish, 1935 acres of land. Here are the ruins of a church.

TIMAHOE, or TIMOHOE, Queen's Co. Leinster, I.

P. T. Stradbally (49) 5 m. SW. Pop. 263. M. D. Mond. Fairs April 5; July 2; and Oct. 18.

A village in the parish of the same name and barony of Stradbally, or, according to some distributions, in Cullinagh barony; living, a rectory united with Tullomoy, Fossey, and Killclonbrock, in the diocese of Leighlin and archdiocese of Dublin; valued in K. B. 4*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.*; and, by commutation for tithes, 387*l.* 13*s.* 10*d.* annually, of which the incumbent receives but 129*l.* 4*s.* 7½*d.*; patron, the Marquis of Lansdown. A monastery was founded here, some time in the tenth century, by O'More, of Leix, and dedicated to St. Mochoe, who died A. D. 497. It was called Teach-Mochoe, whence the present name of Timaghoe. In 1142 the abbey was burned down, and after the general suppression, and in the reign of Elizabeth, its possessions were granted to Sir Thomas Loftus. They subsequently passed, probably by marriage, into the proprietary of the Cosby family. In the year 1635 Sir Thomas Loftus expired in his castle of Timaghoe; and in 1642 the Irish, under General Preston, were defeated by Monk, near to this place. The ruins of the castle and church still remain, and the stump of an ancient pillar-tower.

TIMOLEAGUE, co. Cork, Munster, I.

P. T. Bandon (186) 7½ m. S. Pop. of Pa. 1011. Of To. 707. Fairs, March 28; July 5; Aug. 21; and Dec. 7.

A market-town in the parish of the same name, the latter being partly in the east division of East Carbery barony, and extending also into the united baronies of Ibaune and Barryroe, situated at the embouchure of the Arigadeen river, and at the western extremity of Courtmasherry Bay. Although placed in a fertile and populous vicinity, and admirably calculated for a commercial mart, its proximity to Bandon and Cloghnakilty continues to retard its aggrandisement. The river is navigable for sloops up to the town, and by lighters two miles further. The cotton manufacture, however, has obtained a solid footing in this town. The living is a rectory and corps of a prebend in the diocese of Ross and archdiocese of Cashel; valued in K. B. 4*l.*; and, by commutation for tithes, 413*l.* 8*s.* 8½*d.* annually. Here are a church and parsonage, with about nine acres of glebe; patron, the Bishop of Cork. A Franciscan friary was founded here in the beginning of the fourteenth century, by the Lord of Ibaune, and in the chapel attached to it, Edmund Decourcy, Bishop of Ross, was interred A. D. 1518; he was a distinguished favourite of King Henry VII. Here is also a monument to the M'Carthy-Reaghs, and another, also ancient, to the memory of the O'Cullanes. The festival of the patron saint, Molaga, is observed on the 26th of January, and the holy well, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, visited on the 8th of May. The ruins of the fine castles of the Barretts and the O'Shaughnaseys adorn the vicinity.

TIMOLIN, co. Killdare, Leinster, I.

P. T. Ballytore (35) 1 m. S. Pop. 3898. Fairs, Easter Mon. and June 28.

A village in the parish of the same name, the latter being partly in Killkea and Moone baronies, and partly in Narragh and Rheban East, situated upon the river Griss. The living is a rectory and vicarage, united with the benefices of Belan, Rathtoole, Killelane, and Moon, in the dioceses of Dublin and Glendalough and archdiocese of Dublin; the rectory is valued in K. B. 8*l.* 17*s.* 2¾*d.*; and, by commutation for tithes, 127*l.* 10*s.*; annual value of vicarage, 63*l.* 15*s.* Here are a church and parsonage with nineteen acres of glebe; patron, the Archbishop of Dublin. A monastery for regular canons was founded here at an early period, of which Doulip M'Scalvoy, who died in 927, was abbot. Some time in the reign of King John, a convent under the invocation of the Virgin Mary, was founded here by Robert, son of Richard, Lord of Noragh, for Aroacian nuns, and his granddaughter, Lecelina, was placed over it.

TINGWALL, shire of Orkney and Shetland, S.

Pop. 2309.

A parish to which is annexed the ancient parishes of Weisdale and Whiteness, in the island of Mainland, Shetland; and including Haven, Oxa, Trondray, and several other small isles, some of them four miles distant and inhabited by fishermen. The united parishes are about ten miles in length and five in breadth, but so deeply are they indented by the sea, that no part of the interior lies more than two miles from it. The soil, though fertile, is far from productive, agriculture being but little attended to. There are several lochs of fresh water, and in one of them is a verdant island called Lawting, where justice used to be administered, and to which access is afforded by a range of immense stepping-stones that could not have been placed in the position they occupy without incurring extraordinary exertion and expense. The bays of Laxfirth and Scalloway form fine harbours, and on the latter are the remains of a castle, built by the Earl of Orkney in 1601, and an ancient village, both bearing the name of the bay. In Laxfirth there is an abundance of salmon, and off the coast is a recently discovered cod-bank upon which there is a very productive fishery, and to which the increase of the population in Tingwall is mainly attributable. The living is in the presbytery of Shetland and synod of Orkney; patron, Lord Dundas. Here are two churches distant about three miles from each other. This remote parish is celebrated in the ecclesiastical annals of Scotland for its process of augmentation, on the decision of which depended the incomes of the Scottish clergy, in whose favour it was ultimately settled by the house of peers.

TINTAGELL, co. Cornwall.

P. T. Bossiney (230) 1 m. W.
Pop. with Bossiney 577.

A parish in the hundred of Lesnewth, situated near the Bristol Channel; living, a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Cornwall and diocese of Exeter; valued in K. B. at 8*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*; patrons, the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, which is dedicated to St. Simphorian, contains a curious Norman font. Partly on a stupendous crag, almost surrounded by the sea, and partly on the mainland, are the venerable remains of King Arthur's Castle, separated by an immense chasm, 300 feet deep, over which there was formerly a drawbridge. The ruins consist of huge scattered masses, and of walls pierced with loopholes, for discharging arrows. Till within a few years of the reign of Elizabeth, this fortress had a governor, and was used as a state prison for the duchy of Cornwall. Richard, Earl of Cornwall, here entertained his nephew, David, Prince of Wales, during the rebellion of the latter against Henry III.

TINTERN, or KINNEAGH, co. Wexford, Leinster, I.

P. T. Feathard Wex (108) 3 m. N. Pop. 5575.
Fair, March 21; May 12; and Sept. 21.

A village and parish in the barony of Shelburne, situated upon the sea-coast; living, an inappropriate curacy, united with those of Owenduffe and Clonmines, in the diocese of Ferns and archdiocese of Dublin; patron, C. Coclough, Esq. Here are a parish church and two Roman Catholic chapels. The poor-school consists of nearly 700 children, and is endowed by the Coclough family, whose noble seat is at this place. William, Earl of Pembroke, being in imminent peril at sea, vowed that he would found an abbey on that place where he should arrive in safety; this was the bay of Tintern. He erected this abbey, in conformity with his vow, dedicated it to the Virgin Mary, and brought hither a number of Cistercian monks, from Tintern Abbey, in Monmouthshire, to whom he granted extensive possessions near the river Bann.

A parish in the hundred of Tintinhull, situated near the navigable river Ivel; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Wells and diocese of Bath and Wells; valued in K. B. 9*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 60*l.*; church ded. to St. Margaret; patron (1829) the Right Hon. W. Arbuthnot.

TINTWISTLE, or TINGETWISSEL, co. Pal. of Chester.

P. T. Stockport (176) 9 m. NE & E. Pop. 1580. Fairs, May 2 and Nov. 1, for cattle.

A township in the parish of Mottram, in Longden Dale and hundred of Macclesfield, situated on an acclivity rising from the western bank of the river Etheron; it was anciently a borough, and had a court-leet, but is now only a member of the lordship of Mottram, in Longden Dale. The inhabitants are principally employed in the manufacture of cotton and woollen goods, and at the stone-quarries in the vicinity. Here is a chapel for Calvinistic Methodists, with a school, in which about 400 children are instructed.

TINWALD shire of Dumfries, S.

P. T. Dumfries (71½) 5 m. NE. Pop. 1248.

A parish, to which the ancient parish of Trailflat was united in 1650. They are together six miles in length by four in breadth, the surface exhibiting a gradual rise from the eastern and western extremities to the centre, and there forming a low ridge, extending from north to south. The soil for the most part is arable, and very productive. Living in the presbytery and synod of Dumfries; patron, the Marquis of Queensbury. The church was rebuilt in 1763. In this parish is Anisfield House, a seat of the Earl of Wemyss, anciently the baronial castle and residence of the family of Charteris; its lofty and picturesque tower still remains on the south-west of the present dwelling-house. The adjacent village of the same name was erected into a burgh of barony by Charles I., with a weekly market and an annual fair; it stands on a branch of the great Roman road from Burnswark, terminating in the parish of Dunseore, and near it are vestiges of an old castellum. On Barsell Hill, about a mile from the church, are traces of a British fortification. Lochar Moss, in which a variety of ancient warlike weapons and culinary utensils have been found, appears to have been at some very remote period no other than an inlet of the sea; in corroboration of which we find it stated by a Spanish historian that the Tinwald Isles formed the best harbour in Scotland.

TINWELL, co. Rutland.

P. T. Stamford (89) 2 m. WSW.

Pop. with Ingthorpe hamlet 245.

A parish in the hundred of East, situated on the north bank of the Welland; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough; valued in K. B. 12*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.*; patron (1829) the Marquis of Exeter. The church, which is ded. to All Saints, is a very ancient edifice. Here is a small endowment for the instruction of children.

TIPNOAK, co. Essex.

Pop. 3058.

A hundred situated in the rape of Bramber, and near the centre of the county, containing three parishes.

TIPPER, co. Killdare, Leinster, I.

P. T. Naas (19). Pop. 652.

A parish in the barony of North Naas; living, a rectory and corps of a prebend in the diocese of Dublin and Glendalough and archdiocese of Dublin; valued in K. B. 15*l.* 4*s.* 7½*d.*; patron, the Archbishop.

TIPPERARY, County of, Munster, I.

N to S 73½ m. E to W 39½ m. No. of acres 882,398. Baronies 11. Cities 1. Boroughs 1. Market-towns 7. Parishes 186. Pop. 346,896. Memb. of Pt. 4. Dioceses of Cashel and Emly. Archdiocese of Cashel.

One of the six counties included in the province of Munster, as well as being one of the most comprehensive in Ireland. Its western boundary is washed by the noble river Shannon; and touched by part of the county of Limerick. Waterford and Cork counties form its southern limit; the Queen's County and Killkenny confine it on the east, while the King's County forms the boundary of its narrow dimensions it assumes upon the north. Though occupied by several mountain ranges, yet so much does the great area of level country exceed the elevated grounds, that Tipperary may be deemed a level district. The south-eastern angle is encumbered by the Sliebh-na-mann Mountain. The dreary hills of Knock-mele-down separate Waterford from Tipperary, and stand on an extensive base. The Galtees, a remarkable chain, arise near Caher, and extend to the boundaries of Limerick and Cork; and the Sliebh-na-much interpose between these and the vicinity of the town of Tipperary. The most extensive mountainous area is situated on the north-west of the county adjoining Limerick, and intercepting the baronies of Upper and Lower Ormond. In these are comprehended the conspicuous group called the Keapers, and the Silver-mine Mountains. With the exception of these rugged regions, and 36,025 acres of bog, the surface and soil are not only fair and fruitful, but several districts are distinguished by their singular fertility. The remarkable productiveness of the vicinities of Cashel and Tipperary has obtained for them the epithet of the Golden Vale. The rivers of this county though small in number, are truly important in their character. The noble Shannon leaves the baronies of Ormond, and the Suir, takes its rise in Benduff Mountain, near to Roscrea, pursuing a southern direction, till obstructed by the Waterford Mountain, it is necessitated to alter its course; thence turning eastward it flows in a current broad and deep, along the foot of these hills, passes beneath the bridges of Clonmel and Canick, and after receiving the tributary waters of the Nore and Barrow, pours its great flood into the ocean, in Waterford haven, after a course both graceful and salutary, 100 miles in extent. The Silver-mines and some minor streams might be added to the catalogue of county rivers, but they seem eclipsed by the greatness of their rivals, which appear to supersede the necessity of their aid in all objects, either of commerce or agriculture. The Shannon affords fish in vast quantities, salmon, pike, perch, eels, and the singular species called the Gillaroo trout. The Suir is also well supplied with fish of a similar description, the Gillaroo trout excepted, which does not appear to be taken in lakes or rivers eastward of the Shannon. Wheat is grown generally, but more especially in the rich and warm southern baronies. But this county is more remarkable for the excellence of its cattle, and sweetness of its sheep-walks, than for the number of its corn-fields. Pigs are reared here in amazing numbers, and conveyed down the Suir to the Waterford market, whither the agricultural produce of the county generally is conveyed for exportation. The soil may be said to recline on limestone, in some places on limestone gravel, and to this circumstance its fecundity may rationally be attributed. No granite appears here. Coals of the non-flaming, or stone kind, are raised near Killenaule. The field may be considered a continuation of the Leinster coal district, being separated from it by a secondary bed of limestone merely. Mines of lead have been worked in a few places; those at Silvermines were once productive, yielding a large percentage of silver; but the operations were precarious and difficult. It is contemplated to open the old works, and make another experiment. The civil division comprehends the baronies of Clanwilliam, Eliogarty, East Iffa and Offa, West Iffa and Offa, Ikerin, Killucmanagh, Middlethird, Lower Ormond, Upper Ormond, Owney and Arra, and Sliebhardsagh. In these the chief places are Cashel, an ancient city and residence of the Archbishop; Clonmel the assizes-town, and also a borough; Carrick-on-Suir, a prosperous and well circumstanced town; Roscrea, Nenagh, Caher, a rapidly improving place; Thurles, Feathard, Tipperary, Emly, an ancient city, though now a small town; Templemore, Clogheen, Newport, Killenaule, Littleton, and New Birmingham. Agriculture constitutes the principal occupation of the inhabitants, and the sale of cattle supplies their chief revenue. The coals raised here are not sufficient for the consumption of the inhabitants, who draw extensive supplies of fuel from the bogs southward of Roscrea and elsewhere. Some woollens are manufactured and stockings knitted, both for home consumption: ratteens are manufactured at Carrick-on-Suir, for the public market, besides woollens and cottons at Clonmel. That reach of the Shannon which flows by this county is navigable, and facilitates the traffic with Limerick, and the river Suir opens a valuable inland navigation to the greater part of the county, admitting large barges as far up as the town of Clonmel. A plan of a railway from Waterford to Limerick, passing through the southern part of this county, was submitted to a company of subscribers, by the late A. Nimmo, Esq., a name highly appreciated in the scientific world. Tipperary was anciently a palatinate, under the jurisdiction of the Dukes of Ormond, a power which ceased, and was suppressed after the attainder of the duke, and in the reign of George I. Amongst the ancient families may be enumerated the O'Carrolls, Butlers, O'Briens, M'Egans, O'Hickeys, O'Kearnys, and Fitzgibbons. The city of Cashel and the borough of Clonmel return one member each to the Imperial Parliament, and the county returns two.

TIPPERARY, co. Tipperary, Munster, I.

Dublin 127 m. SW. Pop. of Pa. 1661. Of To. 6542. Fairs, April 5 and July 5; Oct. 10 and Dec. 10.

A post and fair town, extending into the parishes of Killshane, Curdangan, and Tipperary, all which are within the barony of Clanwilliam. The living is an entire rectory, united with Templenoe, Clonbulla, and Killfeacle, in the diocese and archdiocese of Cashel; valued in K. B. 1*l.* 1*s.*; and, by commutation for tithes, 27*6l.* 18*s.* 5½*d.* annually. Here are both a church and parsonage; patron, the Archbishop. Area of parish, 3999 acres of land. Here is a poor-school of twenty-one boys, also a school, on the foundation of Erasmus Smith. A monastery was founded here in the reign of King Henry III., for Eremites following the rule of St. Augustin.

TIPPERKIVEN, co. Dublin, Leinster, I.

P. T. Blessington (18) m. Pop. 796.

A parish of the barony of Uppercross, but detached from Dublin county, and insulated by those of Wicklow and Killdare. The living is a rectory and corps of a prebend, in the diocese of Dublin and Glendalough and archdiocese of Dublin, in two portions, one valued at 4*l.* 18*s.* 5¼*d.*, the other at 3*l.* 10*s.* 10¼*d.*, and both, by commutation for tithes, at 127*l.* 10*s.* annually; patron, the Archbishop.

TIPTON, or TIBBINGTON, co. Stafford.

P. T. Wednesbury (117) 3 m. WSW. Pop. 11,546.

A parish in the south division of the hundred of Offlow, situated near the source of the river Trent, and has risen from an inconsiderable village to its present extent and importance from the apparently exhaustless mines of coal and ironstone with which it abounds; the former is of superior quality, and is found in strata of thirty feet in thickness, and the latter is wrought to a very considerable extent; there are not less than nine forges, with blast furnaces, for the manufacture of pig-iron, of which, more than seventy tons are made weekly. There are also large manufactories for tinned plates, soap, muriatic potash, and red lead; and all kinds of nails, linges, fenders, fire-irons, and boilers for steam-engines, are manufactured to a great extent. Its trade is greatly facilitated by the Birmingham Canal; and several of its branches, which intersect the parish, and by which a communication is established with almost all the principal towns in the kingdom. Officers, for the internal regulation of the parish, are annually appointed at the manorial court-leet. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Salop and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry; certified value 16*l.*; patron, the Prebendary of Pipa Minor, in Lichfield cathedral. The ancient church, which was dedicated to St. Martin, is now in ruins, and a commodious brick structure has been erected. Here is also a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists. Several national schools, in which more than 1000 children are instructed, are supported by means of benefactions; there are also Sunday-schools in connexion with the established church and the dissenting congregation.

TIRAGHRILL, co. Sligo, Connaught, I.

Pop. 24,800.

One of the seven baronies comprehended in the civil division of the county. It contains fifteen parishes, the town of Colooney, and the villages of Revastown, Gurtlowen, Ballintogher, Ballysadar, Tubberscanavin, and Ballydryhed.

TIRAWLEY, co. Mayo, Connaught, I.

Pop. 59,114.

The ninth of the baronies included in the civil division of the county. It comprehends sixteen parishes, the market-town of Ballina, and several hamlets. It was anciently called Hy-Firmalgaid, and contains part of Hy-Mornisg, the Auterii of Ptolemy. In this district was situated the Forest of Foelut, where the vision is said to have appeared to St. Patrick, just before his entering upon his Irish mission. The family of Cuff take the title of Baron from this place.

TIRENASCRAGH, co. Galway, Connaught, I.

P. T. Portumna (99) 3 m. NE. Pop. of Pa. 899. Of Vil. 153.

A village and parish in the barony of Longford, situated upon the river Shannon; living, a vicarage in the diocese of Clonfert and archdiocese of Tuam; valued in K. B. 6*s.* 8*d.*; and, by commutation for tithes, 71*l.* 1*s.* 6½*d.* annually. It is one of seven benefices constituting the union of Donaghda; patron, the Bishop.

TIR-YR-ABAD. See Llandulas.

TIRY, shire of Argyll, S.

Pop. of Island 4181. Of united Parish 5445.

An island and parish of the Hebrides, in the district of Mull, to the latter of which is annexed the ancient parish of Coll (which see), with the smaller island of Gunna, and several islets or holms in the sound of Coll. This island was anciently termed Rioghachd bar fo thuin, i. e. the kingdom whose summits are lower than the waves, which appellation, still familiar in the popular tales of the Hebrides, well describes its low situation, the waves being often seen from one shore, rising apparently above the level of the other; but the more modern name, Tiry, seems to be derived from Tir-i, i. e. the land of I or Iona, to the church of which it belonged in the time of St. Columba. It lies about sixteen miles to the westward of Mull, is eleven miles in length, averages two and a half in breadth, and contains 12,000 Scotch acres, a moiety of which is arable, and produces bear, black oats, potatoes, and lint. The surface is diversified with rocks, hillocks, and numerous small lakes, but no eminence rises higher than 250 feet above the sea; and in the centre is a beautiful plain, of about 1200 acres, across which the waves of the Atlantic frequently meet in boisterous weather, though the inhabitants have endeavoured to avert the evil consequences arising from such encroachments, by erecting barriers of stone and earth to repel them. The coast is rocky, and indented by several fine bays, of which Gott, the principal, affords excellent anchorage for ships of the larger class. The western point, termed the hill of Cean-Mharra, presents to the ocean a number of remarkable caverns, resorted to by vast flocks of aquatic fowl. There is a regular ferry, attended however with much danger, from breakers, shifting sands, and rapid currents, across the sound to Coll, which island is three miles distant, but to all appearance was, at a remote period, joined to that of Gunna, and the latter to this, so as to have formed only one island. From Coll another stated ferry communicates with Croig Harbour, in Mull. Granite, whinstone, ironstone, and limestone, are very abundant, and a species of the latter, quarried near the shore, is beautifully variegated, takes a fine polish, and answers every purpose of marble for ornamenting the interior of dwellings. The fisheries and the manufacture of kelp (from 200 to 300 tons annually) constantly employ the greater proportion of the islanders, with whom fuel is extremely scarce, there being neither wood or peat procured in the parish, excepting the roots and trunks of trees found, as in all the Hebrides, buried in the mosses. Here is a society's school. The living is in the presbytery of Mull and synod of Argyll; patron, the Crown. Besides the church, there are vestiges of several ancient chapels, cemeteries, crosses, &c., which originally formed portions of the patrimony of the celebrated monastery of Iona or Icolmkill. On various parts of the island are visible the remains of Duns, or Danish forts; and in one of the lakes there is an island, upon which are the ruins of an old castle approached by a drawbridge.

TISBURY, co. Wilts.

P. T. Hindon (94) 3½ m. SE. Pop. 2122.

A parish in the hundred of Dunworth; living, a vicarage with the curacy of East Hatch, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Salisbury; valued in K. B. 18*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 140*l.*; patron (1829) Mrs. R. Prevost. The church, which is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a very ancient and spacious edifice, in the Norman style of architecture, and contains numerous monuments of the Arundels of Wardour. Here is also a chapel for Independent Methodists. A small bequest is applied to teaching poor children. Wardour Castle, the seat of the noble family of Arundel, stands on an eminence, surrounded by a lawn and thick woods; it is built of freestone, and consists of a centre and two wings, and the entrance facing the north is ornamented with pilaster and half columns of the Corinthian order. At a short distance from this mansion are the venerable ruins of the ancient castle, which is of very remote origin, and was rendered unfit for habitation by the two sieges it sustained in the reign of Charles I.; the first was against a detachment of the parliamentary forces, 1300 strong, by a garrison of only twenty-five men, under the command of the Lady Blanch Arundel, who bravely defended it during five days, and at last surrendered upon the most honourable terms; it was afterwards besieged by the royalist army, under Lord Arundel, and demolished. Sir Nicholas Hyde, Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and Lord Treasurer in the reign of James I., was born in the ancient castle, about the year 1570.

TISSINGTON, co. Derby.

P. T. Ashborne (139) $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. N. Pop. 496.

A parish in the wapentake of Wirksworth; living, a curacy in the archdeaconry of Derby and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 40*l.*; church ded. to St. Mary; patron (1829) Sir H. Fitzherbert, Bart. Two small bequests are applied in teaching poor children.

TISTED, EAST, co. Southampton.

P. T. Alton (47) 5 m. S b W.
Pop. with Rotherfield tithing 278.

A parish in the hundred of Selbourne, Alton, north division; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Winchester; valued in K. B. 16*l.*; church ded. to St. James; patron (1829) James Scott, Esq. Here is an endowed school, in which fourteen children are instructed.

TISTED, WEST, co. Southampton.

P. T. New Alresford (57) 5 m. SE b E.
Pop. 206.

A parish in the hundred of Bishop's Sutton, Alton, north division; living, a donative, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Winchester, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 60*l.*; patron, Magdalen College, Oxford.

TITCHFIELD, or TICHFIELD, co. Southampton.

London 78 m. Pop. 3528. M. D. Frid. Fairs, March 9 and May 14, for toys; Sept. 25, for hiring servants; and Dec. 7.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Tichbourne, Portsdown division. It is pleasantly situated at the mouth of Southampton Water, near the Titchfield river, which is navigable for small vessels. The town is small, but well built, and inhabited by many respectable families. A court-baron is held twice a-year, and a court-leet annually, the latter having jurisdiction in all pleas of debt under 40*s.* The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Winchester; valued in K. B. 6*l.* 17*s.* 3*d.*; patron (1829) P. Delme, Esq. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter, is a spacious and ancient structure, and contains some interesting monuments. Here is a meeting-house for Independents. Twelve poor boys and twelve poor girls are educated in the charity-school, and the former are annually clothed; and twelve poor children are instructed by means of a bequest. Near the town are the ruins of Titchfield House, erected by the first Earl of Southampton, on the site, and with the materials, of an abbey for Premonstratensian canons, founded in 1231. This mansion is now in a very dilapidated state, the entrance gateway being the principal part standing; the old stables still remain, and are worthy of notice.

Charles I., was concealed in this mansion after his escape from Hampton Court, in 1647, and again, previously to resigning himself to Colonel Hammond, who conducted him to Carisbrooke Castle. Titchfield gives title of Marquis to Bentinck, Duke of Portland.

TITCHWELL, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Burnham Westgate (117) 5 m. W b N.

TIVERTON, co. Devon.

Pop. 9460.

A hundred situated at the north-east side of the county, containing five parishes, including the borough of Tiverton, which forms the centre.

TIVERTON, co. Devon.

London 162 m. W b S. Pop. 8631. M. D. Tues. and Sat., the latter is very small; and on the second Tues. in every month, a large cattle-market. Fairs, 2d Tues. after Whit-Sund.; Sept. 29. If it falls on Sund. it is then kept the Tues. following. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of Tiverton, but having separate jurisdiction. It is a place of considerable antiquity, and was anciently called Twyford-town, and Two-ford-ton, from its situation between the rivers Exe and Loman. The town is pleasantly situated on an eminence, and consists of several well-paved streets. The Exe is crossed by two stone bridges, from one of which is a fine view of the castle and church. The principal public buildings consist of the corn-market and town-hall, a spacious market-house, erected in 1830; and the bridewell, a commodious edifice, rebuilt about the end of the last century; there is also a subscription reading-room, a neat theatre, and assembly-rooms. The wool trade was introduced here in 1353, and in 1500 the manufacture of baizes, plain cloths, kerseys, and serges, was extensively carried on; but in 1591 its prosperity was greatly checked by the plague, which destroyed nearly 600 of the inhabitants; and in 1598 the town was almost wholly destroyed by fire; notwithstanding these calamities, Tiverton was considered in 1612 the chief manufacturing town in the west of England; but about this period a second conflagration destroyed nearly all the property of the inhabitants. In 1731 a third dreadful fire, in a few hours, destroyed nearly 300 houses, besides other buildings. The introduction of Norwich stuffs, in 1745, occasioned the decline of the woollen trade, which was entirely superseded in 1815 by the patent net manufacture, which, together with that of lace, now constitutes the principal employment of the inhabitants. Tiverton was first incorporated by a charter from James I.; but under a second, granted by George I., the government of the town is vested in a mayor, twelve capital burgesses, and twelve assistants, with a recorder and town-clerk; the mayor, recorder, and town-clerk are annually elected by the corporation, on the Tuesday following St. Bartholomew's day; the mayor, recorder, and late mayor, who are justices of the peace, with exclusive jurisdiction, hold a quarterly court of session, and a court of record for all pleas not exceeding 100*l.* This borough sends two members to Parliament, the right of election being exclusively in the members of the corporation; the mayor is the returning officer. The living, which is a rectory, is divided into the portions of Clare, Pitt, Tidcombe, and Priors, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Exeter; Clare portion valued in K. B. 27*l.*; patron (1829) the Rev. R. Spurway. Pitt portion, 36*l.*; patrons (1829) Sir J. Vyryan, Bart. and Representatives of the Rev. J. Nerot, alternately. Tidcombe portion, 27*l.*; patron (1829) the Rev. William Rayer. Priors portion, 10*l.*; patron, King's College, Cambridge. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter, is a venerable Gothic structure, containing several costly monuments; the altar-piece is a rich painting of the Deliverance of St. Peter from Prison. A handsome modern edifice, dedicated to St. George, has lately been erected as a chapel of ease, and each of the four portionists officiates in turn. There are meeting-houses for Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school, founded and endowed by Peter Blundell, a rich clothier of this town, is a venerable stone edifice; the north front is cased with Purbeck marble, and separated into three parts by two arched stone porches; it sends six students to either of the universities, and one to Baliol College, Oxford; there are also two exhibitions of 30*l.* per annum each, besides additional scholarships. The majority of the boys educated are boarders, and the number has varied considerably at different times; the annual income is upwards of 900*l.* The free English school was founded by Robert Comyn, otherwise Chilcott, in 1611, and 100 boys are instructed, all of whom pay a small quarterage. About 100 children of both sexes are instructed in the charity-school, which was originally founded by subscription, but has since been extensively endowed. The almshouses, with a chapel attached, for nine poor men, were founded by John Greenway in 1529. The western almshouse, which has also a small chapel for eight poor men, was founded by John Waldren in 1579; and another for six aged women, by George Slee, in 1613. Sixty-seven poor persons receive life annuities from a charitable fund, established by Mary Rice, in 1697. There are also numerous other charities for apprenticing poor children, and contributing in various ways to the comfort of the poor. Here are some few remains of the ancient castle, erected in 1106, by Rivers, Earl of Devon, which continued for many ages the head of the barony. During the civil wars, in the reign of Charles I., this fortress was garrisoned for the king; but after a slight siege, it was taken by a detachment from the army, commanded by General Fairfax. The ruins consist of parts of the boundary wall, with its flanking and angular towers, part of the grand entrance, and other fragments; its site, which occupies about an acre, is on a level with the churchyard, and overhangs the river. Tiverton gave birth to Mrs. Cowley, the celebrated dramatic authoress; and Bamfylde Moore Carew, the noted king of the beggars, was born at Bickleigh, about two miles from the town, and was educated in the free grammar-school.

Lat. 56. 36. 55 N. Lon. 5. 58. 52 W.
Pop. with Pa.

A seaport and post town in the parish of Kilninian, isle and district of Mull. It was founded in 1788, by the British Society for the Encouragement of Fisheries, who are proprietors of 2000 acres around the place, which consists of about 100 houses, chiefly built of stone, and covered with slate. A custom-house and a general post-office were established here in 1791, and subsequently a sheriff substitute court was erected, for the more regular administration of justice. The harbour is capacious, and secured from the Atlantic Ocean by the Isle of Calve, and is in other respects admirably adapted for a fishing-station, besides being situated in the track of vessels passing from the western coast of Britain to the northern parts of Europe. It has also an easy and constant communication with Liverpool, the Clyde, and the fishing-lochs of Scotland. Several merchants have established warehouses here; and many decked vessels, besides numerous open boats, belong to the port. Boat-building and coopering is carried on with advantage; and an immense quantity of salt is stored here for supplying the busses and boats employed in the fisheries. The Society for Propagating Christian Knowledge have a school here. A new district church, built under the provisions of the Highland Church Act, was completed at this place in March, 1828.

A hamlet in the parish of Seale and hundred of Farnham.

TONGLAND, stewardry of Kirkcudbright, S.

P. T. Kirkcudbright (98½) 2 m. N. Pop. 890.

A parish of a triangular figure, eight miles in length, and embraced by the rivers Dee and Tarff, the former bounding it on the east, and the latter on the west; at the northern extremity its breadth is about three miles and a-half, whence it gradually decreases till it terminates in a point on the south, where the two streams unite and form a harbour capable of receiving ships of 200 tons burden. There are two bridges over the Dee, one of two arches south of the church, and near a fine cataract celebrated in Montgomery's beautiful poem of "The Cherry and the Slac;" the other of seven arches, the centre one being 110 feet span, two miles above Kirkendbright. The Tarff is also crossed by two bridges, one of which is at its junction with the Dee, and the other on the great road between Carlisle and Port Patrick. The surface exhibits a mountainous ridge, stretching from north to south, gently sloping on either side towards the rich meadows on the banks of the rivers, and the soil is tolerably fertile. The living is in the presbytery of Kirkendbright and synod of Galloway; patron, the Crown. Adjoining the church are the ruins of a Premonstratensian priory, founded in the twelfth century by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, for monks brought from Cockersand in Lancashire. Cairns and other marks of antiquity, are to be met with in this parish.

TONGUE, shire of Sutherland, S.

Edinburgh 250 m. N b W. Pop. 1736.

A parish and village at which there is a general post-office. This extensive district, which stretches about eleven miles in every direction, includes the villages of Melness and Torrisdale, with the small isles of Ealan na Roan, Ealan na Coombe, and Rabbit Island, of which the first only is inhabited. The surface presents an alternation of pasture and dreary wastes, interspersed with rocks, peat-mosses, bogs, and stagnant pools, and is intersected by a semicircular range of mountains, the most noted of which are Knoc-Rheacadan Ben Laoghal, and Ben Hope; of these the two last form a considerable portion of Lord Reay's great forest, supposed to contain more than 2000 deer. Ben Laoghal is celebrated by the bards as the scene of Dermid's death, and is further remarkable for being crowned with an ancient building termed the Druid's Castle; at its base is a loch of the same name, four miles in extent, whence the river Torrisdale has its source and falls into the bay so called at the village of Torrisdale, where its channel is sixty feet wide and thirteen deep. Around the coast, which is lofty, rocky, and indented by the bay of Tongue, into which flows the smaller river Rhians, are several fishing-creeks; and in one of these, termed Port Vaisgaig, are quarries of gray slate and flagstone, with which the adjacent country is supplied by boats employed for the purpose. The noted promontories of Torrisdale and Whiting Head are in this parish, and among the several natural excavations on the sea-shore is Uaidhe Mhor Fhraisgill, i.e. "The great cave of Fraisgill;" it is twenty feet wide at the opening, half a mile in depth, and affords shelter to numerous seals. Salmon abounds in the rivers, and cod, ling, haddock, skate, &c. are plentiful off the coast. Moss-fir, which produces a strong, but not clear, light is here used as candles, and Gaelic is still the language of the natives. Tongue originally formed part of the parish of Durness, but was made a distinct parish in 1724.

The living is in the presbytery of Tongue and synod of Sutherland and Caithness; patron, the Crown. Near the church is the parochial grammar-school, with a salary of 300 merks, a rood of land, and a commodious school-room. Cairns and old circular buildings are visible in many places; and at Melness are the ruins of a castle termed Dun Bhuidh, i.e. "The Yellow Heap," the erection of which is ascribed to Dornadilla, King of the Scots. On the west side of the bay of Tongue is seated the noble mansion of Lord Reay, whose ancestors, the Mackays, expelled the Danes hence; and in 1746 attacked a French sloop of war in Drimna Coub with great gallantry and success.

TOOLEY, co. Leicester.

P. T. Hinckley (99) 5 m. NE b N.
Pop. with Pa.

A township in the parish of Peekleton and hundred of Sparkenhoe.

TOOME, co. Antrim, Ulster, I.

Pop. 41,959.

One of the baronial divisions of the county. It is distinguished into upper and lower sections, comprehends eight parishes, the towns of Portglenone, Aghogill, Ballymena, and Randalstown, with the villages of Ballykenedy, Cullybacky, Galgorm, and Toome. TOOME, or TOOMEBRIDGE, co. Antrim, Ulster, I.

Dublin 130 m. N b W. Pop. 166.
Fairs, March 28 and December 4.

A village in the parish of Duncen and half barony of Upper Toome, situated upon the channel of communication between Lough Beg and Lough Neagh, called the Lower Bann, which is here crossed by a stone bridge of nine arches, built at the expense of Lord O'Neil. There is a spacious inn here, and on the Derry side stand the ruins of a castle erected for the defence of the pass on the river. It was taken by the titular Bishop of Clogher in 1650, and retaken by Colonel Venables. Here is a valuable eel-fishery, the property of the Marquis of Donegal.

TOOMVARA, or TEMPLEDOWNY, co. Tipperary, Munster, I.

P. T. Moneygall (84). Pop. 436.
Fairs, Whit-Mond. and Nov. 4.

A village and parish in the barony of Upper Ormond; living, an entire rectory, united with Ballymacky, Ballygibbon, and Aghnameadle, constituting therewith the corps of the chancellorship in the diocese of Killaloe and archdiocese of Cashel; valued in K. B. 6*l*. Toomvara, separately, is valued, by commutation for tithes, 83*l*. 1*s*. 6½*d*. annually; patron, the Bishop of the diocese. Here are the ruins of a preceptory of Knights Templars, and adjacent to the village stand two ancient castles, called Knoekane and Blane.

TOOTING BEC, or UPPER, co. Surrey.

London 7 m. SSW. Pop. with Pa.

A hamlet in the parish of Streatham and hundred of Brixton, situated between two hills. On the road between Tooting and Balham Hill, is a chapel of ease erected by the inhabitants of Upper and Lower Tooting at the expense of nearly 7000*l*. Two schools, erected by subscription, in which eighty boys and sixty girls are instructed, are supported by voluntary contributions.

TOOTING, GRAVENEY, or LOWER, co. Surrey.

London 7 m. SSW. Pop. 1863.

A parish in the hundred of Brixton, situated on the road from London to Worthing, and consists of two streets. The air is considered very salubrious, and in the vicinity are several elegant villas. Assemblies are occasionally held during the winter months. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Surrey and diocese of Winchester; valued in K. B. 8*l*. 8*s*. 6½*d*.; patron (1829) J. B. Wilson, Esq. The church, which is dedicated to St. Nicholas, is an ancient structure with a circular tower and wooden spire; but there has recently been erected a new Gothic church, of light and elegant architecture, which can accommodate 1000 auditors; architect, Mr. Atkinson. Here are also chapels for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. The school, in which fifty-seven boys and forty-seven girls are instructed, and thirty of the latter clothed, is endowed and further supported by voluntary subscription. There is also a small bequest for apprenticing poor children.

TOPCLIFFE, N. R. co. York.

P. T. Thirsk (217) 5½ m. SSW.
Pop. of Pa. 2540. Of To. 659.

A parish and township, partly in the liberty of St. Peter of York, partly in the wapentake of Birdforth, and partly in that of Halikeld; living, a vicarage and a peculiar of the Dean and Chapter of York; valued in K. B. 19*l*. 19*s*. 2*d*.; patrons, the Dean and Chapter of York. The church, which is dedicated to St. Columb, is a very ancient structure. Here is a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school has an annual income of 70*l*., for which thirty boys are educated. Some slight remains are still visible of the ancient mansion of the Percy family, called Maiden's Bower, in which Henry, the fourth Earl of Northumberland, was murdered by the populace for enforcing a tax imposed in the reign of Henry VIII.; and in which Thomas, the fifth earl, who was beheaded at York, had previously formed a conspiracy against Queen Elizabeth. Charles I. was confined in this mansion, and the sum of 200,000*l*. for giving him up to the parliament was here paid to the Scottish commissioners.

TOPCROFT, co. Norfolk.

P. T. St. Mary Stratton (100) 5 m. E b S.
Pop. 420.

A parish in the hundred of Loddon; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B.

10*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*.; church ded. to St. Margaret; patron, the Bishop of Norwich.

Pop. 928.

A parish in the hundred of Hinckford; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Middlesex and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 26*l*.; patron, the King. The church which is dedicated to St. Margaret, contains some curious ancient monuments. Here is a small bequest for teaching poor children.

TOPSHAM, co. Devon.

London 170 m. WSW. Pop. 3156.
M. D. Sat. Fair, 1st Wed. in Aug.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Wonford, situated near the influx of the river Exe into the sea; it is considered as the port of Exeter, as all large vessels here take in and discharge their cargoes: it is also the station of the officers of the customs and excise. The town consists of several good streets, the houses are well built, and on the strand, which is the most pleasant, and commands an extensive and beautiful prospect, are some respectable residences, with gardens extending to the water's edge. The quay, built about 1313 by Hugh Courtenay, was purchased by the chamber of Exeter in 1778; it is spacious and convenient, and is capable of receiving vessels of 200 tons burden. Many of the inhabitants are employed in ship-building and the manufacture of paper, sacking, ropes, and twine; and the coal and timber trades are rather extensively carried on; anchors and chain cables are also wrought here, but the prosperity of the town chiefly depends on the foreign and coasting trade. The living is a donative in the archdeaconry and diocese of Exeter; valued in K. B. 33*l*. 6*s*. 8*d*.; ann. val. P. R. 120*l*.; church ded. to St. Margaret; patrons, the Dean and Chapter of Exeter. Here are also chapels for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. Various bequests, producing an annual income of 30*l*., are paid to the national school for the education of ten boys; this school contains about sixty boys and fifty girls, and is further supported by subscription. During the contest between Charles and the Parliament, the Earl of Warwick brought some ships up the river Exe, and took possession of a small fort here, but the vessels being left upon the sands on the ebbing of the tide, two were taken and one burnt by the army of Fairfax, who remained here some time.

TOR, BRYAN, co. Devon.

P. T. Abbot's Newton (188) 4 m. SW b S.
Pop. 277.

A parish in the hundred of Haytor; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Totness and diocese of Exeter; valued in K. B. 20*l*. 14*s*. 7*d*.; church ded. to the Holy Trinity; patron (1829) C. Wolston, Esq.

TOR MOHAM, or MOHUN, co. Devon.

P. T. Torbay (195) 2½ m. W. Pop. 1925.

A parish in the hundred of Haytor; living, a curacy, with that of Cockington, in the archdeaconry of Totness and diocese of Exeter, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 125*l*; patron (1829) the Rev. Roger Mallock. The church contains an elegant wooden screen and an ancient stone font.

TORBAY, or TOR QUAY, co. Devon.

London 195 m. WSW. Pop. with Pa.
M. D. Tues. and Fri. Fair, Easter.

A market-town and chapelry in the parish of Tor Moham and hundred of Haytor. It was formerly only a small fishing-hamlet, but is now a pleasant and fashionable watering-place, situated in the most northerly cove of Torbay, and completely sheltered on the north, east, and west sides, by very lofty hills, on the declivities of which are detached houses and terraces, some of them very handsome buildings. The chief part of the town is built on the strand, and consists of neat and comfortable residences, chiefly lodging-houses: there are also two good hotels, warm and cold baths, and a library and news-room. The first improvement of the town was the erection of a pier, began in 1804 and completed in 1807; another pier has since been constructed, forming a secure basin 500 feet long and 300 feet broad. An annual regatta takes place in August, which is well attended; and the assembly-room, erected in 1826, is much frequented during the season, which is from September to May. In the winter the town is usually very full of company, as the salubrity and mildness of the air renders it a most desirable residence for persons of a consumptive habit. The town has a weekly communication by water with London; several coasting-vessels are employed for the importation of coal, and some of the inhabitants are occupied in the Newfoundland trade. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Totness and diocese of Exeter, not in charge; patron, the Curate of Tor Moham and Cockington. The chapel is a handsome modern edifice. Here are also meeting-houses for Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists. The national school is supported by voluntary contributions. In the neighbouring cliffs are several curious fissures or openings, the most remarkable is that called Kent's Hole, which is of extraordinary magnitude, comprising numerous caves of various elevations, to which are several openings, one of them ninety-three feet deep, 100 wide, and thirty feet high, containing many interesting specimens, both stalactital and organic, and fossil remains of several animals. Here are some remains of a monastery of Premonstratensian canons, founded by William de Brewer, in the reign of King John, and which was considered to be the richest of that order in England; the abbey was most beautifully situated, and the remains of the church, the chapter-house, and a gateway, evince its former magnificence: the old refectory has been converted into a Roman Catholic chapel. Tor Abbey is a modern mansion, finely situated, commanding an interesting prospect of the Tor Bay, and the rocky tors in the vicinity.

TORBOLTON, shire of Ayr, S.

P. T. Mauchline (62½) 4 m. W. Pop. 2175.

A parish and village in the district of Kyle, the latter of which is a well-built place, and contains two freemasons' lodges. The parish is about eight miles in length, and six in breadth; and though the surface is very unequal, being diversified with hills, tracts of heath, and marshy grounds, the greater part is either cultivated or converted into dairy farms. Living in the presbytery of Ayr and synod of Glasgow and Ayr; patron, the Earl of Eglintoun, whose elegant seat, Coilsfield, is adorned with fine plantations. Near it are the ruins of the monastery of Feale, formerly a cell to the Clugniac abbey of Paisley, and founded in 1252 by John de Graham, Lord of Torbolton; there is a stone in the neighbourhood which is held in great veneration, as the monument of old King Coil. In this parish also are the two fine mansions of Enterkine and Smithstone.

TORKINGTON, co. Pal. of Chester.

P. T. Stockport (176) 3 m. SE. Pop. 293.

A township in the parish of Stockport and hundred of Macclesfield.

TORKSEY, co. Lincoln.

P. T. Gainsborough (149) 7 m. S b E.
Pop. with Harwick 267.

A parish in the west division of the wapentake of Lawress, parts of Lindsey, situated at the junction of the Fosse Dyke with the river Trent; living, a curacy, with that of Brampton, in the archdeaconry of Stowe and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 5*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*.; ann. val. P. R. 45*l*.; church ded. to St. Peter; patron (1829) R. Davers, Esq. Here was formerly a priory of black canons, founded by King John.

TORLETON, or TARLETON, co. Gloucester.

P. T. Cirencester (89) 5½ m. W b S.
Pop. with Pas.

A hamlet partly in the parish of Coates, and partly in that of Rodmarton, and hundred of Longtree. Here was formerly a chapel, which is now in ruins.

TORMARTON, co. Gloucester.

P. T. Chipping Sodbury (108) 4 m. SE b E.
Pop. 320.

A parish in the lower division of the hundred of Grimbald's Ash; living, a rectory, with the curacies of Acton, Turville, and West Littleton, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Gloucester; valued in K. B. 27*l*.; church ded. to St. Mary; patron (1829) N. Castleton, Esq.

TOROGAY, shire of Inverness, S.

A small island of the Hebrides, in the parish and sound of Harris.

TOROSAY, shire of Argyll, S.

Achnacraig (132) 16 m. NW.
P. T. Aros (150) 2 m. SE. Pop. 2288.
Fair, Aug. 21, for horses.

A parish, in the island and district of Mull, stretching twelve miles along the sound of Mull, and indented by many bays, affording anchorage for small vessels. Here are regular ferries to Morvern, Lismore, Lorn, and other places on the mainland. The face of the country is rugged, and rises into barren mountains, the loftiest of which, Benmore and Bentaluidh, are composed of volcanic matter, but there are excellent sheep-pastures in other parts of the parish, as well as several woods of birch. A considerable quantity of kelp is annually manufactured here. The living is in the presbytery of Mull and synod of Argyll; patron, the Duke of Argyll. Besides the church, there is another place of worship for the better accommodation of the inhabitants of so extensive a district. There are also two society's schools, each with a salary of 10*l.*, and a parochial school, with a stipend of 300 merks, and other advantages. Castle Duart, the ancient residence of the chieftains of clan Maclean, situated on the lofty promontory of Loch Bny, has long been converted into an outpost or barrack for a detachment of troops from the garrison of Fort William, for the better prevention of smuggling.

TORPENHOW, co. Cumberland.

P. T. Cockermouth (306) 8 m. NE b N.
Pop. of Pa. 961. Of To. with Whitrigg 256.

A parish and township in Allerdale ward below Darwent, situated on the south side of the Ellen river. Both lime and freestone are found here; and it is supposed that coal lies under the soil. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Carlisle; valued in K. B. 33*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; church ded. to St. Michael; patron, the Bishop of Carlisle. In the freeschool at Bothel, which was founded and endowed by subscription; eighty children are instructed; the annual income is about 50*l.*

TORPHICHEN, shire of Linlithgow, S.

P. T. Linlithgow (17) 4 m. S b W. Pop. 1197.

A parish and village, the latter of which is much decayed, and only remarkable for a powerful chalybeate spring, formerly of great note, and for its ancient hospital or preceptory, founded in 1120, by David I., for the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and which had the privilege of sanctuary; its remains consist of the choir and a square tower, exhibiting elegant specimens of the original splendour of the whole; and in the cemetery is a stone, from which, as a centre, four other stones are placed, at the distance of about a mile, one at each of the cardinal points, and all bearing St. John's cross. The parish, which includes also the thriving village of Blackridge, is nine miles in length by two and a half in breadth; and though the surface is hilly, it is mostly enclosed or planted, and tolerably fertile, particularly towards the eastern extremity, where the hill, Cairn Naple, rises 1498 feet above the sea; but on the west the soil gradually degenerates into a wet muir. There are some valuable coal-mines in this district, some rich veins of ironstone, and a great abundance of excellent freestone. The living is in the presbytery of Linlithgow and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale; patron, Lord Torphichen. The church is very ancient. Near Loch Coat are the ruins of an old baronial castle, still exhibiting marks of considerable grandeur; this lake, which is about one mile in circuit, abounds with pike, perch, and eels, and discharges its waters into the Avon. On Bondane Hill are vestiges of a military station; and about one mile to the eastward of the village are the remains of a Druidical temple.

TORPOINT, co. Cornwall.

P. T. Devonport (218) 3 m. W.
Pop. with Pa.

A chapelry in the parish of St. Anthony and south division of the hundred of East; it occupies a peninsula, formed by the river Tamer, the Lynher, and St. John's Lake, from which the inhabitants derive abundance of fish. In the vicinity are many respectable residences. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Cornwall and diocese of Exeter, not in charge; patron, the Vicar of St. Anthony. Here are chapels for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. In the freeschool ten children are instructed and clothed. The national school is supported by subscription.

TORRANCE, shire of Lanark, S.

Pop. with East Kilbride.

An ancient parish, in the Middle ward, united in 1589 to the parish of East Kilbride. The church is entirely demolished, but there are slight vestiges of the old castle, near the present mansion, which was built by a branch of the noble family of Hamilton in 1605.

TORRINGTON, BLACK, co. Devon.

P. T. Hatherleigh (201) 5 m. W b N.
Pop. 880.

A parish in the hundred of Black Torrington; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Totness and diocese of Exeter; valued in K. B. 22*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*; church ded. to St. Mary; patron (1829) the Rev. W. H. Cohan. Here is also a meeting-house for Baptists.

TORRINGTON, EAST, co. Lincoln.

P. T. Wragby (144) 4 m. NE b N. Pop. 89.

A parish in the west division of the wapentake of Wraggoc, parts of Lindsey; living, a dis. rectory with the vicarage of Wragby, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 7*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*; church ded. to St. Michael; patronage with Wragby vicarage.

TORRINGTON, GREAT, co. Devon.

London 194 m. W b S. Pop. 2538. M. D.
Sat. Fairs, May 4; July 5; and Oct. 10; for cattle.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Fremington, but having separate jurisdiction. It is finely situated on the summit and declivities of a lofty cliff, at the base of which flows the river Torridge, crossed by a bridge, connecting this parish with that of Little Torrington. The town consists of a market-place, surrounded by well-built houses and two long streets, variously disposed on the ridge and declivity, with gardens descending towards the river. The inhabitants are principally employed in the manufacture of gloves, great quantities of which are sent to London. The woollen trade, formerly considerable, is now reduced to the manufacture of a few serges, blankets, and some coarse cloth. Here are two tan-yards; and on the river is a large corn-mill. Coal, lime, and timber, are supplied by a canal, extending hence to the sea-docks, near Bideford, where the river becomes navigable for sloops. About two miles from the town the canal crosses the river by means of a noble aqueduct; and nearer the sea-lock it is interrupted by an inclined plane. The aqueduct and canal were undertaken at the sole expense of Lord Rolle, which is said to have exceeded 40,000*l*. Torrington formerly had the privilege of sending members to Parliament, but no return has been made since the reign of Henry VI. Its government is vested in a mayor, recorder, seven aldermen, and sixteen burgesses, who act under a charter, granted by Queen Mary. The corporation hold quarter-sessions, and a court of record every three weeks; the county magistrates meet weekly on Saturday. The town hall is a neat modern structure of brick and stone, with an arched basement. During the civil wars the parliamentary forces were here put to flight by Colonel Digby in 1643; and about three years afterwards the royalists were defeated by Fairfax, in a severe contest; but the general's intention of prolonging his stay was frustrated by the explosion of eighty barrels of gunpowder in the church during its occupation by 200 prisoners, all of whom, with the soldiers on guard, perished, and the edifice itself was destroyed. The living is a vicarage with the impropriation of Stow St. Giles, in the archdeaconry of Barnstaple and diocese of Exeter; valued in K. B. 20*l*.; ann. val. P. R. 130*l*.; patron, Christ Church, Oxford. The church, which is dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient structure, rebuilt about five years after its destruction by gunpowder in 1645. Here are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists. Also a grammar-school; a blue-coat-school, for the education of forty boys; a national school, supported by voluntary contributions; and an almshouse for eight poor persons. In 1340, Richard de Merton erected a castle here, the chapel of which existed till the latter part of the eighteenth century; the site of the ancient structure, which occupied the highest portion of the cliff, is now used as a bowling-green, and commands an extremely beautiful prospect. On the restoration of Charles II. General Monk was made Earl of Torrington. The town now gives title of Viscount to the Byng family.

TORRINGTON, LITTLE, co. Devon.

P. T. Great Torrington (194) 2 m. S.
Pop. 505.

A parish in the hundred of Shebbear; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Barnstaple and diocese of Exeter; valued in K. B. 14*l*. 18*s*. 11½*d*.; patrons (1829) Lord Rolle and others. At Toddiport, in this parish, connected with that of Great Torrington by a bridge over the Torridge, is an hospital for the poor of both parishes.

TORRINGTON, WEST, co. Lincoln.

P. T. Wragby (144) 4 m. NNE. Pop. 133.

A parish in the west division of the wapentake of Wraggoc, parts of Lindsey; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 4*l*.; church ded. to St. Mary; patron, the Bishop of Lincoln.

TORRISDALE, shire of Sutherland, S.

Pop. with Pa.

A fishing-village in the parish of Tongue, situated at the mouth of the river Torrisdale, which falls into the bay of the same name on the North Sea. Here is a very valuable salmon-fishery, but the other fisheries are neglected by the inhabitants, except for their own use. The cockles on this coast are of the finest quality.

TORRISHOLME, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Lancaster (240) 2 m. NW. Pop. 161.

A township in the parish of Lancaster and hundred of Lonsdale, south of the sands.

TORR'S LAKE, stewartry of Kirkcudbright, S.

P. T. Kirkcudbright (98) 2½ m. S.

A fine bay, called also Maixman's Lake, on the east side of Kirkcudbright Bay. Here upwards of 100 merchant-vessels of the largest class may ride in security, upon a soft clay bottom, with from fourteen to sixteen feet water at four hours' flood. There are convenient marks set up to guide mariners in the safe navigation of it.

TORRY, shire of Kincardine, S.

Pop. with Pa.

A small fishing-village in the parish of Nigg, situated on the estuary of the Dee. It has a tolerable harbour and a small pier, where vessels load with stones and discharge lime. In the upper part of the harbour lie the boats of the fishermen, who also act as pilots.

TORRY, shire of Perth, S.

P. T. Doune (41) 5½ m. NW. Pop. with Pa.

An ancient chapelry in the parish of Kilma-dock, formerly belonging to the monastery of St. Madonis. The site of the chapel is now overgrown with wood.

TORRYBURN, shire of Fife, S.

P. T. North Queensferry (10) 8½ m. WNW.
Pop. 1443.

A parish and village in the district of Dunfermline, the latter of which is pleasantly situated on the coast of the Firth of Forth, and has a good harbour; but its quay and pier, at a place called New Mills, are in bad condition. The manufacture of salt, also weaving to a small extent, are carried on here. The parish, which is five miles in length and two in breadth, is composed of the ancient parishes of Torry and Crombie, united early in the seventeenth century, when it acquired its present name from the burn which separates the two baronies. The soil is good and well cultivated; and coal is abundant, particularly on Preston Island, which lies in the Firth, opposite to Torryburn. Living in the presbytery of Dunfermline and synod of Fife; patron, Sir W. Erskine, Bart., whose elegant mansion, Torry House, is seated a little north of the village.

TORSA, shire of Argyll, S.

Pop. with Pa.

An island of the Hebrides in the parish of Kilbrandon and district of Lorn. It is composed chiefly of slate, of which there are several excellent quarries. Here is an ancient tower, called Dog Castle, which the great Macdonald used as a halfway residence in his journeys from Cantyre to his northern isles, and in which it was his custom to tarry until his revenue collected in the neighbourhood had been wholly expended.

TORTHORWALD, shire of Dumfries, S.

P. T. Dumfries (71½) 5½ m. NE b E.
Pop. 1265.

A parish and village, the latter of which was erected into a burgh of barony in 1473. The parish also includes the village of Roucan, and contains about 1400 acres, of which 900 lie in Lochar Moss. Bordering on this moss are very extensive meadows and pasturage, sometimes inundated by Lochar Water; and at the eastern extremity, the surface rises into lofty mountains. The soil in the centre of the parish is rich, well cultivated, and generally enclosed. Marl and peats are most abundant. Living, in the presbytery and synod of Dumfries; patron, the Marquis of Queensberry. The church was rebuilt in 1782. A Druidical temple and two circular camps are discernible here; and near the village are the ruins of an old castle, supposed to have been built by the ancient lords of Torthorwald, in the thirteenth century.

TORTINGTON, co. Sussex.

TOTNESS, co. Devon.

London 196 m. WSW. Pop. 3128. M. D. Sat. Fairs, 1st Tues. in every month, for cattle; Easter-Tues.; May 12 (great market); July 25; Oct. 28; for horses, sheep, and horned cattle. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of Coleridge, but having separate jurisdiction. It is a place of great antiquity, situated on a beautiful and salubrious spot, on the western bank of the river Dart, which is crossed by a handsome bridge of three arches, built in 1828. The town, which is neat and clean, consists chiefly of one long street, rising gradually from the foot of the bridge, till it reaches a considerable elevation near the site of its ancient castle, commanding a view of the winding stream and the surrounding country, which is extremely fine. It contains many good shops, substantial private residences, several libraries, a small theatre, and an assembly-room; and races are held annually on a good course. Owing to the improvement of the roads, the town is fast increasing, and many new houses have been lately erected on the Plymouth and other roads. Totness was formerly noted for its serge manufacture; and some weaving is still carried on, but the trade is on the decline. The river is navigable to the bridge, and during spring-tides vessels of 100 tons burden can come up to the quay, by which convenience the commercial intercourse with London and Plymouth is much facilitated. Cider is the chief article of exportation; coal, grain, and culm, are the principal imports. The town is plentifully supplied with all kinds of fish; and at a short distance above the bridge is a salmon weir. It was incorporated by charter of King John, and has had its privileges confirmed by several succeeding sovereigns. The corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, thirteen burgomasters, and twenty common-councilmen. The magistrates of the corporation hold quarter-sessions for all but capital offences arising within the borough. The corporation claim many privileges, such as freedom from quayage and wharfage throughout the kingdom, except the port of London, and exemption from serving on juries, except in the borough, for all inhabitants of the borough and parish. This borough first sent members to Parliament in the 23d of Edward I.; the right of election is vested in the corporation, the mayor being the returning officer. Here are a guildhall and chamber, and a town prison. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Totness and diocese of Exeter; valued in K. B. 12*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 29*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.*; patron, the Lord Chancellor. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient and handsome structure, with a tower at the west end, surmounted by octagonal pinnacles. In the church are an elegant stone screen, a curious stone pulpit, a handsome altar-piece, and a library, containing many old and valuable books. Here are also meeting-houses for Independents, Unitarians, and Wesleyan Methodists. The grammar-school was founded in 1554, and subsequently endowed with lands, now worth 70*l.* per annum. The charity-school, in which between sixty and seventy children are educated, and of whom about thirty are annually clothed, is endowed with lands, producing about 4*l.* a-year, but is chiefly supported by voluntary contributions. Besides a national school, there are numerous charitable donations, some for re-establishing decayed tradesmen, and others for apprenticing children. Here is an old almshouse, occupied by about twenty poor people. Totness Castle was erected by Judhel de Totneis, in the time of William the Conqueror, who, during his residence here, also founded a Benedictine priory, which continued till the dissolution; very few remains of the ancient castle are now in existence, except the embattled walls of a circular keep; near them is the ruin of a gateway, through which the ancient town, formerly surrounded by walls, was entered on the north. Here are some remains of a lazaret, and also of an ancient chapel. Dr. Philip Furneaux, a learned non-conformist divine; Benjamin Kennicott, a learned biblical critic; and Edward Lye, a celebrated lexicographer, were natives of this town.

TOTNORE, co. Sussex.

A hundred situated in the rape of Pevensey, bearing a little to the east from the centre of the county; it contains two parishes.

TOTON, or TOUETON, co. Nottingham.

P. T. Nottingham (124) 6 m. SW b W.
Pop. 208.

A hamlet in the parish of Attenborough and south division of the wapentake of Broxtow.

TOTTENHAM, co. Middlesex.

London 4 m. N b E. Pop. 5312.

A parish in the hundred of Edmonton, comprising High-Cross, Lower, Middle, and Wood Green wards. It consists chiefly of one long street, formed by houses irregularly arranged on the road to Ware; and in the vicinity are numerous handsome residences. It is lighted with gas, and well supplied with water produced by boring. Near Tottenham Green stands a cross; it was formerly a column of wood, erected to commemorate that as one of the resting-places of the corpse of Queen Eleanor. The present structure is an octangular, brick column, erected in the year 1600, by Dean Wood; and in 1809 it was completely covered with stucco, and various embellishments introduced, in the style of the Tudor age; on each face is a shield, with one of the letters composing the word Tottenham in the old character. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Middlesex and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 14*l.*; patrons, the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's. The church, which is dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient structure, with a square embattled tower, formerly surmounted by a lofty wooden cross, which was destroyed during the civil war. It is situated on an eminence, and nearly surrounded by the Mosel, a rivulet which rises on Muswell Hill. Over the porch is an apartment in which the parish business was formerly transacted, but it is now used as a Sunday-school. The church contains many ancient monuments; the eastern window is ornamented with some excellent painted glass, and the font is curious and of great antiquity. A new church has recently been erected by the commissioners under the late acts of parliament; it is in the later style of English architecture, with turrets at each angle, and pinnacles over the aisles. Here also are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, the Society of Friends, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics. The grammar-school, founded in 1685 by Nicholas Reynardson, alderman of London, was endowed in the following year by Sarah, Duchess Dowager of Somerset, with 250*l.*, for enlarging the buildings, and 1100*l.* for extending the benefits of the institution to all children of such inhabitants as were not possessed of real property to the amount of 20*l.* a-year: there are now 80 boys on the foundation. The blue-coat school, established in 1735, and the green-coat school in 1792, are supported by voluntary contributions; in the former thirty-six, and in the latter forty, poor girls are clothed and educated. Lancasterian schools, for children of both sexes, are also supported by subscription. Almshouses for four poor men and four poor women were founded and endowed about the year 1600, by Balthasar Sanches, a Spaniard, confectioner to Philip of Spain, with whom he came over to this country, and was the first who exercised that trade in London. An almshouse for six poor men and six poor women, with a small chapel in the centre, was founded and endowed with 2000*l.*, by N. Reynardson, in 1685; in 1828 the buildings were repaired at an expense of 450*l.*, defrayed by subscription. At the entrance of Page Green is a remarkable circular clump of elm-trees, called the Seven Sisters. Here are extensive flour and oil mills, a pottery for coarse brown ware, and a brewery; a large silk manufactory is unoccupied. In the parish is a well, the water of which is similar to that at Cheltenham. Tottenham is within the jurisdiction of a court of requests, held at Enfield, for the recovery of debts under forty shillings. The regulation of the parish is vested in two churchwardens, four overseers, and a constable, who is also the sexton, assisted by two surveyors and an engineer. Within a short distance from the high road is Bruce Castle, rebuilt in the seventeenth century, on the site of an ancient castellated edifice, erected in the reign of Henry VIII., and honoured with the presence of that monarch in 1516, when he came to meet his sister, Margaret, Queen of Scots; in 1578 it was also honoured with the presence of Queen Elizabeth. The original castle was the residence and property of Robert de Bruce, father of Robert, King of Scotland; a detached brick tower, which covers a deep well, is all that now remains of the ancient structure: the present building has been converted into a school for young gentlemen.

TOTTENHILL, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Market Downham (84) 6 m. NNE.

A parish in the hundred of Broadwater; living, a curacy, subordinate to the rectory of Bishop's Hatfield, in the archdeaconry of Huntingdon and diocese of Lincoln, not in charge; patron, the Rector of Bishop's Hatfield. The church, which is dedicated to St. Andrew, has a latticed, square tower, with a spire. Here is also a chapel for Independent Methodists. A school is partly supported by subscription.

TOTTERNHOE, or TATERNAL, co. Bedford.

P. T. Dunstable (33) 2 m. WSW. Pop. 450.

A parish in the hundred of Manshead; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Bedford and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 10*l*.; ann. val. P. R. 98*l*.; church ded. to St. Giles; patrons (1829) the Trustees of the late Earl of Bridgewater. On the downs are the remains of Totternhoe Castle, overlooking the village of Stanbridge; the mount is lofty, and surrounded by two ditches, one circular, the other square, enclosing the entire breadth of the ridge. Near this is an ancient camp, in the form of a parallelogram; and to the eastward are extensive lime and freestone quarries.

TOTTINGTON, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Watton (91) 4 m. SSW. Pop. 284.

A parish in the hundred of Wayland; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. at 6*l*. 14*s*. 9½*d*.; ann. val. P. R. 62*l*.; patrons, the Governors of Chigwell school. The church, which is dedicated to St. Andrew, is a spacious, ancient structure.

Fairs, Oct. 12.

A chapelry in the parish of Bury and hundred of Salford, containing very extensive establishments for printing and bleaching cotton, in which a great number of the inhabitants are employed. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Chester, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 106*l*.; chapel ded. to St. Anne; patron, the Rector of Bury. Here is an endowed school in which fifteen children are instructed. Courts leet and baron are held twice a year. Dr. Wood, the celebrated mathematician, was born at this place.

TOUGH, shire of Aberdeen, S.

P. T. Alford (123) 5 m. SE. Pop. 693.

A parish five miles in length and three in breadth. It is diversified with rich arable fields, mosses, and hills affording fine pasture for sheep. Living, in the presbytery of Alford and synod of Aberdeen; patron, Sir William Forbes, Bart. The church was erected in 1752. On a hill, distant two miles from it there is a Druidical temple which has acquired the name of the Old Kirk of Tough. Similar remains, also several large cairns, may be seen in different parts of the parish.

TOUGH, or TUOGK, co. Limerick, Munster, I.

P. T. Castle Connel (114) 5 m. SE.
Pop. 2443.

A parish in the barony of Owneybeg; living, a rectory and vicarage united to the rectory of Abington, in the diocese of Emly and archdiocese of Cashel; valued, by commutation for tithes, 250*l*. annually; patron, the Bishop. Area of parish, 1021 acres of land.

P. T. Pallas-Green (140). Pop. with Cullen.

A parish in the barony of Coonagh; living, a vicarage in the diocese of Emly and archdiocese of Cashel; valued in K. B. 1*l*. 1*s*., and, by commutation for tithes, 80*l*. annually, which is divided in equal shares between the Impropiator and the Vicar. It is one of the parishes forming the Union of Cullen; patron, the Archbishop of Cashel.

TOWCESTER, co. Northampton.

Pop. 4496.

A hundred situated in the south side of the county to the north of the town from which it takes its name; it contains six parishes.

TOWCESTER co. Northampton.

London 60 m. NW. Pop. 2554. M. D. Tues. Fairs, Shrove-Tues.: May 12; Oct. 29; for all sorts of cattle and merchandise; and Oct. 10, statute for hiring servants.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of the same name. It is situated on the river Tove, and consists principally of one long paved street, the houses in which are generally well-built, and being a great thoroughfare on the Holyhead road, there are several good inns. From the discovery of numerous coins and antiquities, it is supposed to have been a Roman station. On the north-west side are vestiges of a fosse, and the ruins of a castle, probably a Saxon work; for in that period the town appears to have been a place of considerable note, and so well defended, as to have offered a protracted resistance to the attacks of the Danes. About the year 921, Edward issued a mandate for rebuilding and fortifying the town, and it was surrounded by a stone wall, some vestiges of which are still discernible. The inhabitants are principally employed in the manufacture of bobbin-lace, boots, and shoes. A manorial court is held at Michaelmas when the constables for the parish are chosen. The living is an exonerated vicarage in the archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough; not in charge; patron, the Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry. The church, which is dedicated to St. Laurence, is a neat edifice of the eleventh century, and contains the monument of Archdeacon Sponne, who held the living in the reign of Henry VI. and founded a college and chantry here. Among the various incumbents was Pope Boniface VIII. at the time of his promotion to the pontifical chair in 1294. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists. Twenty-two boys are educated in the grammar-school, founded in 1552, by the trustees of Sponne's charity, who, on the dissolution of the college and chantry purchased and conveyed them to this use, with a house and garden for the master. In the Sunday-school, which has a small endowment, 240 children are educated. Three almshouses were founded and endowed in 1695, by Thomas Bickerstaff, and there are some other charities for the poor. Sir Richard Emsom, a celebrated lawyer, who was promoted to the chancellorship of the Duchy of Lancaster, in the time of Henry VII. and beheaded on Tower Hill in the following reign, was the son of a sieve-maker in this town.

TOWEDNACK, co. Cornwall.

P. T. St. Ives (277) 3 m. SW b W. Pop. 582. A parish in the west division of the hundred of Penwith; living, a curacy subordinate to the vicarage of Lelant Uny, in the archdeaconry of Cornwall and diocese of Exeter; not in charge; church ded. to St. Twinnock; patronage with Lelant Uny vicarage. Here is a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists. Wheal Durla mine is in this parish.

TOWERSEY, co. Buckingham.

P. T. Thame (44) 2 m. ESE. Pop. 367. A parish in the hundred of Ashenden; living, a vicarage with that of Thame, and a peculiar of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln; of the certified value of 25*l.* 10*s.*; church ded. to St. Catherine; patron (1829) John Blackall, Esq. Twenty children are instructed by means of a bequest, producing more than 40*l.* per annum.

TOWIE, shire of Aberdeen, S.

P. T. Tarland (123) 5½ m. NNW. Pop. 578. A parish in the district of Alford, three miles and a half in length, two in breadth, and watered by the river Don, along the banks of which the soil is tolerably fertile, and produces early crops; but the rest of the surface, which is hilly, is mostly covered with heath. There are granite and freestone in abundance. Living, in the presbytery of Alford and synod of Aberdeen; patron, A. Leith, Esq.

TOWLSTON, or TOULSTON, W. R. co. York.

B. 12*l.* 15*s.* 4½*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 140*l.*; church ded. to St. Clement; patron, the Corporation of Dartmouth. See Dartmouth.

TOWTHORPE, or TOULTHORPE, E. R. co. York.

P. T. Great Driffield (106) 9½ m. WNW. Pop. 61.

A township in the parish of Wharrah Percy, and wapentake of Buckrose.

TOWTHORPE, or TOULTHORPE, N. R. co. York.

P. T. York (196) 5 m. N b E. Pop. 58.

A township partly in the parish of Huntington, and partly in that of Strensall, and partly in the liberty of St. Peter of York, and partly in the wapentake of Bulmer.

TOWTON, W. R. co. York.

P. T. Tadcaster (190) 3 m. S. Pop. 94.

A township in the parish of Saxton and upper division of the wapentake of Barkston Ash. This place is memorable as the scene of a most sanguinary battle, which was fought on Palm-Sunday, 1461, between the houses of York and Lancaster; it lasted from nine in the morning till seven in the evening, and ended in the defeat of the latter. In this conflict, it is recorded 110,000 Englishmen were engaged, of whom 36,776 were slain.

TOWYN, or TYWYN, co. Merioneth, N. W.

London 227 m. N b W. Pop. of Pa. 2369.
Fair, May 13.

A town and parish in the hundred of Ystumanner, situated upon a flat, at the foot of the Aran-y-Gessel Mountains, and at a short distance from the sea-shore. The town is built without any uniform plan; it however boasts a few respectable houses, an ancient cruciformed church, containing some interesting monuments, and a well-appointed and respectably-conducted inn. The living is a rectory and vicarage, discharged, in the deanery of Ardudwy and Ystumanner and diocese of Bangor. The rectory valued in K. B. at 60*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, by a forced exchange effected in the reign of Edward VI., is inappropriate in the Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry. The vicarage is valued in K. B. 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*, and in P. R. at 128*l.* 12*s.* annually; patron, the Bishop of Bangor. Besides the parish church, there are chapels belonging to Dissenters, a freeschool, and endowed almshouses. The herring-fishery greatly engages the inhabitants; and the extensive, smooth, and fine sounds, have obtained a notoriety for Towyn as a bathing-place; but the coasting-trade may be said to be transferred to Aberdovey, an improving and well-situated port. Slate, lead, and some copper-ore, are found in the vicinity, and carried to Aberdovey for export. A beautiful line of road connects these places, and renders the harbour of Aberdovey common to both; and the chief proprietor in this very thriving district is A. Corbet, Esq., of Ynysmaengwynne, a noble demesne on the banks of the Dysynwy river, one mile north-east of the town. Towyn is still almost unapproachable from the north, from the wretched state of the roads along the coast.

TOXTETH PARK, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Liverpool (205) 3 m. SE. Pop. 12,829.

An extra-parochial district in the hundred of West Derby, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Mersey; it was anciently a park belonging to the duchy of Lancaster, and formed one of the forests pertaining to that great fee. Several new streets have lately been formed, and in consequence of its proximity to Liverpool, it has become the residence of numerous merchants, manufacturers, retired tradesmen, &c. It is said to have formerly been included in the parish of Walton, to which it still pays tithes, though generally considered extra-parochial. The livings are two curacies in the archdeaconry and diocese of Chester, not in charge; patron, the Rector of Walton. The church, which is dedicated to St. James, is a plain brick edifice, with a square tower, erected in 1774: that dedicated to St. Michael was consecrated in 1818; it consists of a nave, two side aisles, and a square tower, ornamented with pinnacles, forming a pleasing object on the banks of the Mersey. Here is also a Unitarian chapel.

TOYNTON, ALL SAINTS, co. Lincoln.

P. T. Spilsby (132) 2 m. S. Pop. 342.

A parish in the east division of the soke of Bolingbroke, parts of Lindsey; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 11*s.* 3*d.*; patrons (1829) Lord Gwydyr and Lady Willoughby.

TOYNTON, HIGH, co. Lincoln.

P. T. Horncastle (136) 2 m. E. Pop. 159.

A parish in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey; living, a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Lincoln, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; church ded. to St. John the Baptist; patron, the Bishop of Carlisle. Here is also a chapel for Wesleyan Methodists.

TOYNTON, LOW, co. Lincoln.

P. T. Horncastle (136) 2 m. NNE. Pop. 95.

A parish in the soke of Horncastle, parts of Lindsey; living, a dis. rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 11*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*; church ded. to St. Peter; patrons (1829) Lord Gwydyr and Lady Willoughby. Here is also a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists.

TRABOLGAN, co. Cork, Munster, I.

P. T. Cloyne (186) 3 m. SW.
Pop. with St. Mary's, Youghall.

A parish in the barony of Imokilly, situated on the eastern shore of the entrance into Cork Harbour; living, a particle in the wardenship of the College of Youghall, in the diocese of Cloyne and archdiocese of Cashel; patron, the King.

TRACTON, co. Cork, Munster, I.

P. T. Cork (166) 13 m. SE. Pop. 2563.
Fair, Aug. 5.

A village and parish in the barony of Kinnalea, near to the sea-coast; living, a rectory, inappropriate in the Earl of Shannon, in the diocese of Cork and archdiocese of Cashel, united with the inappropriate cures of Killmony, Killpatrick, Ballyfoile, Kinnure, and Clontead: it possesses a church and parsonage. Tracton Abbey was founded for Cistercian monks in the year 1224, by the M'Carthys, and the abbots sat as barons in Parliament. Queen Elizabeth granted this abbey and its possessions to Henry Guilford and Sir James Craig, and the latter assigned them to the Earl of Cork, who bequeathed them to his son, Francis, Lord Shannon. The monks who first resided here were brought from the abbey of Alba-lunda, or Whiteland, in Carmarthenshire, South Wales. The family of Dennis enjoyed the title of Baron from this place.

TRADDERRY, co. Clare, Munster, I.

P. T. Six-mile-Bridge (130).
Pop. not returned.

A parish in the barony of Bunratty; living, a rectory in the diocese of Killaloe and archdiocese of Cashel, forming part of the union of Bunratty. This parish is not noticed in the "Ecclesiastical Register," or Population Returns.

TRAFFORD BRIDGE, co. Pal. of Chester.

P. T. Chester (183) $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. NE b N. Pop. 61.

A township in the parish of Plemondstall and hundred of Eddisbury.

TRAFFORD, MICKLE, co. Pal. of Chester.

P. T. Chester (183) 3 m. NE. Pop. 319.

TRAFFORD, WIMBOLDS, co. Pal. of Chester.

P. T. Chester (183) 6 m. NE b N. Pop. 117.

A township in the parish of Thornton-in-the-Moors and hundred of Eddisbury.

TRAILFLAT, shire of Dumfries, S.

P. T. Lochmaben (65) 3 m. WNW.
Pop. with Tinwald.

An ancient parish, annexed to the parish of Tinwald in 1650. It is watered by the river Ae, and is noted for being the birthplace of William Paterson, the projector of the Bank of England, and of the unfortunate Darien Expedition, who was born in 1660, and represented the royal burgh of Dumfries in the Scottish Parliament. In the same house also was born his grand-nephew, James Monnsey, M. D., principal physician to the celebrated Catherine, Empress of Russia.

TRAILTROW, shire of Dumfries, S.

Pop. with Cummertrees.

An ancient chapelry, still forming part of the parish of Cummertrees. Though the chapel is demolished, the cemetery is still used for sepulture: in it is a remarkably massive building, termed The Tower of Repentance, concerning which and the motives for erecting it, various traditions are afloat; but in the Border laws, it is described as The Watch Tower of Trailtrow, and was doubtless occupied as such to observe the motions of the English borderers before the union.

TRALEE, co. Kerry, Munster, I.

Dublin 187 m. SW b W. Pop. of Pa. 1492.
Of To. 7547. Fair, Aug. 4 and 5; Oct. 9 and 10; and Nov. 7 and 8. Memb. of Pt. 1.

A market, borough, and assize town, and parish in the barony of Truaghanacmy, situated upon the river Lee, and near its embouchure is the great estuary of Tralee Bay. This was the capital and residence of the palatinate of the Earls Desmond, and was subject to their jurisdiction, until the inhuman murders, committed by Sir John Desmond, the Earl's brother, upon Sir H. Danvers and Justices Meade and Charters, who were assassinated in their beds in the year 1579, in the castle of Tralee. This act of atrocity led to the extinction of the Desmond power; and in 1612 the town was incorporated by King James I. It is governed by a high provost, twelve burgesses, twelve common-councilmen, a town-clerk, two sergeants-at-mace, and returns one member to the Imperial Parliament. The plan of the town is tolerably regular, consisting of a square, to which the other avenues have reference. The public buildings are the church, Roman Catholic chapels, gaol, court-house, market-house, inns, and public schools. The living is a rectory entire in the diocese of Ardfert and Aghadoe and archdiocese of Cashel; annual value, by commutation for tithes, 408*l.* 7*s.* 7*d.* It possesses a church and parsonage, with about seventeen acres of glebe; patron, Sir Edward Denny, Bart. The country trade of this place is considerable, and an import and export is conducted at the quay of Blennerville, one mile and a half distant, upon the margin of Tralee Bay. Butter, corn, and agricultural produce, are shipped there for the English market. Coals and manufactured goods brought as a return; and the harbour affords a valuable herring-fishery. An act was passed in the 9th George IV. for the improvement of the harbour and river of Tralee, under which commissioners were appointed with sufficient power. These are now engaged in constructing a ship-canal from the town to the sea, according to a plan suggested by Richard Griffith, Esq., civil engineer. The channel, by which the bay is entered, lies between the Sainpier Islands. On the sea-shore here is a strong chalybeate spring, drunk medicinally, with some benefit. Here are an association school of 107 boys and sixty-nine girls; a London Hibernian Society's school of forty-nine boys and thirty-six girls; a Roman Catholic freeschool of 220 boys; a school of 150 girls, held in the convent; besides classical, English, subscription, and other schools. This town was totally destroyed during the civil wars of 1641, and suffered seriously during the revolution. A monastery for Dominican friars was founded here, under the invocation of the holy cross, A. D. 1260, by the Lord John Fitz-Thomas, who, with his son, was slain at Callen, by Mac Carthy More, and both were interred on the north side of this friary. It is supposed that there was also a commandery here, belonging to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. Of the four strong castles of Tralee, which belonged to the Desmonds, only one survives, which is the property of Sir Edward Denny, to whose ancestors it was granted by Queen Elizabeth. The name, Tralee, signifies the strand, or estuary of the Lee.

TRALLONG, or TRALLWNG, TRE'R-
LLENG, co. Brecon, S. W.

P. T. Brecon (171) 6 m. W. Pop. 336.

A parish partly in the hundred of Defynoc, and partly also in that of Merthyr, situated upon the banks of the river Usk; living, a perpetual curacy, not in charge; certified value 10*l.*; ann. val. in P. R. 42*l.*; patron, the Lessee under the Prebendary. Area of parish, 3000 acres of land. The prebend, a sinecure in the collegiate church of Brecon, is valued in K. B. at 7*l.* 0*s.* 7*d.*, but estimated at the real annual value of 150*l.*; patron, the Bishop of St. David's, to whom belongs the leet of about half the parish. Here are traces of an ancient encampment, called Twyn-y-Gaer; and near it a plain, where the famous Owen Iolo Goch lies buried. The name, Trallwng, is supposed by some to signify the Town of the Legion, while other etymologists translate it, The swampy Townshipp.

TRAMORE, co. Waterford, Munster, I.

Dublin 102 m. SSW. Pop. 889. Fairs, May 3; July 25; Oct. 1; and Nov. 1.

A handsome little town in the parish of Drumcannon and barony of Middlethird, situated upon an open, broad, but dangerous bay, having one of the firmest and most agreeable strands in the kingdom spread out in front of it. It is regularly built, possesses a handsome church, chapel, market-house, and assembly-room, with many excellent private dwellings and marine villas. It is an admired and frequented bathing-place, and is supported by the patronage of the invalids and fashionables from the city of Waterford. The bay being frequently mistaken for the entrance of Waterford harbour, proves often fatal to mariners, who cannot make Ranespark Harbour. The spire of Tramore church, however, will be found a useful landmark, in establishing a distinction.

TRANENT, shire of Haddington, S.

Edinburgh 10 m. E. London 380 N b W. Pop. 3366. M. D. 2 weekly.

A market-town and parish, through which passes the great road between Edinburgh and Berwick, &c. The town, though irregularly built, is a neat, pleasant, and healthful place, consisting of two streets; one of them extending, from east to west, a quarter of a mile, and the other diverging from the centre of it to about the same distance in a northern direction. One spring only supplies the whole of the inhabitants with water. The parish church, which stands in the lower part of the town, was rebuilt about the commencement of the present century, and has a square tower at the east end. A benevolent individual, of the name of Steele, who died about seventeen years ago, bequeathed a handsome legacy for the erection of an hospital or almshouse, for the poor, and for the education of their children. The parish, to which that of Seaton was an-nexed at the reformation, is six miles in length by three in breadth, the surface generally level, and the soil inferior to none in Scotland. It includes the villages of Elphinstone, Seaton, St. Clement's Wells, and Wester Falside, besides the small fishing-towns of Cockenzie and Port Seaton, situated on the coast of the Firth of Forth, each possessing a considerable manufacture of salt, and noted for the numerous oyster-beds in the vicinity. A great abundance of coal is wrought in this parish. At St. Clement's Wells there is a large distillery, and a school, supported by voluntary contributions. Several other schools are established in different parts of the parish, besides the parochial school, which has a salary of 300 merks. The living is in the presbytery of Haddington and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale; patron, the Crown. St. Germans, now the seat of David Anderson, Esq., is a very ancient building, founded as an hospital in the thirteenth century, and afterwards held by the Knights Templars. The battle of Preston Pans, in 1745, was fought half a mile north of the church, in which the remains of Colonel Gardiner, who there received his death-wound, lie buried.

TRANMORE, co. Pal. of Chester.

P. T. Great Neston (194) 7 m. N b E. Pop. 825.

A township in the parish of Bebington and hundred of Wirrall. The Mersey is here crossed by a ferry.

TRANWELL, co. Northumberland.

P. T. Morpeth (258) 2 m. SSW. Pop. with High Church 78.

A township in the parish of Morpeth and west division of Castle ward.

TRAQUAIR, shire of Peebles, S.

P. T. Peebles (20) 6½ m. SE. Pop. 643.

A parish, comprising the old parish of St. Bride, and that part of the ancient parish of Kailzie lying south of the Tweed, which were annexed in 1674. It extends nearly nine miles along the southern bank of the Tweed, is about four miles and a half in breadth, and contains 17,290 acres, of which upwards of 4000 are arable. Its figure is very irregular, from being much intermixed with the parish of Yarrow, and the surface is extremely uneven, rising at some places into lofty mountains; of these, Minchmoor, over which passes the old Selkirk road, is elevated 2000 feet above the sea, and some others 200 feet more. The hills afford fine pasturage for upwards of 10,000 sheep. The river Quair runs through the parish, whence its name, and falls into the Tweed, which is here 510 feet higher than at Berwick. At the junction of these rivers is the house of Traquair, a castellated building of high antiquity, said to have been the occasional residence of the Scottish monarchs, from David I. to Alexander III., and which, with the barony and forest of Traquair, was granted in 1478 by James III. to the Stewarts, Earls of Buchan. There were several other castellated towers, in a continued chain along the banks of the Tweed, one of which, at Cardrona, is still in tolerable preservation; also many ancient circular camps, termed chesters. Considerable quantities of lead-ore have been found, and there is a quarry of excellent slate in the parish. The living is in the presbytery of Peebles and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale; patron, the Crown. The church was rebuilt in 1785; it was dedicated to St. Bridget, whence the parish has been termed St. Bride's and Kirk-Bride in ancient records.

TRAWDON FOREST, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Colne (218) 2 m. SE. Pop. 2507.

A township in the parish of Whalley and hundred of Blackburn. This district anciently formed a part of the demesnes of the honour of Clitheroe, and for many ages lay uncultivated; it was about four miles from north to south in length, and three miles in width. Several manufactures, similar to those carried on in the neighbouring towns, have been established, and are progressively increasing. Here are places of worship for the Society of Friends and Wesleyan Methodists. At the extremity of the county, in this township, is Boulsworth Hill, a lofty elevation, 1689 feet above the level of the sea.

TRAWS-COED, co. Brecon, S. W.

P. T. Buallt (173) 5 m. SW. Pop. with Pa.

A hamlet in the parish of Gwen-ddwr and hundred of Talgarth.

TRAWS-COED, co. Cardigan, S. W.

P. T. Aberystwith (208) 10 m. SE.
Pop. with Pa.

A township in the parish of Llanafan and upper division of the hundred of Ilar, situated upon a most graceful bend of the picturesque river Ystwyth. Here is Croswood Park, or Trawscoed, the princely seat of the Earls of Lisburne.

TRAWS-COED, co. Montgomery, N. W.

P. T. Newtown (175) 8 m. NW. Pop. 607.

A township in the parish of Carno and hundred of Llanidloes.

P. T. Rhayadar (181) 7 m. SE. Pop. with Pa.

A hamlet and township in the parish of Llanhir and hundred of Rhayadar.

TRAWS-FYNYDD, co. Merioneth, N. W.

London 225 m. NW. Pop. 1441.

Fairs, April 23; Sept. 18; and Oct. 22.

A village and parish in the hundred of Arduwy, upon the post-road between Dolgelly and Maentwrog, built in a straggling and irregular manner, but possessing a comfortable little inn. The living is a dis. rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Bangor; valued in K. B. 8*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*; patron, the Bishop. Area of parish, about 100 square miles; much of which, though level, is only calculated for sheep-walks. Here are the remains of Castell Prysor; also a flat stone in Cae-llech-Idris, inscribed Hic in tumulo jacet Porius homo pius fuit. A Roman station is also observable here, and the dross of smelting-houses indicates the working of mines in the vicinity at an early date, the position of which is now unknown. The general character of this district is well expressed by the poet, "a weary waste expanding to the skies."

TOPOG. DICT.—VOL. III.

TRAYAN-GLAS, co. Brecon, S. W.

P. T. Brecon (171) 7 m. W. Pop. 742.

A hamlet in the parish of Llywel and hundred of Defynoc.

P. T. Llandeilo fawr (202) adjacent.
Pop. with Bryn-y-Beird.

A hamlet in the parish of Llandeilo-fawr and hundred of Iscenen.

TREDEGAR, co. Monmouth.

P. T. Newport (148) 16 m. NW.
Pop. with Pa.

A considerable mining district in the parish of Bedwelty and lower division of the hundred of Wentlloog. About thirty years ago only one poor family resided near this place, which has risen to the importance of a market-town, with a spacious area in the centre, and a market-house, where a large market is held on Saturday. It contains several commodious inns, and a number of respectable shops. The inhabitants are now calculated at about 6000, chiefly employed in the extensive collieries and iron-works at this place and in the immediate neighbourhood. Rail-roads have been constructed in various directions, for the conveyance of iron, coal, &c., one of which extends a distance of twenty miles to Newport and Pill-gwenly. Here are two places of worship for Baptists, and three for Wesleyan Methodists; it is also in contemplation to erect a church.

TREDINGTON, co. Gloucester.

P. T. Tewkesbury (103) 2 m. SE b S.
Pop. 138.

A parish in the lower division of the hundred of Tewkesbury; living, a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Gloucester; certified value 20*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 54*l.*; patron, the Bishop of Gloucester.

TREDINGTON, co. Worcester.

P. T. Shipston-upon-Stour (83) 2 m. N.
Pop. 1032.

A parish in the upper division of the hundred of Oswaldslow, situated near the river Stour; living, a rectory, in two portions, exempt from visitation, and in the diocese of Worcester, jointly valued in K. B. at 99*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*; church ded. to St. Gregory; patron, Jesus College, Oxford. Here is a small endowed school. This parish was divided, by an act passed in the 6th of George I., when the townships of Shipston and Tidmington were separated from it, and constituted a distinct parish. The rectory-house is part of a monastery, which formerly stood here.

TREDUCKAN, co. Glamorgan, S. W.

P. T. Cowbridge (173) 6 m. SE.

TREFAEN, or TREVAEN, co. Carnarvon, S. W.

A singularly-formed and conspicuous mountain, in the precincts of the chapelry of Capel Curig, and hundred of Uchaf, impending over the lake of Ogwen, and forming a principal feature in the sublime scenery of Ogwen Pass. It consists of stratified slate-rock, inclined to the horizon in an angle of eighty-five degrees; the summit is strewn with whinstone, two columnar masses of which occupy the highest pinnacle of the rugged, dentated, superior outline. The most elevated point is about 2500 feet above sea-level.

TREFAN, co. Brecon, S. W.

P. T. Buallt (173) 6 m. NW. Pop. with Pa. A hamlet in the parish of Llanafan-fawr and hundred of Builth.

TREF-ASSER, co. Pembroke, S. W.

P. T. Fishguard (257) 3 m. NW.;
Pop. with Pa.

A poor hamlet in the parish of Llanwnda and hundred of Davisland, situated upon the sea-coast. It derives its name from the famous Asser Menevensis, whose birth-place it was. He was educated at St. David's, was much caressed by Alfred the Great, and finally became the biographer of his royal master. A tumulus, called Castell Poeth, in this vicinity, contained several urns and other funeral relics, which were dug up from time to time.

TREF-DELYN, or HARPTON, co. Radnor, S. W.

P. T. New Radnor (159) 1½ m. SE. Pop. 141.

A township in the parish of Old Radnor, and liberties of the borough of New Radnor.

TREFDRAETH, co. Anglesea, NW.

P. T. Llangefni (247) 5 m. SW. Pop. 601.
Fair, May 1.

A parish in the hundred of Malldraeth; living, a rectory, united with the chapelry of Llangwyfan, in the diocese of Bangor; valued in K. B. 14*l.* 18*s.* 11½*d.*; patron, the Bishop. Area of parish, about eight square miles. The increase of population in this parish is attributed to the enclosure of the marsh, called Malldraeth, and to the erection of many cottages and tenements thereon.

TREFECCA, co. Brecon, SW.

P. T. Hay (156) 8 m. SW. Pop. 251.

A hamlet in the parish and hundred of Talgarth. Here is a singular religious establishment, founded and endowed by the eccentric Howel Harris, a native of the parish. He was zealously supported in his extravagant views by the pious Countess Dowager of Huntingdon, who resided at Lower Trefecca. The name, Trefecca, signifies Rebecca's Home, from Rebecca Prosser, an heiress, who built the mansion.

TREFEDRYD, co. Montgomery, NW.

P. T. Welshpool (171) 7 m. Pop. with Pa.

A township in the parish of Meifod, the latter being partly in the hundred of Llanfyllin, and partly in that of Dewyddur, situated upon a branch of the Fyrnwy river, and opposite to the ruins of Mathrafael Castle. TREFRHIW, co. Carnarvon, N. W.P. T. Llanrwst (218) 2 m. NW. Pop. 373.
Fair, May 12; Sept. 3; and Nov. 7.

A village in the parish of the same name and hundred of Nant-Conway, picturesquely situated at the junction of the Crafnant rivulet with the navigable Conway. It consists of a neat church, two small inns, and a few shops. This is the head of the tideway, and a brisk trade, in the export of slates, from the quarries of Penmachno and Llanrhychwyn, some lead-ore, bark and oak, and imports of coals, timber, and various articles, is carried on at the new quay, constructed here by Lord Willoughby D'Eresby, the proprietor of the place. Here are also a lime-kiln and a water corn-mill. Trefrhiw may be called the port or harbour of Llanrwst, with which a railway communication might be established, at a trifling expense, along the top of the embankment already formed upon the Denbighshire side of the river. The living is a dis. rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Bangor; valued in K. B. 7*l.* 15*s.*; patron, the Bishop of the diocese.

TREGONEY, co. Cornwall.

London 253 m. SW b W. Pop. 1035. M. D. Sat. Fairs, Shrove-Tues.; May 3; July 25; Sept. 1; and Nov. 6; for cattle, &c. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish, in the west division of the hundred of Powder. It is a place of considerable antiquity, situated on the river Fal, which is here crossed by a bridge, and is said to have been the first settlement in this branch of the harbour. The old town stood at the bottom of the hill on which the present is built, consisting chiefly of one street; it was formerly a place of some consequence, but has greatly declined since the increase of Truro. By a charter granted in the 19th of James I., the government of the town is vested in a mayor, recorder, and eight capital burgesses. This borough first sent members to Parliament in the reign of Edward I.; the right of election is in all the householders that boil a pot, the number of voters is above 300; the mayor is the returning officer, and the influence of J. A. Gordon, Esq. is predominant. The petty sessions for the south division of the hundred are occasionally held here, and courts are held by the lord of the manor. The living is a vicarage, with that of Cuby, in the archdeaconry of Cornwall and diocese of Exeter; valued in K. B. 10*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*; church ded. to St. James; patron, J. A. Gordon, Esq. Here are also places of worship for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists; and an hospital for decayed housekeepers, founded by Hugh Boscawen, Esq., in 1696.

TREISHNISH, shire of Argyll, S.

A cluster of small islands of the Hebrides, in the parish of Kilninian and district of Mull, lying about four leagues to the westward of the Isle of Mull. They anciently marked the boundary of the northern and southern governments, into which the Hebrides were divided by the crown of Denmark; the principal of them are Back More, Back Beg, Flada, Lunga, Cairn-Burgh More, and Cairn-Burgh Beg; the two latter are separated by a narrow sound, and are inaccessible on every side, except by one very intricate pass. On Cairn-Burgh More, which is a lofty rock of some extent, there was formerly a strong castle, occupied by a small garrison; it was summoned to surrender to Alexander III. in 1249, and in the rebellion of 1715 it was taken and retaken by each of the contending parties.

TREMADOC, co. Carnarvon, N. W.

London 233 m. NW. Pop. with Pa. Fairs, Easter-Mon.; March 6; April 13; May 14; Aug. 20; and Sept. 15. M. D. Fri.

A post, market, and fair town in the parish of Ynyscynhairn and hundred of Yvionydd, situated near to the sea-coast and adjacent to the river Glasllyn. It stands upon a level area, three feet lower than the surface of the sea, and protected from inundation by an embankment. This bold and successful project was accomplished by W. A. Maddocks, Esq., the founder of the town, who also attempted to rescue 5000 acres from the dominion of the ocean, by a second embankment, 16,000 feet in length, 100 feet broad at the base, and thirty on the summit, with flood-gates for the afflux of the Glasllyn and its tributaries. It connects the counties of Carnarvon and Merioneth, and cost 100,000*l.* The success of the last effort is still doubtful, no tenacious or puddling-stuff being contained amongst the rubble-stone thrown into the sea, and the breadth of the work being altogether insufficient. The plan of the town is regular, and the market-hall, assembly-rooms, Gothic church, with its delicate spire, meeting-house, inn, &c. exhibit a chaste style of architecture. The living is a chapelry; patronage, in the Representatives of the Founder. Here was an extensive woollen factory, and some flannels continue to be made in the vicinity for this market. The harbour, or Port Madoc, as it is usually designated, is well sheltered, and admits vessels of 300 tons burden. Application has been made to parliament for a bill to facilitate the construction of a rail-road from the slate-quarries of Festiniog to this port. Upon the completion of this last-mentioned undertaking little doubt can be entertained that Port Madoc will become a very flourishing place.

TREMAEN, TREMAIN, or TREMEIN, co. Cardigan, S. W.

P. T. Cardigan (239) 4 m. ENE. Pop. 210.

A parish in the hundred of Troedyrour; living a perpetual curacy, not in charge, in the diocese of St. David's; of the certified value of 10*l.*, and ann. val. of 21*l.*, according to P. R.; patronage, in the Representatives of the Jones family of Hafod. The name Tre-mein seems to be derived from a large upright stone called Llech yr Ast, and from some cist-faens near it, which stand on the borders of this and the adjoining parish of Llangoed Mawr.

The living is a perpetual curacy, not in charge, in the diocese of St. David's, of the certified value of 2*l.* 10*s.*, and annual of 60*l.* 10*s.* according to P. R. ; patrons, the Representatives of Mrs. A. Jones. The manor of Tre'r-twr, " the township of the tower," was granted, by Bernard de Newmarch, to Pycard, a knight, to be held by knight's service as the lordship of Blaenllyfni. It has passed successively through the families of Bloet, Berkley, and Herbert, and now remains in that of Somerset, dukes of Beaufort. Some remains are yet visible of " the fair place of Henry Vehan, Esq." mentioned in the Itinerary of Leland. The ruins of Tre'tower Castle are highly picturesque.

TRESCO.

One of the Scilly Islands, comprising about 880 acres. The principal village or town is Dolphin, so called, probably from Sir Francis Godolphin, who was governor of the Scilly Islands in the reign of Elizabeth. Its church is dedicated to St. Nicholas. At the entrance into Grimsby Harbour are the remains of Oliver's Battery, where the parliamentary generals, Blake and Askew, intent upon capturing St. Mary's, the last retreat of Charles's adherents, intrenched themselves till their efforts were crowned with success, by the capitulation of the entire garrison, amounting to 800 cavaliers, with the governor, Sir John Granville, who was afterwards created Earl of Bath.

TRIM, co. Meath, Leinster, I.

Dublin 32 m. NW b W. Pop. of Pa. 2309.
Of To. 2304. Of Commons 166. Fairs, March 27; May 8; Wednes. after Trinity-Sunday; Oct. 1; and Nov. 16.

A market, post, and fair town, and capital of the county, in the parish of Trim, the latter being partly in the barony of Lower Moyfenragh, and partly in that of Upper Navan, situated upon the banks of the Boyne, and surrounded by a level, productive, and populous district. It is built without any respect for regularity, and contains many comfortable private houses. Here are the parish church, Roman Catholic chapels, gaol, court-house, market-house, and two good inns. This was anciently a walled town, and contained many religious institutions. It was also a borough, returning two members to the Irish Parliament. The government is vested in a portreeve and town-clerk. The living is a vicarage in the diocese of Meath and archdiocese of Armagh; valued in K. B. 60*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.*; and, by commutation for tithes, 615*l.* annually, the lay impropriator being entitled to 430*l.* It is united with the rectory of Tubherville, and curacies of Scurroughstown, Killcooly, and Tullyhanogue, and possesses a church, parsonage, and glebe of 299 acres; patron, the Bishop of Meath. There is but little trade here, and the manufacture consists merely of some ticken, and a little woollen for home consumption. The presence of the great sessions, and establishment of a military station, confer benefit, and augment the animation of the place. The Incorporated Society maintain a school here, consisting of thirty boys and twenty-five girls; and there is also a parish school of fifty children, ten of whom are instructed gratuitously. Trim and its vicinity were the sites of many establishments of an ecclesiastical, and some of a military character. The castle, once the residence of King John, is perhaps the most spacious in Ireland. It consists of a keep, or citadel, enclosed by curtains and bastions, and protected by a fosse, the whole occupying about four acres of land. The ruins are yet considerable and imposing. An abbey was founded here by St. Patrick, A. D. 432, for canons regular, under the invocation of the Virgin Mary, and built upon a plot of ground, granted by Fethleimid, son of Laoghaire, and grandson of Niall. Loman, nephew of St. Patrick, was the first bishop. The steeple of the abbey, called the Yellow Tower, was demolished by Cromwell, against whom it held out a considerable time with a brave little garrison. The Grey Friary, or Observantine friary of Trim, is dedicated to St. Bonaventure, and was founded either by King John, or by a member of the Plunket family. Near the Athboy Gate stands a Dominican friary, founded by Geoffry de Geneville, Lord of Meath, in honour of the Blessed Virgin. The priory of Cross Bearers, a truly magnificent pile, in which it is believed the parliaments were held, owes its institution to one of the bishops of Meath, and its continually-increased splendour to the bounty of his successors in the see. Here is also an ancient edifice, usually called the Greek Church.

TRIMLESTOWN, co. Meath, Leinster, I.

P. T. Trim (32) 2 m. WNW. Pop. 272.

TRING, co. Hertford.

London 31 m. NW b W. Pop. 3236. M. D. Frid. Fairs, Easter-Mond. and Oct. 11, for cattle and hiring servants.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Dacorum. It is a place of remote antiquity, called Treung in the Domesday-book, situated on the high road to Aylesbury. The town consists principally of two streets, in one of which stands the market-house; the houses are well built, and generally in the modern style. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in a silk-mill, worked partly by water, and partly by steam, and also in the manufacture of canvass and straw-plat. The living is a curacy with that of Long Marston, in the archdeaconry of Huntingdon and diocese of Lincoln; certified value 40*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 120*l.*; patron, Christ Church, Oxford. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a handsome embattled structure, consisting of a nave, side aisles, and chancel, with a massive tower at the west end, surmounted by a low spire. Here are also places of worship for Baptists and Independents. Nearly 100 boys are instructed in a freeschool, established by John Hull, in 1829; it is conducted on the Lancasterian system, and supported by subscription. In digging the Grand Junction Canal, which passes within a mile of the town, a Roman helmet was discovered, near Northcote Hill, between this place and Berkhamstead, of which a drawing was published by the Antiquarian Society in 1819. Within the parish are four large reservoirs, to supply any loss of water to the canal. Near the town is the elegant mansion of Tring Park, situated amidst finely-diversified and extensive grounds, which contain an abundance of excellent timber; it is said to have been built by Charles II. for his favourite mistress, Eleanor Gwynn.

London 99 m. W b S. Pop. 9548. M. D. Tues., Thurs., and Sat. Fairs, Aug. 5, 6, and 7, for milliners' goods, cattle, and pedlery.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Melksham. It is situated upon a rocky eminence, near the river Were, across which is a stone bridge; neither the etymology of its name nor the period of its origin can be ascertained with accuracy. The town is very irregularly built, but paved and lighted with gas; the principal street is spacious, and contains some excellent houses, mostly of stone, but the others are generally narrow, and the houses have a more ancient appearance. The inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of woollen cloth, which was introduced here at an early period; the articles made are chiefly kerseymeres, with some superfine broad cloth. A communication is opened with London and Bristol, by means of the Kennet and Avon Canal, which passes about a mile north of the town. The government of the town is vested in the county magistrates, who hold a petty session on the first Tuesday in the month, for the transaction of business connected with the parish. A court of requests for the recovery of debts not exceeding 5*l.* is held every Tuesday three weeks, before certain commissioners, under the authority of a local act of parliament, comprising within its jurisdiction the hundreds of Melksham, Bradford, and Whorwells-down. A court-leet and a court-baron are also held by the lord of the manor, at Easter, at the former of which, constables, tithing-men, a crier, and cornets of the market, are appointed, and sworn. The living is a rectory with the curacy of Staver-ton, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Salisbury; valued in K. B. 20*l.* 12*s.* 8½*d.*; patron (1829) the Duke of Rutland. The Rev. George Crabbe, the poet, was rector of this parish for eighteen years, and died here Feb. 3, 1832. The church, which is ded. to St. James, is a spacious structure, consisting of a nave, chancel, two side aisles, with chapels attached, a north and south porch, and a large tower at the west end, surmounted by a lofty spire; the nave and aisles are crowned with battlements and crocketed pinnacles; the former is separated from the latter by five pointed arches on each side, springing from clustered columns, with ornamented capitals; some of the windows contain fragments of painted glass; the font is lofty, and covered with a profusion of tracery and panelling. Here are also four places of worship for Particular Baptists, one for General Baptists, one for Presbyterians, two for Wesleyan, and one for Independent Methodists. A free-school, in which fifty boys are instructed, is supported by property left for charitable purposes. Here are seven Sunday-schools, in which about 1500 children are taught to read; and also an almshouse for six poor widows. Trowbridge Castle is said to have been erected by John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster; it was demolished previously to the time of Henry VIII., and not a vestige of it now exists, its site being occupied by other buildings. Trowbridge formerly gave title of Baron to the Seymour family, but the title is now extinct. George Keate, a writer of some celebrity in the last century, was born in this town, in the year 1730.

TROWELL, co. Nottingham.

TRURO, co. Cornwall.

London 255 m. WSW. Pop. 2712. M. D. Wed. and Sat. Fairs, Wed. in Mid-Lent; Wed. in Whitsun-week; Nov. 19; and Dec. 8; for cattle: and a cattle-market the 1st Wed. in every month. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish, in the west division of the hundred of Powder. The town, which extends into the parishes of St. Clement and Kenwyn, is pleasantly situated in a vale, almost in the centre of the mining district, at the confluence of the two small rivers, Kenwyn and St. Allen; which, with a creek of the river Fal, form a body of water, in spring tides, two miles in length, and of sufficient depth to enable vessels of 100 tons burden to sail up to the town. It has considerably increased in size of late years, and is now a handsome and well-built town; the streets are partially paved and lighted with gas. It contains a county library, a literary society, with a valuable museum, and a neat assembly-room, which is occasionally used as a theatre. Truro is one of the original coinage towns, and is a place of considerable trade; the chief exports consist of tin and copper ore; and the imports are iron, coal, and timber, for the mines. The principal manufactures are carpets and paper; there is also a manufactory for converting block-tin into bars and ingots; the former are exported to the Baltic and the Mediterranean, and the latter to the East Indies; and the best description of crucibles are made from the china stone. On the Falmouth road is a large tin smelting-house; another near the Redruth road, containing four furnaces, with a chimney upwards of 180 feet high; and one on the south side of the town: there is also an iron-foundry. The charter of incorporation was granted by Queen Elizabeth in 1589; and the town is now governed by a mayor, four aldermen, and twenty capital burgesses. This borough first sent members to Parliament in the reign of Edward I.; the right of election is vested in the corporation, the mayor is the returning officer, and the influence of the Earl of Falmouth is predominant. Formerly, at the election of a mayor, it was customary for the town-mace to be delivered to the lord of the manor, who retained it until sixpence was paid for every house in the borough, and the fine is still exacted from such as occupy certain ancient houses, under the name of smoke-money. The Easter quarter-sessions for the county are held here; and petty sessions for the west division of the hundred take place on the first Thursday in every month. The living is a dis. rectory in the archdeaconry of Cornwall and diocese of Exeter; valued in K. B. 16*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 140*l.*; patron (1829) Earl of Mount Edgcumbe. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious and handsome structure, erected about the time of Henry VIII.; it consists of two aisles of equal dimensions, and a smaller one; and has a modern steeple, unsuited to the prevailing character of the edifice. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, Unitarians, Bryanites, Shouters, the Society of Friends, Wesleyan, and Independent Methodists. The grammar-school has two exhibitions of 30*l.* per annum each, at Exeter College, Oxford; the master and usher each receive a salary of 25*l.* per annum. The celebrated Sir Humphry Davy received his education at this school. Here are an endowed charity-school, a national school, and several Sunday-schools. An hospital for ten poor housekeepers was founded and endowed by Mr. Henry Williams, who died in 1631; the corporation have the management, and appoint widows only, each of whom receive four shillings a-week, and clothing. The county infirmary, which stands on an elevated and healthy spot near the town, was opened on the 12th August, 1799, under the patronage of his late Majesty, George IV., then Prince of Wales; and is supported by donations and voluntary subscriptions. This town gave birth to Samuel Foote, of dramatic celebrity, who was born in 1721, in a house, now the Red Lion Inn.

TRUSHAM, co. Devon.

P. T. Chudleigh (182) 2½ m. NNW. Pop. 192.

TRYVET, or TREVET, co. Meath, Leinster, I.

P. T. Dunshaughlin (18) 3 m. NE. Pop. 422.

A village and parish partly in the barony of Ratoath and partly in that of Skryne; living, a rectory and vicarage in the diocese of Meath and archdiocese of Armagh, united with the rectory of Killbrew; it is valued in K. B. 5*l.* 4*s.* 0½*d.*, and in P. R. 220*l.* annually. The church of the union is in Killbrew; patron, the King. A sumptuous monastery stood at this place, which was destroyed by fire, A. D. 1145. Some fragments of ancient tombs, and the ruins of of the English church, may still be perceived in the vicinity.

TUBNEY, co. Berks.

P. T. Abingdon (56) 4 m. W b N. Pop. 133.

A parish in the hundred of Ock; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Salisbury; valued in K. B. at 3*l.* 1*s.* 10½*d.*; patron, Magdalen College, Oxford. The church has been long destroyed, and not a single stone of it remains; on the induction of a rector, the ceremony takes place in the open air. The parishioners resort to Fyfield church for the performance of ecclesiastical rites.

TUAM, co. Galway, Connaught, I.

Dublin 126 m. W b N. Pop. of Pa. 7801.
Of To. 4571; Fairs, July 4 and Dec. 15.

A handsome and prosperous inland town, and a parish, the latter being partly in the barony of Clare, and partly in that of Downmore, situated upon a rivulet, which discharges itself into Turloghmore, a little to the south-west of the parish. The site of the town is too low for the picturesque eye, but is said to be found abundantly healthy. The plan is regular: a market-house occupies the centre, from which issue four broad avenues; besides which, there are several smaller streets and thoroughfares. The palace of the archbishop constitutes an interesting feature here; it stands in the centre of an improved demesne, and being his constant residence, contributes much to the general prosperity of the place, and the especial happiness of the poor of this very populous district. The cathedral is small, but adorned with a steeple and spire. The Roman Catholic palace is the most splendid building so appropriated in Ireland, and has been many years building. Here is also a residence of the titular archbishop, adjacent to which is the Roman Catholic college of St. Jarlath, a handsome building, originally occupied as a banking-house, by French and Co. Reading and billiard rooms are comprehended in the accommodations afforded in the market-hall. To this list of public buildings may be added a barrack, dispensary, and two excellent and spacious inns. The mall, the fashionable promenade, is adorned with several handsome dwellings of architectural pretensions. This was originally a borough returning two members to the Irish Parliament; but it was disfranchised by the Act of Union. The living is a rectory and vicarage, part of the former united with the rectories of Clonbern, Boyanagh, Liskeery, and Adrigoole, constituting the corps of the deanery; it is valued, by commutation for tithes, at 195*l.* 2*s.* 7½*d.* annually; patron, the King: the vicarage is united with those of Belclare, Killbennan, Killconla, Liskeery, and Adrigoole; annual value, by commutation for tithes, 379*l.* 4*s.* 7½*d.* It possesses a church, parsonage, and glebe of twenty-five acres; patron, the Archbishop of Tuam. The rank and consequence of this place are attributable to the institution of an episcopal see at an early period. A bishopric was founded here in the sixth century, to which were annexed the see of Annaghdown in 1324; the see of Mayo in 1559; and the see of Ardagh in 1742. It was erected into an archbishopric in 1152, the suffragan bishops being those of Elphin, Clonfert, Killmacduagh, Killala, and Achonry. It is the largest diocese in the kingdom, comprehending within it parts of Galway, Mayo, and Roscommon counties, extending seventy miles in length, with an average breadth of sixty-three, and occupying a superficies of 1,135,650 acres of land. It is divided into eighty parishes, and is valued in K. B. at 50*l.* The bishop's lands amount to 49,281 acres, nearly half of which is at present unprofitable. The chapter consists of a dean, provost, archdeacon, and eight prebendaries ; besides whom, there are five stipendiaries. The cathedral is ded. to St. Jarlath, the supposed founder. The county trade here is brisk ; the market extremely well supplied with fish from Galway every day, and meat from the vicinity ; Tuam veal is proverbially excellent. The new shambles are well designed, but badly situated. There is also a very extensive brewery, public bakeries, several tanneries, flour-mills, and a linen-manufacture, in a remarkably wholesome condition. Large quantities of coarse canvass for packing are also made in the town and parish. The diocesan school occupies a fortunate position near the Dublin entrance to the town, and is a handsome building. The freeschool consists of 210 boys and 140 girls ; and a London Hibernian Society school of eighty-eight pupils. The public dispensary claims notice as a prudent mode of administering relief to the poor, and as being in this instance very happily accomplished. In addition to the many attractions for respectable inhabitants which Tuam possesses, it boasts of two public journals, conducted with much ability ; and the public coaches have adopted this line of road, and make Tuam the " Gate of Mayo." In the year 487 an abbey was founded here, under the invocation of the Virgin, and converted into a cathedral by St. Jarlath, in the commencement of the sixth century. A city was built here in honour of the saint, but Tuam, with all its religious houses, was consumed by fire in the year 1244. The remains of the patron were preserved for many years in a chapel, called Teampul-na-Serin, or the Chapel of the Shrine, of which no traces now exist. The priory of St. John the Baptist was founded about the year 1140, by O'Connor, King of Ireland ; and at a subsequent period appears to have been granted to Richard, Earl of Clanricarde. The abbey of the Holy Trinity was founded by a member of the De Burgh family, either in the reign of King John, or in the beginning of Henry III., for Premonstatensian canons. The family of Wenman derived the title of Viscount from this place.

TULLAMORE, or KILLBRIDE, King's County, Leinster, I.

Dublin 63 m. W b S. Pop. 5517. Fairs, May 10; July 10; and Oct. 21.

A handsome, neat, and regularly-built market-town, in the parish of Killbride, Tullamore, and barony of Ballycowan, situated upon the Clodagh river, by which it is nearly bisected. The general appearance is that of an improving, comfortable, and respectable place; and, owing to the continually extended munificence of the noble proprietor, Lord Charleville, it has grown from an humble village into a large and populous trading-town, and is now decidedly the best in the county. The church, chapels, market-house, and county infirmary are buildings of a respectable class. The barracks and corn-stores are very extensive; and, besides several minor inns, there are two good posting-houses. The living is a chapelry in the diocese of Meath and archdiocese of Armagh, possessing a church and parsonage, and small glebe; ann. val. by commutation for tithes, 139*l.* 0*s.* 6½*d.*; patron, the Bishop. The cotton manufacture is now completely established here, and the linen trade is also on a secure footing. Much traffic exists here, as well from its central position in the county as from the proximity of the Grand Canal, which extends from the city of Dublin to Shannon Harbour. By this excellent line of navigation the manufacture of the town and the agricultural produce of the vicinity are conveyed to market at a small expense, and the necessities and luxuries of life brought here in return. It is in contemplation to hold the assizes for the county here in future, Phillipstown, the present county-town, being so remotely situated. Here is an endowed classical school, a poor-school, supported by Lady Charleville, and a capacious school for the education of poor children of the parish, maintained by donations and subscriptions. Near the town are the ruins of a castle, and adjacent stands the noble castellated mansion of Lord Charleville, built from a design of the late F. Johnston, President of the Royal Hibernian Academy. Tullaghmore gives title of Baron to the family of Bury.

TULLAVIN, or TULLIVIN, or TULLYVIN, co. Cavan, Ulster, I.

P. T. Cootehill (74). Pop. with Pa. Fairs, March 7; May 4; July 5; Aug. 26; and Dec. 11.

A village in the parish of Kilddrumsherdan, and barony of Tullaghgarvey. Here is a school, consisting of sixty Protestant children, endowed with 4000*l.* for its maintenance, by the late W. Moore, of Tullavin, Esq.

TULLIALLAN, shire of Perth, S.

P. T. Kincardine (25) $\frac{1}{2}$ m. NE. Pop. 3558.

A parish, lying in that detached portion of Perthshire, which is surrounded by the shires of Clackmannan and Fife, excepting on the south, where the Forth forms its boundary, upon which is the seaport-town of Kincardine, which see. It is of an irregular figure, about four miles across in every direction, and contains 2760 acres in a high state of cultivation. The quarries here have long been famous for excellent freestone, especially the quarry of Longannat, which has been wrought from time immemorial, and its produce exported to distant countries: the Stadt-house of Amsterdam was built with stone conveyed hence. Coal also is very abundant in this district. Living, in the presbytery of Dunblane and synod of Ross and Stirling; patron, James Erskine, Esq. The church was rebuilt in 1659. The parochial school has a salary of 300 merks, with a commodious school-house, dwelling, garden, and other advantages. Here are considerable remains of the once strong castle of Tulliallan, which belonged to the Knights of Blackadder.

TULLIBODY, shire of Clackmannan, S.

P. T. Alloa (31) $2\frac{1}{2}$ m. NW. Pop. with Alloa.

A village giving name to an ancient parish now united to the parish of Alloa. It is seated on the eastern bank of the river Devon, which is here crossed by a bridge; and a little below, at its confluence with the Forth, there is a pier, convenient for shipping and unshipping merchandise with ease and expedition. This place has undergone considerable improvement, many commodious houses having lately been erected. There is also a school, numerously attended, and principally supported by the family of Abercrombie, of whom the celebrated Gen. Sir Ralph and General Sir Robert Abercrombie were born here.

TULLIEBOLE, shire of Kinross, S.

P. T. Kinross (25) $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. WS b W.

Pop. with Fossoway.

An ancient parish, intersecting the parish of Fossoway, to which it is now united. It is about three miles square, extending from the foot of the Ochils on the north, nearly to the Cleish Hills on the south; and from the Crook of Dovon on the west, in the direction of Kinross on the east. The surface is level, though much elevated, and the soil is peculiarly adapted to the growth of barley, oats, and peas. The castle of Tulliebole, erected in 1608, is the seat of M. Wellwood, Esq., the superior of the barony. The ancient proprietors possessed the privilege of holding a court of regality here.

TULLOCH, or TULLICK, shire of Aberdeen, S.

P. T. Kincardine O'Neil (112) 14 m. W.

Pop. with Glenmuick.

An ancient parish, now in union with Glenmuick and Glengairn, in the district of Kincardine O'Neil. It is the most extensive district of the three, being eighteen miles in length from east to west, and is bounded on the south by the river Dee, which is crossed at Ballatar by a noble bridge of granite; this structure, which was completed in 1809, near the site of that which was destroyed by a great inundation in 1799, much facilitates the communication between the north and south of Scotland. The crags or pass of Ballatar exhibit the most terrific overhanging rocks, which seem to threaten the passenger with instant destruction. Loch Cannor, a very romantic lake, three miles in circumference, is studded with several islands, upon the largest of which there formerly stood a hunting-seat of Malcolm Canmore; here the Cummings, in 1335, took shelter, and fortified themselves against King David Bruce, who had previously defeated them in the famous battle of Culblean; this also was the scene of a bloodless fight in the reign of William III, between the troops under General Mackay and some gentlemen of the neighbourhood, with their dependents, when the latter made so hasty a retreat as caused it to be termed in derision, "the race of of Tulloch." The mother church stands in this portion of the union, two miles north-east of Glenmuick; its patron saint was Nethalen, in honour of whose memory an annual festival is still held by the inhabitants on the 8th of January.

TULLOCH, shire of Perth, S.

Pop. with Pa.

A considerable village in the parish of Perth, situated on the banks of the Almond and Perth Canal. Here are extensive and long-established bleach-fields.

TUNBRIDGE, or TONBRIDGE, co. Kent.

London 30 m. SE. Pop. 7406.
M. D. Frid. Fair, Oct. 12.

A market-town and parish, in the lowey or hundred of Tonbridge, lathe of Aylesford, said to have derived its name from the little river Tun, one of the five streams into which the Medway is here divided. A castle was erected here by a Norman baron, in the eleventh century, which became a place of great strength and importance, and the town appears to have been gradually formed in its vicinity. William Rufus laid siege to this fortress during his contest with the partisans of his brother Robert, Duke of Normandy; it was captured by King John in the course of his war with the barons; and in the reign of Henry III., when it was besieged by his son, Prince Edward, the town was burnt by the garrison, in order to check the approach of the royal forces. This castle, which had belonged to the Clares, Earls of Gloucester, devolved to the crown in the reign of Edward II.; it afterwards became the property of the Stafford family; and on the attainder of Henry Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, under Henry VIII., it again fell into the possession of the king.

It has long since become ruinous, but the existing remains, which comprise the grand portal, flanked by two circular towers, and the artificial mount, where stood the keep, or donjon tower, show that it was once a very strong and extensive fortress. A high constable and borsholder are appointed triennially at the court-leet of the lord of the manor; meetings of the county magistrates take place in the town once a fortnight; and a court of requests is held here monthly, for the recovery of sums under 5*l.*, the jurisdiction of which extends over several adjacent hundreds. Members were returned to Parliament for this town once in the reign of Edward I., but the exercise of that privilege has since been discontinued. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Rochester; valued in K. B. 20*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*; patron, the Rev. Sir Charles Hardinge, Bart. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a handsome and capacious modern edifice, recently enlarged and improved. There are places of worship for Wesleyans and Calvinistic Methodists. A free grammar-school was founded here, under letters patent of Edward VI. in 1554, and amply endowed by Sir Andrew Judde, an alderman of the city of London. The management and patronage of this noble institution are vested in the Skinners' Company of London, and the Warden and Fellows of All Souls College, Oxford; the income belonging to it is about 4500*l.* a-year, from which the head master receives an annual salary of 500*l.*, and the under master 200*l.*; and the school is open for gratuitous instruction to boys in general residing in the town or within ten miles of it, and to other boys on the payment of small stipends to each of the masters. There are several exhibitions at both the English universities, to which pupils educated here are eligible. A national school has been founded for the instruction of 150 boys and the same number of girls. The town, which stands on the declivity of a hill, consists chiefly of one long wide street, paved and lighted, and contains some good houses; but, exclusive of the church, no public buildings except the town-hall and the market-house. At the entrance of the town from London is a causeway, constructed in 1528; and the river Medway, here navigable, is crossed by a stone bridge, built in 1775. There are also four more bridges over the several branches of the river. Coal and timber are brought hither by water from Maidstone; and besides the weekly markets, a considerable market for cattle is held the first Tuesday in each month. The principal manufactures are those of gunpowder and Tunbridge ware, or turnery goods. A priory of black canons was founded at Tunbridge in the twelfth century, by Richard de Clare, lord of the castle, and suppressed by Cardinal Wolsey in 1525. The hall, or refectory of the convent, which is the only part standing, is used as a barn.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS, cos. Kent and Sussex.

London 36 m. SE.

Pop. with Parishes.

A large and populous hamlet, partly within the parish of Tunbridge, partly in that of Speldhurst, both in the county of Kent, and partly in the parish of Frant, in the county of Sussex. It has long been known and much frequented as a watering-place, on account of its mineral spring, which was discovered or brought into estimation in 1606, when Dudley, Lord North, who had been consumptive, was restored to health by the use of the water; and Lord Abergavenny, who resided at Eridge, in the neighbourhood, was induced to make some local improvements for the accommodation of visitors. In the reign of Charles I., the queen, Henrietta Maria, came here to drink the water, when she and her attendants lodged under tents on the adjacent down, but many buildings were subsequently erected; and after the restoration of Charles II., the wells being visited by the queen and other persons of distinction, became a place of fashionable resort. In the latter part of the reign of that prince the present divisions of the place appear to have been established; and the appellations which they still retain, indicate the characteristic sentiments of the parties who projected or promoted the improvements of that period. Mount Sion was the adopted seat of the Presbyterians and the Independents, on which hill they had their respective meeting-houses; while Mount Ephraim was the station of the Baptists, of whose ascendancy almost the only remaining trace is a cemetery on the spot called Bishop's Down. Towards the end of the seventeenth century the walks and assembly-rooms were arranged according to their present form, the grounds round the spring having been cleared at a somewhat earlier period, and a turf-terrace constructed in the direction of the existing parade; at the same time a row of trees was planted, and temporary buildings were raised for the accommodation of tradesmen who came here during the season. About 1676, in consequence of an arrangement between the lord of the manor and his freehold tenants, more substantial buildings were erected; but these being destroyed by an accidental fire in 1687, were speedily replaced by others, occupying the site of those now standing. At the expiration of the lease, disputes arose between the lord and the tenants, which were at length settled by arbitration; and an act of parliament was obtained in 1710, in which there is a clause, declaring it "illegal to erect any buildings on the common, or, in short, to build on any spot where a building had not previously existed:" to which stipulation Tunbridge Wells, perhaps, owes much of its present attraction. Queen Anne, who was a frequent visiter here, gave a stone basin for the spring, whence it was subsequently called the Queen's Well; and she contributed towards the improvement of the walks, which having been paved with square bricks or tiles, received the name of the Pantiles, exchanged for that of the Parade, in 1793, when the spot was repaved with Purbeck stone. There are three principal groups of buildings, exclusive of those on Mount Pleasant, or the Calverley Estate, eastward of the new church, where, though the houses are only about fifty at present, extensive arrangements have been made for new erections. That part called the Wells, is situated at the point of junction of the three parishes, Tunbridge, Speldhurst, and Frant; and here are the spa, the public baths, the chapel, the parade, the hotels, and places of amusement, as the theatre, assembly-rooms, and circulating libraries; and also numerous shops and a market-place. Mount Sion, adjoining the Wells, on the north-east, forms with it at present a continuous rather than a distinct group of buildings. This extremely pleasant eminence, declining towards the west, is chiefly occupied by lodging-houses, agreeably shaded by trees; and the names which several of the buildings bear, as Northumberland House, Oldenburgh House, Bedford Place, &c., indicate their former appropriation as the residences of persons of rank. Here is situated the Grove, a tract of about four acres, laid out in walks and plantations, which was conveyed to trustees, for the amusement of visitors to the Wells, in 1703, by John, Earl of Buckingham. Mount Ephraim, about half a mile north-westward of the Parade, was once the most fashionable quarter, and the scene of public diversions; but the buildings now consist principally of private mansions and lodging-houses, intermixed with gardens and fields, extending from Bishop's Down to Culverden Row, on the London road. Amongst the numerous improvements carrying on, the New Park on the Calverley estate will be very striking, being studded with handsome stone-built villas of the first class. Calverley House adjoining has been the residence of the Duchess of Kent on her visits to Tunbridge Wells. The well, or spring, is situated in a sandy valley, encompassed by hills; the water as it rises running through an aperture into a stone basin, whence it is served by persons called Dippers, whose emoluments depend on the voluntary gratuities of visitors. This mineral water owes its virtues to the iron which it contains, held in solution by carbonic acid gas, its properties resembling those of what is called Spa water, from the Pouhon spring at Spa, in the Netherlands. It is reckoned efficacious in cases of dyspepsia, nervous affections, and other diseases attended with debility. The season for taking the water lasts from May to November. A large and handsome edifice has been erected here, called the Bath-house, comprising the requisite accommodations for hot and cold bathing. The living is a perpetual curacy in the arch-deaconry and diocese of Rochester; the patronage of which is vested in certain trustees. The church, which is dedicated to King Charles the Martyr, was built by subscription, in the reign of Charles II., and the interior is wainscoted with oak, and has an ornamented ceiling. Another church has been recently erected by Mr. Decimus Burton, in the pointed style of architecture, at the expense of about 12,000*l.*, partly by means of a grant from the commissioners for building new churches, and partly by voluntary contributions; it is a handsome Gothic structure, with a square tower at the west, and is ornamented with battlements and pinnacles. The curacy is in the gift of the Rector of Speldhurst. There are also places of worship for the Wesleyans and the followers of Lady Huntingdon. National schools for children of both sexes have been established here, which are supported by subscriptions, and there are other charitable institutions. The only considerable manufacture carried on at this place consists of toys and turnery-ware, of cherry-tree, box, sycamore, &c., probably introduced from Spa, on the continent, where articles of that kind have been manufactured for a long period in great variety. Races take place here in the month of August, every year, which are usually well attended.

TUNDERGARTH, shire of Dumfries, S. ;

P. T. Lockerby (66) 3½ m. SE. Pop. 518.

A parish, fourteen miles in length, and about one and a half in breadth, containing 7795 Scotch acres. It comprehends the declivity of a range of hills lying along the south-eastern side of the river Milk, and exhibits an inequality of surface so pleasingly diversified as to possess much picturesque beauty. It is principally appropriated to sheep-pasture, though many extensive patches are well cultivated, and potatoes are grown here in abundance. Around the chief seats in the parish, which are the Grange, Westwood, and Pierceby, there are some natural woods and flourishing plantations; and on Brunswark Hill are two large rectangular encampments, evidently Roman. The living is in the presbytery of Loehmaben and synod of Dumfries; patron, the Earl of Mansfield. There are considerable remains of the ancient castle of Tundergarth, formerly a chief seat of the noble family of Johnston, a surname now the most prevalent in the parish.

P. T. Newcastle-under-Lyne (150) 4 m. N b E.
Pop. 2622. M. D. Sat.

A market-town and liberty in the parish of Wolstanton and north division of the hundred of Pirehill. It is situated on an eminence, in the extensive district of the potteries. The Grand Trunk Canal passes near the town, and the great double tunnel, running two miles under Hare Castle Hill, is in the vicinity. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of porcelain, earthenware, blue bricks and tiles, and some chemical works, which are carried on to a considerable extent. In the neighbourhood are veins of coal, fine clay, limestone, iron-ore, and other mineral strata. The market was established in 1818, and the principal inhabitants, under the sanction of the lord of the manor, erected by means of shares, a neat court, and market-house. The town is governed by a constable, chosen at the manorial court-leet; it is in the honour of Tutbury, Duchy of Lancaster, and within the jurisdiction of a court of Pleas, held at Tutbury every third Tuesday, for the recovery of debts under 40*s.* A church is about to be erected by the commissioners under the late acts of parliament. Here are three places of worship for Wesleyan Methodists.

TURREFF, shire of Aberdeen, S.

Edinburgh 155 m. N b E. Pop. 1484. Market weekly. Fairs, last Tues. O. S. in Jan., March, and July; last Sat. O. S. in May; last Tues. but one O. S. in June; 1st Tues. O. S. in Oct. and Dec.

A market-town, post-town, and parish, in the district of the same name, the former pleasantly seated on the river Deveron, and noted for its manufactures of linen-yarn, thread, and brown linen. It was made a free burgh of barony by Charter of James IV., in 1511, under which it is entitled to hold its market and fairs, which are well supplied. The only public buildings of any note are the church, rebuilt in 1794, and an episcopal chapel, converted into a school-house in 1745, with a salary of 100*l.* Scotch, charged upon the estate of Dalgaty, the proprietors of which have the sole right of presentation. Here are vestiges of an hospital of the Knights Templars, also of an hospital for twelve poor men, founded in 1272, by Cumyn, Earl of Buchan, and liberally endowed in the next century by Robert Bruce. The parish is of an irregular figure, extending about four miles and a half in all directions from the town, and containing 16,896 Scotch acres, of which only one-third are under cultivation, though most of the remaining portion is capable of culture. At Dalgaty, Troup, Hatton, Laithers, Muirresk, and Gask, the chief seats in the parish, there are extensive plantations. The living is in the presbytery of Turreff and synod of Aberdeen; patron, the Earl of Fife. Traces of a Druidical temple are visible here.

TURTON, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Great Bolton (197) 5 m. N b E.
Pop. 2090.

A chapelry in the parish of Bolton and hundred of Salford, containing several cotton-spinning, bleaching, dyeing, and printing-works; and the weaving of cotton by hand-looms is extensively carried on by the cottagers. A manorial court is held twice a-year. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Chester; certified value 4*l.* 14*s.*; ann. val. P. R. 120*l.*; chapel ded. to St. Bartholomew; patrons (1829) Mr. and Mrs. Frere. Here is a place of worship for Unitarians. A school, in which ten boys are clothed and educated, was endowed by Humphrey Cheetham, Esq., in 1746, who also made provision for ten boys of this township, at Manchester College. Another school was founded and endowed by Abigail Cheetham, in which six boys are clothed and instructed. Turton Tower, formerly the residence of the Orrells, the Cheethams, and the Greames, is an embattled structure, four stories high, now occupied as a farm-house.

A parish in the hundred of Ploughley; living, a dis. rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford; valued in K. B. 3*l.* 5*s.*; patron (1829) Sir N. H. Dashwood, Bart.

TUTBURY, co. Stafford.

P. T. Burton-upon-Trent (125) 4½ m. NW b N.
Pop. 1444.

A parish, and formerly a market-town, in the north division of the hundred of Offlow. It is situated on the west bank of the river Dove, which is crossed by a stone bridge of five arches; it was erected into a free borough at a very early period, and possessed a variety of valuable privileges, though it never had the right of sending members to parliament. It had a good market, which gradually declined, as that of Burton increased, and at length was discontinued altogether. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in wool-combing, and on the river are extensive corn and cotton-spinning mills; there is also a considerable cut-glass manufactory. The King, as Duke of Lancaster, is lord of the manor, or honour of Tutbury, the jurisdiction of which extends over a great portion of Staffordshire, and into several of the neighbouring counties; courts-leet and baron are held annually in his majesty's name; also a court of pleas every third Tuesday for the recovery of all debts under 40*s.*, contracted within the honour. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Stafford and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry; valued in K. B. 7*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 130*l.*; patron (1829) the Duke of Devonshire. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a portion of an old priory church; it is a large massive building, with a square embattled tower, surmounted by four small pinnacles, and is a fine specimen of the Norman style of architecture. Here are places of worship for Independents, Calvinistic, Primitive, and Wesleyan Methodists. The freeschool was founded and endowed by Richard Wakefield, who also bequeathed land and tithes for charitable purposes. The castle is said to have been first erected by Henry de Ferrars, a Norman nobleman; subsequently it became the property of John of Gaunt, who rebuilt the greater part of it on the ancient site, in 1350. Mary, Queen of Scots, was for some time imprisoned in this fortress, and at the commencement of the civil war it was garrisoned for the king, but in 1646 it was nearly demolished by order of parliament; the ruins stand on an alabaster hill, of considerable elevation, commanding a very fine and varied prospect, and are still sufficient to indicate its former extent and grandeur. On the declivity of this eminence formerly stood a Benedictine priory, founded by Henry de Ferrars, about the year 1080. The country between Tutbury and Needwood Forest abounds with alabaster. Ann Moore, who was said to have subsisted for nearly five years without food, resided here during the period of her imposture.

TUTNAL, co. Warwick.

P. T. Broomsgrove (116) 2 m. ESE.
Pop. with Cobley 460.

A hamlet in the parish of Tardebigg and Alcester division of the hundred of Barlichway.

P. T. Aylsham (118) 3 m. E. Pop. 228.

A parish in the hundred of South Erpingham; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 0*s.* 7½*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 50*l.*; church ded. to St. Peter and St. Paul; patron the Bishop of Ely.

TUXFORD, co. Nottingham.

London 137 m. N b W. Pop. 979. M. D. Mond. Fairs, May 12, for cattle, sheep, pigs, and poultry; Sept. 25 and 28, for hops.

A market-town and parish in the South Clay division of the wapentake of Bassetlaw. It is situated on the great north road, and often called Tuxford-in-the-Clay, from its situation in that division of the wapentake. The town is small, and of modern appearance, having been rebuilt since 1702, when the old town was destroyed by fire. The inhabitants derive their principal support from travellers, but a rather extensive trade is carried on in hops, large quantities of which are grown in the neighbourhood. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Nottingham and diocese of York; valued in K. B. 4*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.*; patron, Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, which is dedicated to St. Nicholas, consists of a nave and side aisle, with a spire, containing five good bells. Here is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed, in 1670, by Charles Read, Esq., who directed 20*l.* per annum to be paid to the master, and 5*l.* per annum towards the maintenance of four boys, being the sons of poor widows of ministers and of decayed gentlemen and their widows, who are not able to maintain their charge from the age of seven to sixteen years. Here are also sundry benefactions for instructing poor children.

TWAMBROOKE, co. Pal. of Chester.

P. T. Northwich (173) ½ m. E.
Pop. with Wilton.

A township in the parish of Great Budworth and hundred of Northwich.

TWEEDDALE, shires of Peebles and Berwick, S.

The extensive district through which the river Tweed winds its serpentine course of about thirty-six miles from its source in the parish of Tweedsmuir. Its name is frequently applied to the shire of Peebles (which see); and it gives the title of Marquis and Earl to the ancient family of Hay.

TWEEDMOUTH, co. Pal. of Durham.

P. T. Berwick-upon-Tweed (337) adjacent.
Pop. 4673.

A parish in Islandshire, situated on the south side of the river Tweed, forming a handsome suburb to the town of Berwick, to which it is joined by an elegant stone bridge. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in manufactures, ship-building, and in a very productive salmon-fishery. Petty sessions are held here every Saturday. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Northumberland and diocese of Durham; certified value 15*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 76*l.*; patrons, the Dean and Chapter of Durham. The church, which is dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is a neat Gothic structure, rebuilt in 1780, and was formerly a chapel of ease to Holy Island. Here is a chapel for Scotch Presbyterians. In 1203 King John attempted to raise a fortress here to repel the Scots, but the work was twice interrupted, and ultimately demolished by William the Lion, King of Scotland, who then possessed Berwick.

TWEEDSMUIR, shire of Peebles, S.

P. T. Beild (35) ½ m. E. Pop. 265.

A parish, formerly included in the parish of Drummelzier, by the name of Upper Drummelzier, but separated and erected into a distinct parish in 1643. It is about nine miles square, and agreeably diversified with lofty hills, plains, and muirs, the former being clothed to their summits with the richest verdure, affording pasturage to many thousand sheep, of a breed highly esteemed both for the fine quality of the wool and delicate flavour of the mutton. The mountains of Hartfield and Broad Law rise to an elevation of 2800 feet above the sea; and on the south-west boundary is Tweed Well, the source of the celebrated river Tweed, which, in its course to the north-east here, receives the Core, Fruid, Talla, and some smaller tributary streams. The great road between Edinburgh and Dumfries, through Moffat, intersects this parish. The living is in the presbytery of Peebles and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale; patron, Scot of Dunninald. The church, built in 1648, stands on a mount, whereon there was anciently a Druidical temple. Near Hawkshaw are the ruins of an old chapel, in the cemetery of which a bust of General Monk was found in 1775. Several cairns are to be met with, a few miles above Beild; and on the high road many other vestiges of antiquity are discernible. Here are also the remains of three ancient castles of Oliver, Fruid, and Hawkshaw.

TWEMLOW, co. Pal. Chester.

P. T. Middlewich (167) 5½ m. ENE.
Pop. 152.

A township in the parish of Sandbach and hundred of Northwich, possessed and owned with several other townships in this county, in the respective reigns of Richard I. John, and Henry III. by Sidulphus Twemlow, who served the office of high sheriff of the county in the same reign, and was the common ancestor of the Twemlow families, still residing in the neighbouring townships of Arclyd and Hatherton.

TWICKENHAM, co. Middlesex.

London 10 m. W b S. Pop. 4206. Fairs, Holy Thurs., and Aug. 9 and 10.

A village and parish, in the hundred of Isleworth, the name of which is probably derived from the situation, between two (twain) streams, which here fall into the Thames. This place has long been noted for the pleasantness of its site, on the border of a great river, and at a convenient distance from the metropolis; and hence it has, at different periods, become the residence of persons of distinguished taste and celebrity in the literary world. Pope the poet had a house here which was pulled down by a subsequent proprietor, the Baroness Howe, but a grotto which he had constructed in the adjoining pleasure-ground has been preserved. The principal attraction of Twickenham is the villa called Strawberry Hill, a mansion chiefly erected, ornamented, and furnished with appropriate elegance in the Gothic style, by Horace Walpole, Earl of Orford, after whose death it became the property of the ingenious amateur artist, the Hon. Anne Seymour Damer. Among the residents here may also be mentioned the witty dramatist Colley Cibber; the distinguished comedian Catherine Clive; and Henrietta Howard, Countess of Suffolk, who passed her latter days at this place, after having been the mistress of George II.; whose correspondence with persons of rank and literary celebrity, published since her death, affords proof of the lady's taste and talents. The living is a vicarage, in the archdeaconry of Middlesex and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 11l.; and in the patronage of the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a brick building, with stone ornaments of the Doric order, erected in 1714, and annexed to an ancient embattled tower, which belonged to the former church. Between Twickenham and Richmond is a chapel of ease, built about 1721. Here are places of worship for the Wesleyan Methodists and the Independents. A national school for children of both sexes, established in 1809, is partly supported by the endowments belonging to three small foundations, now consolidated with it. There are also other charitable benefactions. Within the parish are gunpowder and oil mills. Nearly opposite the church, in the centre of the river Thames, is an island called Twickenham Ait, about eight acres in extent, chiefly laid out with ornamental plantations; and here likewise is the Eel-pie House, a place of entertainment of ancient date, which was handsomely rebuilt in 1830.

TYNDRUM, shire of Perth, S.

P. T. Killin (72) 12 m. W. Pop. with Pa.

A village in the parish of Killin, situated on the great western military road, about halfway between Killin and Dalmally. It possesses a good inn, which is said to stand upon higher ground than that occupied by any other house in Scotland. There is a lead-mine at a short distance, and most of the workmen reside in the village.

TYNINGHAM, shire of Haddington, S.

P. T. Dunbar (28) 4½ m. W b N.

Pop. with Whitekirk.

An ancient parish and village, annexed, in 1761, to the united parishes of Whitekirk and Aldham. The surface is flat, and in a high state of cultivation. It is intersected by the navigable river Tyne, which falls into the German Ocean on the east, where seals are found in considerable numbers, a circumstance to which the great scarcity of fish on this coast is chiefly attributed. The ancient church stood on a gentle eminence, rising from the north bank of the Tyne; and at the mouth of the river is Tynningham House, the noble residence of the Earls of Haddington, surrounded by the extensive and flourishing woods planted by Earl Thomas in the beginning of the eighteenth century, which produce timber equal to any brought from the Baltic. Similar plantations, which envelop the elegant seat of Mr. Baird, at New Byth, in this parish, were planted by the same nobleman, who published a tract on the cultivation of forest-trees, for which see "Reid's Scottish Gardener."

TYNRON, shire of Dumfries, S.

P. T. Minniehive (66) 2½ m. NE. Pop. 513.

A parish, fifteen miles in length, and about four in breadth, comprehending a long strath, through which runs the Shinnel, a stream that rises at the upper extremity of the valley, forms a picturesque cascade, termed Aird Linn, and finally loses itself and name in the river Scarr. The sides of the adjoining hills, along which runs an old Roman road, are appropriated to the rearing of sheep. Living, in the presbytery of Penpont and synod of Dumfries; patron, the Marquis of Queensbury. There is a school with an annual stipend of 22*l.*, derived from a bequest of John Gibson, Esq., at the disposal of the Society for propagating Christian Knowledge. Vestiges of several ancient fortifications are visible in the parish; and on the beautiful eminence, called the Doon of Tynron, are the ruins of a castle, whence there is a most extensive prospect.

TYNEHAM, co. Dorset.

P. T. Corfe Castle (116) 6½ m. W b S.

Pop. 240.

A parish in the hundred of Hasilor, Blandford division, situated near the English Channel, on the coast of which is a circular battery for the defence of Worbarrow Bay. The living is a rectory, with that of Steeple, in the archdeaconry of Dorset and diocese of Bristol; valued in K. B. at 11*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*; church ded. to St. Mary; patronage with Steeple rectory.

TYNEMOUTH, co. Northumberland.

P. T. Newcastle-upon-Tyne (274) 9½ m. ENE.

Pop. of Pa. 24,820. Of To. 9454.

A parish and township in the east division of Castle ward. It is of great extent, and forms the south-east corner of the county, being bounded on the south by the river Tyne, and on the east by the ocean. It consists principally of one long street; the houses are in general well built, and during the bathing season, it is a place of fashionable resort, having commodious and elegant baths, erected in 1807. The parish abounds with coal, contains some ironstone, and the only magnesian limestone strata in the county. In the time of the ancient Britons, this place was called Penbal Crag, or the Head of the Rampart on the Rock; where, from remains discovered in 1783, the Romans are supposed to have had a strong fortress. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Northumberland and diocese of Durham; valued in K. B. at 24*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 28*l.* 5*s.*; patrons (1829) the Duke of Northumberland and Sir J. D. Astley, Bart., alternately. The church, which is dedicated to Christ, was built in 1668, at North Shields. A new church is about to be erected here, by the commissioners under the late acts of parliament. In 1825 Mr. Kettlewell bequeathed the sum of 7000*l.*, to build and endow a school in this parish. About the year 625 a small chapel, composed of wood, was built by Edwin, King of Northumberland; it was afterwards rebuilt with stone by Oswald, and having been plundered and destroyed by the Danes, was refounded by Tostig, Earl of Northumberland; in 1074 it was annexed to the monastery of Jarrow, and both houses were made cells to the church of Durham. In 1090 it was elevated into a priory of black canons, by Earl Mowbray, who, during his conspiracy against William Rufus, converted it into a fortress, when it was reduced to a ruin, but was again rebuilt in 1110. After other ravages, it became the occasional residence of the queens of Edward I. and II., was afterwards plundered by the Scots, and eventually surrendered in 1539. After the dissolution, the church continued to be parochial till 1657, when, having become ruinous, a new one was erected at North Shields. The venerable ruins of the ancient priory consist chiefly of a gateway, exploratory turret, the eastern part of the church, and other parts now converted into a magazine for military stores, the tower having been appropriated as a barrack, capable of accommodating about 400 soldiers. These interesting remains stand on a peninsula of stupendous rocks, at the mouth of the Tyne, against which the sea sometimes breaks with great fury. The approach from the west is by means of a drawbridge, and by a gateway of square form, the whole being defended by a double wall, extending to the shore, and a deep outer ditch. During the civil wars, this fortress was defended by the Earl of Newcastle in 1642, but after a short siege, was taken by General Leven in 1645: a governor and deputy-governor are still appointed to it. Clifford's Fort was built by government in 1672; it is situated at the mouth of the river, commanding the entrance to the harbour. In 1758 barracks were erected at Tynemouth, for the accommodation of 1000 men; but at the general peace they were sold, and have since been converted into dwelling-houses, now bearing the appellation of Percy Square.

TYREAAGH, co. Sligo, Connaught, I.

Pop. 50,351.

The seventh and last baronial division of the county. It is encumbered with mountains, intersected by bogs, and includes eight parishes, besides the town of Ardnaree.

TYRESKENEDY, co. Fermanagh, Ulster, I.

Pop. 20,127.

One of eight baronies included in the civil division of the county. It extends over a surface of thirty-five square miles, comprises five parishes, and the towns of Enniskillen, Tempo, Lisbellaw, and Ballnamalland.

TYRHUGH, co. Donegal, Ulster, I.

Pop. 80,649.

One of the six baronial divisions of the county. It contains five parishes, besides the towns of Ballyshannon, Donegal, and Ballintra.

TYRIE, shire of Aberdeen, S.

P. T. Aberdeen (8) 4 m. S.E. Pop. 362.

A parish in the district of Deer, ten miles in length and four miles and a half in breadth. It is pleasingly diversified with hill and dale and irrigated with several rivulets. The soil, where cultivated, is tolerably fertile, and great improvements have lately been made in agriculture around the new manufacturing village of Pitsligo, founded by Sir William Forbes, upon his estate so called. Living, in the presbytery of Deer and synod of Aberdeen; patron, Lord Saltoun. The church, a venerable structure, is said to have been erected very early in the eleventh century, when the Thane of Buchan defeated the Danes near its site. A religious house, termed "The White Kirk of Buchan" formerly stood here.

TYRIE, shire of Sutherland, S.

Edinburgh, 215 m. N b W. Pop. with Pa.

A village in the parish of Lairg, situated near the south-eastern extremity of Loch Shin on the great road which intersects the shire. Here is a general post-office.

TYRONE, County of, Ulster, I.

N to S 54 m. E to W 25 m. No. of acres 757,594. Baronies 4. Boroughs 1. Market-towns 7. Parishes 43. Pop. 261,865. Memb. of Pt. 3. Diocese of Clogher. Archdiocese of Armagh.

One of the nine counties into which the province of Ulster is divided. It was first erected into a shire in July, 1591, when Dungannon was selected as the county-town, although the assizes now are held in Omagh. Its boundaries are, on the north, Londonderry; on the east, Lough Neagh; on the south-east, the county of Armagh; on the south, Monaghan; on the south-west, Fermanagh; and Donegal forms its limit on the west. The surface and soil of this county present endless variety. The whole of Dugannon barony is rich, fruitful land, and abounds with small towns and villages. Strabane barony, on the contrary, is extremely rugged, and much less productive, a great portion of it labouring under the mass of the Munterlony and Cairntogher mountains. There are two insulated hills in this barony, known to travellers on the great northern road from their conspicuous position and remarkable forms; they are usually called Bessey Bell and Mary Grey. The western parts of Omagh are encumbered with the Corragh and Longfield mountains, but the remainder of the barony is level and productive. The whole of Clogher barony may be said to be available land. Although the rivers here are not large, they are numerous, and beneficially applied in facilitating the bleaching of linen, and supplying artificial lines of navigation. The Blackwater rises near Ballygawley, and, after a tortuous course, and approaching some of the best towns in the county, discharges itself into Lough Neagh, near Maghery. The heart of the county enjoys a plentiful supply from the streams of the Cameron, Poe, Moyle, Garaghy, Onreagh, Derg, Monterloney, Drinna, and other brooks, all of which prove tributary at last, to the Mourne and Foyle. Whilst the Oona, Devlin, Torreen, and several minor streams, throw themselves into the channel of the Blackwater. The Balindary flows incessantly into the Great Lough Neagh. There are many pools, or small expansions of water within the county, but they do not reach the dignity of a lake. The Blackwater is well stored with salmon, pike, eels, and trout, the other rivers contain few salmon, but abundance of all other species common to the Irish rivers. The character of the soil is admirably calculated for the promotion of agriculture, and production of every species of grain. Barley is a favourite crop, and large quantities are annually conveyed to Newry for exportation. Limestone supports the soil generally; ironstone is found in a few places, and coals of the inflammable kind in the barony of Dungannon. There is some difficulty and uncertainty in working the Tyrone collieries, from the number of faults or dislocations which occur in the beds, but notwithstanding this impediment, they are worked at a very considerable profit. The four baronies are named Clogher, Dungannon, Omagh, and Strabane; and, in these are comprised the assizes town of Omagh, Dungannon, and Strabane, prosperous and populous places; the ancient city of Clogher, Ballygawley, Moy, Caledon, Aughnacloy, Newtown Stewart, and Dromore; all respectable, though small towns. The staple manufacture here is linen, and every market-town in the county has its appointed day for the sale of linens. Strabane is one of the best markets in Ulster, and the strong cloths sold here are much esteemed. The coal trade is rather increasing, but that article is too much required at home to afford a prospect of an export trade. A canal has been opened in the coal district, extending from Coal Island to the navigable Blackwater, a distance of three miles, and thence again, a short cut is made through the Isthmus of Maghery into Lough Neagh, enabling a supply of coals to be conveyed by water to the shores of the four different counties, which encircle the Lough. The navigation is fed by the river Torreen, and a railway connects the head of the canal with the coal works. A second line of navigation is in progress through this county southward of the Blackwater. The county returns two members to the Imperial Parliament, and Dungannon borough sends one. The family of Beresford enjoy the title of Earls of Tyrone.

TYTHERTON KELLAWAYS, co. Wilts.

P. T. Chippenham (93) 3 m. ENE.
Pop. with Pa.

A tithing in the parish of Bremhill and hundred of Chippenham, which deserves notice from the peculiar circumstances attending its origin and progressive improvement. A native of Reading, named Conicker, having embraced the doctrines of Whitfield and Wesley, at the period of their first promulgation, became so zealous a devotee, that he expended his patrimonial estates in building meeting-houses in different parts of the country. He erected one at Tytherton, and attached to it a burying-ground, garden, &c. Here he fixed his own residence, and propagated his opinions with great success during several years; but, on the schism between Wesley and Whitfield, he joined the Moravians, and induced most of his followers to do the same. Accordingly, two cottages were purchased, and converted into a house for the reception of the young unmarried women belonging to the establishment. A house for young men, on the same plan, was attempted to be established, but without success. In this situation, with slow advances towards the end proposed, Tytherton settlement continued till about thirty years ago, when the society having grown more numerous and wealthy, built a new chapel and sister-house, and added to the former a neat residence for their pastor. Since that period they have erected a large school-house, into which female children of every persuasion are received indiscriminately as boarders, for the purpose of instruction in morality and in the elements of knowledge.

UDNY, shire of Aberdeen, S.

P. T. Old Meldrum (139) 4 m. E b S.
Pop. 1328.

A parish in the district of Ellon, about seven miles and a half square, erected out of several of the adjoining parishes, about the end of the sixteenth century. The surface is undulated, and the eminences are covered with a short grass, affording good pasturage. Much of the land is enclosed and well cultivated, but there is a considerable quantity of marshy ground, unproductive, except in peats. This district, which has long been famous for its excellent butter, is subdivided into dairy-farms, upon most of which there are quarries of good limestone and granite. The living is in the presbytery of Ellon and synod of Aberdeen; patron, Mr. Udney, whose mansion is the only residence of note in the parish. The present church was erected about ten years ago, the old structure having been much too small to accommodate the parishioners. The parochial school has a stipend of 300 merks, with a dwelling-house and land attached.

UFFCULME, co. Devon.

P. T. Collumpton (160) 4½ m. NE.

Pop. 1979. Fairs, Wed. bef. Good Frid.; June 29; and the middle Wed. in Sept., for cattle.

A decayed market-town and parish in the hundred of Bampton. During the last century great quantities of serges were made here, and some flannels are still manufactured. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Exeter; valued in K. B. 18*l.* 0*s.* 2½*d.*; church ded. to St. Mary; patron, the Prebendary of Uffculme, Salisbury cathedral. Here are also places of worship for Baptists and Independents. The free grammar-school, in which two boys of this parish and two of Burlescombe, or Holcombe Rogus, are educated, was founded and endowed by Nicholas Ayshford in 1701.

UFFINGTON, co. Berks.

P. T. Great Faringdon (68) 4 m. SSE.
Pop. 925.

A parish in the hundred of Shrivenham; living, a dis. vicarage with the curacies of Balking and Woolstone, in the archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Salisbury; valued in K. B. 21*l.*; patron (1829) J. A. Honblon, Esq. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome cruciform structure, the spire of which was destroyed by lightning, about the year 1750. The freeschool was founded and endowed by Thomas Saunders, in 1636, for twelve boys of this parish, and six from Wolstone. The Wilts and Berks Canal passes through this parish. Uffington castle is a large encampment, surrounded by a double vallum; it is 700 feet from east to west, 500 from north to south, and is supposed to be a work of the ancient Britons, afterwards occupied by the Romans. A little to the west of it is a large tumulus, called Wayland Smith, and various other tumuli are scattered on the downs, the most considerable of which are those called the Seven Barrows. In the neighbourhood is that remarkable antiquity, called the White Horse. See Lambourn.

UFFINGTON, co. Lincoln.

P. T. Stamford (89) 3 m. E b N. Pop. 466.

A parish in the wapentake of Ness, parts of Kesteven; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 21*l.* 5*s.* 2½*d.*; patron (1829) the Earl of Lindsey. A township in the parish of Lythe and east division of the liberty of Langbaugh.

UG, shire of Ross, S.

Pop. 2875.

A parish in the island of Lewis, stretching ten miles in length and nine in breadth along the western coast, where the surface is tolerably level and well cultivated; but the interior, which in some places rises into lofty mountains, is much interspersed with tracts of heath and small lochs, each the source of a considerable stream containing salmon. Many good harbours indent this parish, the most commodious of which is Loch Roag, wherein the largest fleets may find anchorage in perfect security. Fish in great variety, found here, together with the manufacture of kelp, afford profitable employment to the inhabitants, whose prevailing language is the Gaelic. The living is in the presbytery of Lewis and synod of Glenelg; patron, the Crown. There are two churches, both of them erected thirty years ago. Near the village of Calarnish is a perfect Druidical temple, consisting of a circle of twelve huge stones standing six feet apart and seven feet in height, with one in the centre thirteen feet high, leaving an avenue on the north formed by a double range of similar stones, placed six on either hand; also three single lines of three stones each pointing towards the other three cardinal points. At a place called Melista are the ruins of a nunnery termed the House of the old Black Women; and at Carlaway there is one of the most entire Duns, or Danish forts, in the kingdom: it is perfectly circular, with a double stone wall thirty feet high, and much broader at the base than at the summit.

UIST, NORTH, shire of Inverness, S.

Pop. of Pa. 4971.

An island of the Hebrides, which, with the adjacent isles of Boreray, Grimsay, Heisker, Heray, Kirkboot, Orinsay, Vallay, and some small holms, forms a very extensive parish of the same name, containing 60,000 acres. It is bounded on the east by the Little Minsh channel, which separates it from Skye; on the west by the Atlantic; on the north by the sound of Harris, separating it from Lewis; and on the south by the narrow channel of Benbecula, which is sometimes dry at low water. This island is about twenty miles in length, from twelve to eighteen in breadth, and indented on the eastern side by several considerable inlets of the sea, forming good harbours, of which Loch Moddie, Cheese Bay, Loch Evort, Ruchevea, and Kellin, are the most commodious; the former affording secure anchorage for the largest ships, and easy ingress or egress with almost any wind. The western coast is extremely dangerous of approach, and may be termed quite inaccessible even to the smallest craft, on account of the numerous shoals and rocks with which it is environed. The surface is much varied; around the harbours on the east it is uneven and barren, while along the western and northern coasts it is tolerably level, with a soil better adapted for cultivation and yielding luxuriant crops of barley and oats as well as fine pasture for cattle; but the interior generally presents a dreary alternation of mires, hillocks covered with heath, and fresh-water lakes, which however abound with trout and are the resort of vast flocks of aquatic fowl. There is scarcely a tree to be seen, nor is there any appearance of verdure in the winter, but the want of it is supplied by feeding the cattle either upon straw or upon the sea-ware thrown up in tempestuous weather. An immense quantity of kelp is manufactured by the inhabitants, amounting to about 1200 tons annually. The living is in the presbytery of Uist and synod of Glenelg; patron, Lord Macdonald, who is proprietor of the whole island. There are six places of worship in the parish, the principal and most central of which is at Kilmuir. A new church was completed at Trumisgarry in March, 1829, under the act for building additional churches in the Highlands. The parochial school has a stipend of 300 merks, with 25*l.* per annum from the royal bounty, and has the privilege of sending one boy yearly to the university. Many Druidical temples and Danish forts are yet remaining here; the former are particularly noticed in the history of the Druids by Dr. Smith.

UIST, SOUTH, shire of Inverness, S.

Pop. 6038.

An island of the Hebrides, which, with the smaller islands of Benbecula, Eriskay, Rona, Wia, and several adjacent holmes, constitutes an extensive parish, bearing the same name. This island, which stretches thirty-two miles from north to south, by about ten in breadth, lies between those of Benbecula on the north, and Barray on the south, having the Atlantic Ocean on the west, and the channel which separates it from Skye on the east. Its principal harbours are Loch Bee, Loch Boisdale, Loch Evort, and Loch Skipport, all admirably adapted for fishing-stations, and the manufacture of kelp, of which about 1100 tons are annually produced. The surface exhibits a similitude to that of North Uist, the western and northern districts being the most fertile, while the interior presents a continuation of swamps and lakes, and the eastern extremity rises into lofty rugged mountains, partially covered with heath and pasturage for cattle, horses, sheep, and goats, which are reared here for exportation. Various kinds of game abound in the island, but the grain produced is inadequate to the supply of its inhabitants. Living, in the presbytery of Uist and synod of Glenelg; patron, the Crown. The church having been in ruins ever since the Reformation, divine service is performed in the two parochial school-houses. There are three places of worship belonging to the Roman Catholics, and a Protestant missionary is established on Benbecula, with a stipend of 30*l.*, paid from the royal bounty. Remains of Druidical temples and Danish duns are discernible in many parts of this parish.

The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Canterbury; valued in K. B. 16*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*; patron (1829) J. H. P. Clarke, Esq. The church, which is dedicated to All Saints, contains several ancient brasses, and was formerly collegiate.

ULDALE, co. Cumberland.

P. T. Ireby (304) 2½ m. SSE. Pop. 343.
Fair, Aug. 29, for sheep.

A parish in Allerdale ward, below Darwent. It derives its name from the river Ellen, which was anciently called Uln, and has its principal source here, in two small lakes, well stocked with various kinds of fish; about a mile and a half from which, a brook falling from a lofty mountain over several rocks and precipices, forms a beautiful cascade, called White Water Dash. Great quantities of sheep are bred in this parish, which abounds with coal, limestone, freestone, and peat. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Carlisle; valued in K. B. 17l. 18s. 1½d.; ann. val. P. R. 120l.; patron (1829) the Rev. Joseph Cape. The church was rebuilt by the parishioners in 1730. The freeschool, in which from fifty to sixty children are educated, was founded in 1726, by Matthew Caldbeck, and has an annual income of about 47l.

ULEY, co. Gloucester.

P. T. Dursley (103) 3 m. E. Pop. 2655.

A parish in the upper division of the hundred of Berkeley, pleasantly situated in a valley, bounded by lofty hills on every side but the west, and watered by a fine stream, formed by the springs which descend from the surrounding eminences. The inhabitants are principally employed in the clothing trade, which is extensively carried on here. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Gloucester; valued in K. B. 12l. 3s. 4d.; ann. val. P. R. 140l.; church ded. to St. Giles; patron, the Lord Chancellor. Here are places of worship for Baptists, and Independent and Wesleyan Methodists. On an eminence, north-west of this place, is an ancient encampment, called Uley Bury, and supposed to be Roman, from the various coins that have been discovered.

ULGHAM, co. Northumberland.

P. T. Morpeth (238) 4 m. NE b N. Pop. 349.

A parochial chapelry in the east division of Morpeth ward, pleasantly situated on the south side of the river Line, on the banks of which coal is found. A weekly market was formerly held here, which has long been obsolete, though the ancient cross still remains. The living is a curacy, subordinate to the rectory of Morpeth, in the archdeaconry of Northumberland and diocese of Durham, not in charge; chapel ded. to St. John; patronage with Morpeth rectory.

ULINISH, shire of Inverness, S.

Pop. with Pa.

An island of the Hebrides, in the parish of Kilmuir, Isle of Skye, remarkable only for an extensive cavern on the sea-coast, and for one of the Danish duns, so common in these islands.

ULLAPOOL, shire of Cromarty, S.

Edinburgh 216 m. NNW. Dingwall 38 m. NW. Pop. with Pa.

A seaport and thriving village in the parish of Lochbroom, situated at the mouth of a small river on the eastern coast of that arm of the Atlantic Ocean which gives name to the parish. This is a principal station of the herring fishery, founded by the British Society in 1788, and from its central position with regard to that branch of trade, has ever since been gradually increasing in extent and population. A new church was completed here in April, 1829, under the provisions of the Highland Church Act. The harbour, which is capable of containing any number of vessels of the largest size, is defended by a pier, and possesses a commodions quay, for taking in or discharging cargoes with ease and safety. Much inconvenience, attended with considerable loss, was formerly sustained by the inhabitants, from the frequent inundations that poured into the village from the adjacent heights; but water drains having since been constructed at the society's expense, the evil no longer exists. Here is a general post-office; and a regular packet sails weekly with the mail, and passengers to and from Stornoway, Isle of Lewis. In the neighbourhood there are quarries of limestone and freestone, and very extensive peat mosses. Wool is a staple commodity of the surrounding country, and the river is well adapted to turn machinery for an extensive manufacture of woollen cloth.

ULPHA, co. Cumberland.

P. T. Ravenglass (279) 8 m. E b S. Pop. 368.
Fairs, Mond. before Easter; July 5 and 1st Mond. in Sept., for sheep.

A chapelry in the parish of Millom, Allerdale ward above Darwent, extending along the western bank of the river Duddon to the mountains Hard Knot and Wrynose, where the counties of Cumberland, Westmorland, and Lancaster unite, and are marked by a stone called Three-shire Stone. A Roman road crosses both these mountains; and about half-way up the former are the remains of Hard Knot Castle, once a fortress of great importance, but the date of its erection is unknown. The coppices, with which this district abounds, produce a large supply of wood for making hoops and bobbins, the former being generally sent to Liverpool, and the latter to the cotton, woollen, linen, and silk manufacturers in other towns. Here are excellent quarries of light blue slate, of which about 1400 tons are raised annually. Two copper-mines were formerly worked, and zinc has also been found. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Richmond and diocese of Chester; certified value 5*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 69*l.*; chapel ded. to St. John; patron, the Vicar of Millom. Here is also a place of worship for Anabaptists. The Old Hall, now a farm-house, bears marks of great antiquity; near it is a well called Lady's Dnb, where it is said a lady was surprised and killed by one of the wolves that anciently infested this wild region.

ULPHA, co. Westmorland.

B. 3*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 120*l.* The chapel is a very ancient edifice; patronage with Barmston rectory.

ULSTER, Province of, I.

N to S 86 m. E to W 124 m. No. of acres, 5,092,137. Counties 9. Parishes 340. Pop. 1,998,494. Dioceses of Armagh, Dromore, Down, Connor, Derry, Raphoe, Clogher, Killmore, and Meath. Archdiocese of Armagh.

The most northerly of the four provincial divisions of Ireland, and nearly conterminous with the archdiocese or province of Armagh. It is bounded on the west and north by the Atlantic Ocean, is separated from Scotland by the north channel of the Irish Sea, and the provinces of Connaught and Leinster form its southern termination. The surface partakes of both a mountainous and level character; the former, however, occupies the larger portion, Donegal, Derry, parts of Antrim, Tyrone, and Down, being engrossed by mountains of enormous mass. The structure of the Donegal and Down ranges is granitic, and of the Antrim basaltic. Limestone pervades the inland or central region, where coal is found. The civil division comprehends the counties of Antrim, Armagh, Cavan, Donegal, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry, Monaghan, and Tyrone, besides the county of the town of Carrickfergus. The sea-shore is indented by some noble harbours, the most frequented are Loughs Strangford, Carrickfergus, or Belfast, Larne, Foyle, Swilly, and the bay of Donegal. The Bann, Foyle, Blackwater, and Erne, are the most valuable of the rivers, but the two spacious lakes of Erne and Neagh, resembling inland seas, may be considered as an equivalent for many navigable rivers. The linen trade has long prospered in this province, and the comfort, independence, and high character of the north of Ireland may in some degree be referred to its long enjoyment of a profitable manufacture. The inhabitants are a good deal intermingled with the Scotch, a number of settlers from that country, and some from England, having been planted here upon the forfeited lands, by King James I. The lands distributed amongst the settlers amounted to 800,000 acres. The ancient inhabitants of Ulster were called by Ptolemy Venicnii, Robagdii, Darnii, Voluntii, and Erdini. The title of Earl of Ulster is borne by princes of the royal blood exclusively.

ULTING, co. Essex.

P. T. Witham (38) 4 m. SSW. Pop. 175.

A parish in the hundred of Witham, situated on the north side of the Chelmer and Blackwater navigation; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Colchester and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 7*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 95*l.*; church ded. to All Saints; patron (1829) R. Nicholson, Esq. ULVA, shire of Argyll, S.

Pop. with Pa.

An island of the Hebrides, in the parish of Kilninian and district of Mull, lying in Loch Tuadh to the northward of Staffa, between it and Mull. From each of these islands it is about two miles distant, and averages two miles in diameter, but the surface is exceedingly rugged and barren, and the coast exhibits similar basaltic columns to those of Staffa, though of a lighter colour, and inferior in dimensions and regularity. The ancient church is in ruins, but a new structure was completed here in March, 1828, pursuant to the act passed for building additional churches in the Highlands. The inhabitants, who are chiefly of the clan Macquany, amount to several hundreds, and still adhere to many of those ancient customs which have become quite obsolete elsewhere. There is a school established by the Society for propagating Christianity.

ULVERCROFT, co. Leicester.

P. T. Mount Sorrell (105) 6 m. W. Pop. 87.

An extra-parochial liberty in the hundred of West Goscote. In a deep sequestered valley, in Charnwood Forest, are the ruins of a church, anciently belonging to a priory of Augustine canons.

ULVERSTONE, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

London 273 m. NW b N. Pop. of Pa. 7102. Of To. 4315. M. D. Thurs. Fairs, Tues. bef. Easter-Sund.; April 29; Holy Thurs.; Oct. 7; and the 1st Thurs. after Oct. 23; for pedlery.

A market-town, parish, and township, in the hundred of Lonsdale, north of the sands. It is pleasantly situated on a declivity, near the estuary of the rivers Crake and Leven, and consists principally of four spacious streets; the houses are well built, chiefly of stone. The town, which has greatly improved of late years, contains a neat theatre, assembly-rooms, a news-room, and two subscription libraries, one of which is general, the other clerical. At the intersection of two of the principal streets was an ancient market-cross, which was replaced by one of cast iron in 1821. The manufactures carried on here are chiefly cotton, in check, canvass, hats, and edge-tools; the coasting-trade is considerable, consisting of iron-ore, copper-ore, pig and bar iron, limestone, slate, and grain. Here is a yard for ship-building, and the aggregate registry of ships belonging to the place is nearly 3000 tons; and two or three vessels are employed in the American timber trade. A canal was cut in 1795, to form a communication with the channel of the river Leven, by means of which vessels of 400 tons burden are safely moored in a capacious basin, and discharge their cargoes close to the town. Ulverstone is a creek, within the limits of the port of Lancaster, and from this circumstance has lately been released from the heavy duty on coal carried coastwise. The petty sessions for the hundred are holden here. Manorial courts lect and baron are held on the Monday after the 24th of October. The court-baron for the liberty of Furness is held every Saturday three weeks for the recovery of debts under 40*s.*; and the baronial court, for the manor of Bolton with Adgarley, annually. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Richmond and diocese of Chester; certified value 28*l.* 18*s.*; patron (1829) W. Brad-dyll, Esq. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is delightfully situated at the foot of a steep hill, a short distance from the town; it is a handsome structure, rebuilt in 1804, after its ancient pattern of the age of Henry VIII.; it has a square tower, three aisles, and a chancel, and contains several elegant monuments, a handsome altar-piece of the Descent from the Cross, and the east window is of painted glass. A new church is now building, under the late acts of parliament. Here are places of worship for Independents, the Society of Friends, Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics. Townbank school, erected by subscription, has since been endowed with various bequests, and eighty boys and twenty girls, who pay a small quarterage, are educated. Six boys are also instructed by means of a small rent-charge. A Sunday-school, containing about 300 children, is supported by voluntary contributions. Here was formerly a priory of black canons; its site is now occupied by a handsome modern edifice. Owing to the peninsular situation of the town, mounted guides were appointed by government to direct travellers across the sands, and were ordered to be there from sunrise to sunset, when the channel is fordable; but this arrangement has been partially superseded by the construction of a new road, from Carnforth to Ulverstone.

UNST, shire of Orkney and Shetland, S.

P. T. Lerwick 40 m. S b W. Pop. 2598.

The most northern, and the third in extent of the Shetland islands, forming a parish of itself. It is of an irregular oblong figure, about eight miles in length, averaging three in breadth, and is indented by numerous bays and creeks. The coast presents to the ocean a continuity of lofty rugged precipices, excavated in several places to a great depth by natural caverns, the haunt of seals and aquatic birds; whilst around it are many islets and verdant holmes; of these the only one inhabited is Uyea, which defends and gives name to the principal sound or harbour at the south end of the island; as Baltaholm does to another on the east side. Ham Creek offers security to vessels drawing no more than ten feet water; but the bays of Haroldswick and Northwick are to be avoided as rocky, dangerous roadsteads. Compared with every other island in the group, Unst may be deemed level, though its surface is varied by considerable eminences, upon which black-cattle, shelties, and sheep are reared; of these ridges, the most elevated are Vallafeld, 600 feet in height, extending along the entire western coast; Saxaforth, at the northern extremity, rising 700 feet above the level of the sea, and visible fourteen leagues off; Vord, stretching parallel with the eastern shore; the Hoap, formerly appropriated as a place of execution; and Crossfield, in the interior, upon which are several concentric circles each enclosing a mound, and near them an ancient sepulchre, surrounded with rude pillars of stone. Between these hills appear many lakes of considerable extent, and some very fertile tracts, but they are under an inferior mode of culture. A species of artichoke having numerous small heads, cultivated here, is said to be superior in flavour and more hardy than the common sort. Freestone, limestone, ironstone, marl, rock crystal, and petriolic schistons, with other bituminous matter indicative of coal, are found here; as are some beautiful specimens of serpentine, variegated with black and green. Besides the animals already enumerated, hogs are bred here in vast numbers, and rabbits are very abundant, more especially in the holmes: otters also are numerous. The fisheries are very productive; more than eighty tons of cod being annually cured for exportation. This branch of trade, together with a considerable manufacture of fine woollen hose, are sources of great profit to the inhabitants. Living, in the presbytery of Shetland and synod of Orkney; patron, Lord Dundas. The church, erected in 1764, is situated at a place called Balcasta. Formerly there were no less than twenty-four chapels in the island, vestiges of which still exist; and at six of them the inhabitants bury their dead to this day. The parochial school was not established till 1805. Here are several handsome mansions, of which Belmont, the seat of Mr. Mowatt, is the principal, and two ancient obelisks useful to mariners.

UNSTONE, co. Derby.

UPHALL, shire of Linlithgow, S.

Edinburgh 11 m. W b S. Pop. 1016.
Fair, Aug. 1.

A parish including the thriving village of Broxburn, and containing 3120 Scotch acres, with a rich and fertile soil. It occupies a fine strath, through which runs the Burn, or small river Brocks; hence its ancient name Strath-Brox, signifying the Valley of Badgers, which it retained till the seventeenth century, when a new parish church was erected at a place called Uphall. There is an extensive colliery at Houston, the produce of which is of excellent quality and low in price, on account of the facilities afforded by the Union Canal. Quarries of freestone, ironstone, and limestone, are wrought in the neighbourhood, as are many seams of marl, red chalk, fuller's earth, and potter's clay. The living is in the presbytery of Linlithgow and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale; patron, the Earl of Buchan. It was endowed in 1524 by Archdeacon Dingwall, with a mansion and eleven acres of land in the parish. UPTON-UPON-SEVERN, co. Worcester.

London 111 m. NW b W. Pop. 2319. M. D. Thurs. Fairs, 1st Thurs. aft. Midlent; Thurs. in Whitsun-week, for horses, cattle, and sheep; July 10 and Thurs. bef. Oct. 2, for horses, cattle, sheep, and leather.

A market-town and parish in the lower division of the hundred of Pershore. It is situated on the right bank of the river Severn, which is here navigable for vessels of 100 tons burden, and is crossed by a stone bridge of six arches. The town, which contains a subscription library, is neatly built, and the streets are well paved. Here is a harbour for barges, and a wharf on the river for the convenience of loading and unloading; and a considerable quantity of cider, brought from Hereford and other places, is here shipped for different parts of England. A handsome market-house, including an assembly-room and chambers for the meetings of the magistrates, is about to be erected by subscription. A manorial court is held occasionally, and petty sessions once a fortnight. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Worcester; valued in K. B. 27*l.*; patron, the Bishop of Worcester. The church, which is ded. to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a handsome structure, with a tower surmounted by a cupola; it was erected in 1758. Here is also a place of worship for Baptists. A charity-school, for the instruction of fifteen girls, was founded and endowed in 1718, and a boys' school was added to it in 1797, by means of a subsequent bequest: they are now incorporated into two national schools, are further supported by subscription, and about 160 children are educated. Upton suffered much during the civil wars, at which time its bridge was partly broken down, and a battery erected in the churchyard, to prevent the approach of the parliamentary forces; but the plan was unsuccessful, and the army entered the town. The church also suffered severely, and was at length taken down in 1756, and replaced by the present edifice. This town gave birth to Dr. John Dee, a celebrated astrologer in the reign of Elizabeth.

URQUHART, shire of Elgin, S.

P. T. Fochabers (153½) 4½ m. NW.
Pop. 1093.

A parish about four miles in length and three in breadth, stretching along the coast of the Moray Firth, between the rivers Lossie and Spey, but possessing neither harbour or creek. The surface on the south-west is undulated and more elevated than the north-west district, from which there is reason to suppose the sea has receded at some remote period. The soil is sandy, but agriculture has recently made rapid advances towards perfection. Four-fifths of the land belong to the Earl of Fife, who has covered about 2500 acres with plantations highly ornamental to the scenery around his noble mansion, the House of Innes. Loch Cotts, in this parish, abounds with pike and is frequented by vast numbers of swans and other wild fowl; and Loch Nabeau, which forms the boundary on the side of Lanbride, is beautifully fringed with wood. The living is in the presbytery of Elgin and synod of Moray; patron, the Earl of Fife. The priory of Urquhart was founded in 1125 by David I. in honour of the Holy Trinity; it was dependent on the Abbey of Dunfermline till the middle of the fourteenth century, when it was annexed to Pluscarden. The site has been converted into arable land, and the well that supplied its inmates with water is the only remaining vestige. The ancient family of Innes, whose annals are marked with great calamities, were formerly the chief proprietors here.

URQUHART, shire of Inverness, S.

P. T. Fort Augustus (131) 18 m. NE b N.
Pop. 2786.

A parish with the ancient chapelry of Glenmoriston united, thirty miles in length, and averaging ten in breadth. It comprehends the rich straths of Urquhart and Glenmoriston, which, extending westward from Loch Ness, are divided from each other by a ridge of lofty mountains, stretching in the same direction, and rising at a point, named Mealfuarmhonie, to an elevation of 3060 feet above the level of the sea. The surface exhibits a diversity of landscape, perhaps unequalled either in extent, grandeur, or picturesque beauty; for at one view may be traced pleasing alternations of hill and dale; naked rocks terminating in lofty crags; precipices covered with natural wood; flourishing plantations; and fertile plains watered by the rivers, Moriston, Emeric, and Coiltie, which in their course form the magnificent cascades of Divach and Moral, besides several others, and ultimately fall into Loch Ness. There is a substantial bridge of three arches over the Coiltie, at a place called Borlam. On a rock, projecting into Loch Ness, are the ruins of the ancient royal fort, or castle of Urquhart, once possessed by the Cumyns, who gallantly defended it against the English in 1303 and 1304; it was strongly fortified with a rampart, fosse, and drawbridge, and could accommodate a garrison of 600 men. At the lower end of the valley are some remains of a hospital of Knights Templars. The living is in the presbytery of Abertarf and synod of Glenelg; patron, the Earl of Seafield. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, stands at Killmore, near the lower end of the strath of Urquhart. There are also two places of worship in Glenmoriston, and a chapel at Meikly; service in each of them is performed in Gaelic, the prevailing language here. The chief mansions in this parish are Corrimony, a commodious old seat of the Grants; and Invermoriston, which is delightfully situated at the mouth of the river Moriston.

URQUHART, shires of Nairn and Ross, S.

P. T. Dingwall (174½) 2 m. NE. Pop. 2822.
Fairs, four annually.

A parish with that of Wester Logie united, about nine miles and a half in length, and three and a half in breadth, stretching along the south-eastern side of the Firth of Cromarty, as far as the mouth of the river Conan, which here falls into the sea. It lies partly in each of the shires above named, and includes the district and village of Ferintosh, which was formerly noted for the privilege it possessed of distilling the celebrated whiskey so called, free of the excise laws; but this right was purchased by government in 1786 for 20,000*l*. The surface of the parish is tolerably level, and pleasingly diversified by fertile fields, verdant pastures, and flourishing plantations of forest-trees, particularly around Findon, the ancient seat of Sir R. Mackenzie, Bart.; Cononside, the elegant modern residence of Sir Hector Mackenzie, Bart., and Ferintosh, belonging to Mr. Forbes. Extensive quarries of an excellent freestone are worked here. At the east end of the parish is the ferry of Foulis; and near the western extremity is that of Scuddale, over the Conan, on the high road between Beaully and Dingwall. The living is in the presbytery of Dingwall and synod of Ross; patron, Forbes of Culloden. The present church was erected not many years ago, on a more eligible site than the former occupied; that of Wester Logie is in ruins. Besides the parochial school, the society for propagating Christianity have established two others, in support of which the proprietors of the soil voluntarily contribute. On an eminence, near the western boundary, is a Druidical circle; and in the south-west part of the parish, on an elevated moor, are several tumuli.

URR, or ORR, stewartry of Kirkcudbright, S.

P. T. Castle Douglas (87) 3½ m. NE.
Pop. 2862.

A parish intersected by the great road from Dumfries to Port Patrick, and containing about 12,000 acres, the greater proportion of which is land, and very productive in corn and pasturage. It is bounded on the south by the Solway Firth, and on the west by the river Urr, which has its source in the loch so called, and is navigable for small vessels up to Dalbeattie, a village rising into considerable importance, where much corn and cattle raised in the parish are shipped for exportation. Limestone and marl abound here, but fuel is scarce. The living is in the presbytery and synod of Dumfries; patron, the Crown. The church is a neat structure. On the ancient estate of the family of Herries are the remains of several chapels and many tombstones of those who suffered military execution in the time of Charles I. There was an old castle belonging to the Seatons near Loch Urr; and on the west bank of the river is the Moat of Urr, or Mount, resembling the Tinewold in the Isle of Man, whereon the national councils and courts of judicature were held when Galloway was an independent state. Vestiges of ancient fortifications are to be met with and a variety of Roman coins have been discovered within the parish.

URRAY, shires of Ross and Inverness, S.

P. T. Dingwall (174½) 5 m. SSW. Pop. 2731.

A parish with the ancient parish of Kilchrist united, seven miles in length, and varying from three to six in breadth; besides a small detached portion in Strath Conan, lying eighteen miles distant. The general appearance of this district is pleasing, being diversified by fertile fields, intersected by the rivers Orin, Conan, Garve, Lichart, and Meig, barren moors, natural wood, extensive plantations, and several mansions, of which the principal is Braan Castle, the seat of Lord Seaforth. The living is in the presbytery of Dingwall and synod of Ross; patron, the Crown. The church is a handsome substantial structure. Besides the parochial school, there is one established by the society for propagating Christianity.

URSWICK, GREAT, or MUCH, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Ulverstone (273) 3 m. SW b S.
Pop. 787.

A parish in the hundred of Lonsdale, north of the sands; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Richmond and diocese of Chester; valued in K. B. 7*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 45*l.* 10*s.*; patrons, the Parishioners. The church, which is ded. to St. Michael, is situated near a deep circular lake half a mile in diameter. The grammar-school, in which forty boys are instructed, was founded and endowed in 1580, by William Marshall.

URSWICK, LITTLE, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Ulverstone (273) 3½ m. SW b S.

A township in the parish of Great Urswick and hundred of Lonsdale, north of the sands.

USAN, shire of Forfar, S.

P. T. Montrose (70) 2 m. SSE.
Pop. with Pa.

A fishing village in the parish of Craig, and within the jurisdiction of the port of Montrose, situated on the coast of the German Ocean. Its name is said to be a contraction for Ulysses' Haven. A considerable manufacture of salt is established here, and there is a quadrangular tower, thirty feet high, built by the late Dr. Scott as a mark for fishing boats.

USHLAWREOED, co. Monmouth.

P. T. Newport (148) 16 m. NW. Pop. 3640.

A hamlet in the parish of Bedwelty and hundred of Wentlloog.

USK, co. Monmouth.

Pop. 9012.

A hundred situated in the centre of the county between the rivers Usk and Avon; it contains twenty-one parishes, including the market-towns of Caerleon and Usk, from the latter of which it takes its name.

USK, co. Monmouth.

London 142 m. W b N. Pop. 1338. M. D. Fri. Fairs, April 20, for wool; June 20; Oct. 29; and Mond. bef. Christmas-day, for horses, lean cattle, and pedlery. A cattle market is held on the first Mond. in each month. Memb. of Pt. 1.

A borough, market-town, and parish in the upper division of the hundred of Usk. The town, which is of great antiquity and anciently a Roman station, is pleasantly situated on the river Usk, over which is a stone bridge of five circular arches. It consists of several streets, composed of detached houses, with intervening gardens and orchards. The town hall was erected at the expense of the Duke of Beaufort, and is a handsome building over the market-place. The prison has been enlarged and a treadmill erected by the county at an expense of about 600*l.* Some of the inhabitants are employed in a small manufactory of japan ware, some are engaged in husbandry, and others in the salmon-fishery. This borough returns one member to parliament, who is elected by the burgesses of Usk, conjointly with those of Monmouth and Newport; the number of voters is unlimited. The government of the town is vested in a portreeve, recorder, and burgesses, with four constables; the portreeve, who afterwards becomes an alderman, is elected from among the burgesses, who are chosen by the recorder, and the constables are appointed at a borough-leet held annually. The portreeve possesses magisterial authority, the county magistrates having concurrent jurisdiction. The quarter sessions for the county and the petty sessions for the division are held here; also a court-leet once a fortnight, at which the portreeve and recorder preside. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Llandaff; valued in K. B. 10*l.* 10*s.*; patron (1829) Mr. Williams. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, was formerly conventual, it contains several ancient monuments; appears to be of Anglo-Norman origin, and was originally cruciform, but has undergone many alterations. Here are also places of worship for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists and Roman Catholics. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed by Roger Edwards in 1624, for an unlimited number of boys, with a bequest for sending one poor scholar to the university of Oxford. A writing school has been added to this foundation by a decree in chancery. A national school is supported by subscription. Almshouses for twenty-four poor persons, with a weekly allowance of 2*s.* 6*d.* each, have been erected near the priory, which was founded by one of the Earls of Clare, and of which a few remains are still in existence. The ancient castle was partly destroyed by the parliamentary forces during the civil wars; the ruins, which stand on an abrupt eminence east of the river, consist of the exterior walls and a tower gateway, with several apartments, one of which appears to have been the baronial hall; the area, of considerable extent, is surrounded by straight walls flanked with round and square towers.

A market-town and parish in the south division of the hundred of Totmonslo. It is a place of great antiquity, and supposed to have been a British settlement previous to the Roman invasion. During the civil wars, from its proximity to Tutbury Castle, it was alternately the head-quarters of the royalist and parliamentary forces. The town is pleasantly situated on a gentle eminence, close to the western bank of the river Dove, over which is an ancient stone bridge of six arches, connecting the counties of Stafford and Derby; it consists of several spacious streets, with a good market-place in the centre, and the houses are in general well built. The extensive meadow and pasture lands in the neighbourhood are extremely fertile and luxuriant; and the rivers and brooks afford trout, grayling, and various kinds of fish. The vicinity of Uttoxeter abounds with iron forges, and the trade has been greatly increased of late years, in consequence of the facility of communication, by means of the inland navigation, which connects this town, not only with the metropolis, but directly or indirectly with every port in the eastern and western ocean. Petty sessions for this division of the hundred are held here every Wednesday, by the county magistrates, who appoint surveyors of the highways, and also constables, headboroughs, &c., in cases where the lords of the different court-leets in the neighbourhood neglect to hold their courts and make the appointments. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Stafford and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry; valued in K. B. 7l. 1s. 8d.; patrons, the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, has been rebuilt, with the exception of the ancient tower and beautiful and lofty spire. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, the Society of Friends, and Independent and Wesleyan Methodists. Fifteen boys are educated in the free grammar-school, founded by the Rev. Thomas Allen, a celebrated mathematician. A national-school is supported by voluntary contributions. Here are almshouses for twelve poor persons, and a fund amounting to about 60l. per annum, for apprenticing poor children. This town gave birth to the distinguished Admiral Lord Gardner, and Sir Simon Degge, the antiquary.

UXBRIDGE, co. Middlesex.

London 15 m. W b N. Pop. 2750. M. D. Thurs. and Sat. Fairs, March 25, statute; July 31; Sept. 29, for hiring servants only; and Oct. 10, for horses, cows, and sheep.

A market-town and chapelry in the parish of Hillingdon and hundred of Elthorne. It is situated on the high road to Oxford, occupying a gentle declivity on the banks of the river Colne, which is crossed by two bridges; there is also a bridge over the Grand Junction Canal, which passes through the town, and has warehouses and wharfs on its bank, for the convenience of trade. The town consists principally of one street, about a mile in length, near the centre of which is a large and commodious market-house, erected in 1789. The greater part of the town is only a hamlet of Hillingdon, which continues unpaved, but the remainder is both paved and lighted. It contains a subscription-library and reading-room, called the Uxbridge Book Society, and possessing about 1300 volumes. Manufactories for implements of husbandry and Windsor and garden chairs, are carried on to a considerable extent. On the river are many large corn-mills, affording a great supply of flour to the metropolis, which trade has rendered Uxbridge remarkable; the market on Thursday is one of the largest in the kingdom for corn: there are also two small breweries, and the general trade of the town is very considerable. To the south-east is a fine soil of brick earth, which extends several miles, and has been sold at 500*l.* or 600*l.* per acre; several hundred persons are employed in burning bricks on these fields. This town was anciently a borough, and was governed by bailiffs till the close of the seventeenth century. It is now under the superintendence of two constables, four headboroughs, and two aleconners, who are elected annually, with a beadle and town-crier. A petty session for the town and eleven adjoining parishes, is held on the first and third Mondays in every month; and a county court of requests, for debts under forty shillings, on the first Tuesday in every month. The living is a curacy, subordinate to the vicarage of Hillingdon, in the archdeaconry of Middlesex and diocese of London, not in charge; patrons (1829) the Trustees of G. Townsend, Esq., to a Fellow of Pembroke College, Oxford. The chapel, which is dedicated to St. Margaret, was erected in the reign of Henry VI.; it consists of a chancel, nave, and two aisles, separated by octagonal pillars and pointed arches, with a low square tower at the north-west end; in the interior are an ancient octagonal stone font, and several fine monuments. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, the Society of Friends, and Independent Methodists. The freeschool was founded in 1809, and is supported by donations and annual subscriptions. The school of industry for Uxbridge and its vicinity was established in 1809, and is for girls only. Several girls are clothed and educated in the Unitarian school, founded in 1812, by Mr. Brooksbank. There are also various other charities for the benefit of poor men and women, and for apprenticing poor children. The town, which is supposed to have been founded about the time of Alfred, was surrounded by a ditch, and appears to have been fortified at an early period; it afterwards had a regular garrison, and during the civil wars, it was the scene of the memorable but unsuccessful negotiation between the king and his Parliament; the conference was held in an ancient brick mansion, at the west end of the town, still called the Treaty House; it has undergone considerable alterations, and is now the Crown Inn, but the spacious room in which the commissioners assembled still remains. Uxbridge gives title of Earl to the Marquis of Anglesea.

UYA, shire of Orkney and Shetland, S.

Pop. with Pa.

One of the Shetland islands in the parish of Northmaven, lying to the northward of Rona's Hill, mainland, and defending a good harbour of the same name. It is deemed the most valuable for feeding cattle and sheep of any island in the parish. The inhabitants are employed in fishing.

UYEA, shire of Orkney and Shetland, S.
Pop. with Pa.

One of the Shetland islands in the parish of VALENTIA, or KILLMORE, ISLAND, co. Kerry, Munster, I.

Dublin 230 m. SW. Pop. of Pa. 2128.

An island off the barony of Iveragh, affording a deep, safe, and sheltered roadstead between its eastern shore and the mainland. This strait is the most secure haven on the Kerry coast, has been improved by the erection of a pier at a place called Reenglass, having eleven feet at low water, and is about to become the station of the American Steam Navigation Company, who expect that their boats shall make the passage to New Brunswick from Valentia Harbour, in one fortnight, upon an average. The surface of the island is prodigiously fertile, and occupies an area of 9600 acres of land. Living, a rectory and vicarage in the united dioceses of Ardfert and Aghadoe, and archdiocese of Cashel, possessing a church and parsonage; patron, the King. This is the best fishing station on the south-west coast, the fishing-ground approaching within one league of the west point of the island; and there is a quarry of roofing-slate, of good colour and quality on the island, at present leased to the Hibernian Mining Company. Oliver Cromwell erected forts at each extremity of the island, in order to command both entrances of the strait. The family of Annesley formerly enjoyed the title of Viscount Valentia.

VALEY, shire of Orkney and Shetland, S.

VIGEANS, ST., shire of Forfar, S.

P. T. Arbroath (56) 1 m. N. Pop. 5583.

A parish, seven miles in length, about three and a half in breadth, and containing 9385 Scotch acres, intersected by the river Brothock, and upon the whole well cultivated and fertile. It is bounded on the east by the German Ocean, includes the fishing-village of Auehmithie, and comprehends a considerable portion of the town of Arbroath, with which it largely participates in the manufacture of sail-cloth and other linen goods. Some parts of the coast are flat and sandy, while others rise abruptly into bold rocky precipices, which in several places are excavated by very deep caverns. One of these, termed the Maiden Castle Cave, extends 231 feet under ground, varying from twelve to twenty-four feet broad, with a fine spring of the coldest water issuing from its innermost recess; hither the Mason Lodge of Arbroath used to walk in procession on St. John's Day to initiate new members. In a corn-field, 100 yards from the shore, is another great natural curiosity, consisting of what is called the Gaylet Pot of Auehmithie, 120 feet deep, at the bottom of which is seen the sea rushing through a grand subterranean cavity, seventy feet high by forty wide, admitting boats in calm weather to the view of those standing on the brink above. The living is in the presbytery of Aberbrothock and synod of Angus and Mearns; patron, the Crown. The church is a venerable cruciform structure, occupying the summit of a conical eminence, rising from the banks of the Brothock. In the cemetery the grave of St. Vigean is pointed out to strangers; and at the Grange of Conan, three miles distant, where he is said to have resided, are vestiges of an ancient chapel, and a copious fountain bearing his name. The parochial school has a stipend of 100*l.* Scotch, with commodious dwelling and school houses.

A village in the island of Westray Orkney, pleasantly situated near the head of Pier O'Wall Harbour.

WAAS, or WALLS, shire of Orkney and Shetland, S.

Pop. of Waas 949.
Of the united Parish 1246.

A parish in union with that of Flotta and South Faira, in the Isle of Hoy, one of the Orkneys. The surface is partly level and partly rises into mountains; the lower grounds producing grain of a superior quality, while the more elevated afford pasturage for thousands of sheep and a considerable number of horses and black-cattle. There are several creeks and extensive bays around the coast, the most commodious of which are Orehope, Kirkhope, and the much-frequented harbour of Longhope, which mariners now prefer to Stromness as a more convenient rendezvous for ships trading to the northern regions. The living is in the presbytery of Cairston and synod of Orkney; patron, Lord Dundas. The parish church stood at Kirkhope previously to 1743, in which year the present church, occupying a more central site near Longhope, was erected. Commodore Moodie, a distinguished officer in the service of Queen Anne, and who, at an advanced age, was basely assassinated in the streets of Kirkwall, by a hired ruffian, was born here.

WADEBRIDGE, co. Cornwall.

London 239 m. WSW. Pop. with Parishes.
M. D. Frid. Fairs, May 12; June 22; and Oct. 10; for cattle, &c.

A market-town partly in the parish of St. Breock and partly in that of Egloslaile and hundred of Trigg. It is situated on the river Camel, over which is a noble bridge of seventeen arches, nearly 320 feet long; it was erected by public subscription, about the year 1485, and in the reign of James I. was made a county bridge. The trade consists principally in the exportation of corn, in vessels not exceeding 150 tons burden. Here are places of worship for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists.

WAINFLEET, co. Lincoln.

London 133 m. N b E. Pop. 1422. M. D.
Sat. Fairs, Sat. after May 21, for cattle of all sorts; July 5 and Aug. 24, very small, chiefly pleasure; and Oct. 24, for rams and other sheep.

A market-town in the Marsh division of the wapentake of Candleshoe, parts of Lindsey. It is situated on a small creek, in a marshy district; and in consequence of the enclosure of the east fen, the waters of the haven have been carried off by a wide drain to Boston Sealf, which has so reduced them as to preclude the entrance of any but small-craft. In the time of the Romans this place is said to have supplied the whole province with salt, made from the sea-water; and a road across the fen is still called Salter's Road, and supposed to have been the Roman road between Bannovallium and Lindum. It is believed that the town was formerly situated higher up the creek, chiefly because the old church of All Saints, which was taken down in 1820, stood at High Wainfleet, about a mile and a half from the town. It comprises three parishes, all in the archdeaconry and diocese of Lincoln: All Saints, a rectory, valued in K. B. 16*l*. 3*s*. 6½*d*.; patron, the Lord Chancellor. St. Mary, a curacy, valued in K. B. 8*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*.; ann. val. P. R. 54*l*.; patron, Bethlem Hospital. And St. Thomas, a curacy, now united to All Saints rectory. Here are also places of worship for the Society of Friends and Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school was founded in 1424, by William Patten, called William of Wainfleet, from the place of his nativity; he was Bishop of Winchester, Lord High Chancellor of England, in the reign of Henry VI., and founder of Magdalen College, Oxford. Wainfleet returned one burgess to the grand council, summoned in the 11th of Edward III.; and in 1359 it supplied two ships of war for the armament prepared for the invasion of Brittany.

WAITBY, or WALDEBY, co. Westmorland.

P. T. Kirkby-Stephen (266) 2 m. W.
Pop. 46.

A township in the parish of Kirkby Stephen, East ward. A freeschool was founded and endowed by James Highmore, citizen of London, in which about forty children are instructed.

WAITHE, co. Lincoln.

A parish in the wapentake of Bradley Harverstoe, parts of Lindsey; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 2*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 60*l.*; church ded. to St. Martin; patron (1829) Miss Borrell.

WAKEFIELD, W. R. co. York.

London 182 m. NNW. Pop. of Pa. 22,307. Of To. 10,764. M. D. Fri., and every alternate Wed., for cattle and sheep. Fairs, July 4 and 5, for horses and hardware; and Nov. 11 and 12, for horses and horned cattle. If either of these days falls on a Sunday, the fair is held on the Sat. before. July 5 and Nov. 12 are pleasure fairs, for toys, &c.

A market-town, parish, and township, in the lower division of the wapentake of Agbrigg. It is a place of great antiquity, and is mentioned in Domesday-book as Wache-field; it was part of the royal demesne in the time of Edward the Confessor, and was subsequently transferred to William the Conqueror. It is very pleasantly situated on the side of a hill, sloping southward to the river Calder, in the midst of a fertile and picturesque country. The town, which consists of spacious and regular streets, is well built, paved and flagged, and lighted with gas; and the houses, which are chiefly of brick, are lofty and handsome. The market-place is rather confined, but has been rendered more convenient by the removal of the corn-market to the broad street called Westgate. The market-cross is an elegant structure of the Doric order, consisting of an open colonnade, supporting a dome; a spiral staircase leads to a spacious room, in which most of the business of the town is transacted. At Wakefield are the register-office for the West Riding, the office of the clerk of the peace, the paupers' lunatic asylum, a house of correction, a corn-exchange, a suite of public rooms, a theatre, the tammy hall, in imitation of the cloth-hall at Leeds, and a court-house. The manufacture of woollen cloth and worsted yarn was formerly carried on to a considerable extent, but these have greatly declined, and corn, coal, and wool, are now the staple commodities. Coal is procured in great abundance in the surrounding country, and is brought to the town by railways from the collieries, and conveyed in barges down the Calder, and up the Ouse to York, or by the Humber to Hull. The trade of the town, particularly in corn, has greatly increased of late years, and warehouses for storing it have been built on a most extensive scale. Much barley is also grown in the neighbourhood, and a considerable quantity is here converted into malt: great quantities of wool, brought from distant parts of the country, are disposed of to the neighbouring manufacturers. The fortnight cattle-markets have long been noted for their large supply, and are attended by graziers and butchers from a very considerable distance. The principal establishment of the Aire and Calder Navigation Company is on the banks of the river, whence fly-boats leave for Huddersfield daily. The government of the town is vested in a chief constable, who is appointed by the inhabitants, and sworn by the steward of the lord of the manor, at a court-leet held at the moot-hall. The quarter-sessions for the West Riding are held at the court-house, in the second week in January; and a petty session for the district is held every Friday, by the county magistrates. The manor court, for petty causes, and the recovery of debts under 5*l.*, is held by the steward once in three weeks, at the moot-hall. The livings are a vicarage and a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of York; the former valued in K. B. at 29*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*; patron, the King: and the latter not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 100*l.*; patron, the Vicar of Wakefield. The church, which is dedicated to All Saints, is a spacious and elegant Gothic structure, erected in the reign of Henry III.; but from frequent repairs and improvements, little of the original now remains; it consists of a nave, separated from the aisles by two rows of clustered columns, supporting pointed arches, and from the chancel by a lofty screen. The square embattled tower is ornamented with pinnacles, and surmounted by an octagonal spire, the most lofty in the county, the height of both being about 237 feet. The church, which is dedicated to St. John, was erected on a spot of ground bequeathed, together with 1000*l.*, by Mrs. Newstead; and was made parochial, jointly with that of All Saints, by an act obtained in 1815. Here are also places of worship for Primitive Methodists, Unitarians, the Society of Friends, and Roman Catholics: and two for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school was founded in 1592, by Queen Elizabeth; it is endowed with property producing upwards of 300*l.* a-year: the school-house is a commodious building, with a good library belonging to it; it is under the direction of fourteen trustees, and about forty scholars receive a classical education. There is also a writing-school, where boys are instructed in writing and arithmetic, by paying a certain sum quarterly; there are several exhibitions and scholarships in this school to the universities of Cambridge and Oxford, three of which are possessed of considerable revenues. Richard Bentley, D. D., who was born in the neighbourhood; Dr. John Potter, Archbishop of Canterbury, born here in 1674; Dr. John Radcliffe, the munificent benefactor to the university of Oxford, and founder of the Radcliffe library, who was also a native of the town; and several other eminent persons, were educated in this school. The green-coat charity-school was founded about 1707; the present income is upwards of 600*l.* per annum, and about seventy-five boys and fifty girls are clothed and instructed. In 1646 Cotton Horne founded and endowed almshouses for ten poor women, who each receive five shillings a-week, and some clothing, coal, and provisions: adjoining are almshouses, endowed by William Horne, for ten poor men, who have a weekly allowance, with some clothing and provisions: there are also almshouses at Brooksbank, founded by Leonard Bate, for five poor widows of this parish, who have a weekly allowance. In 1722 John Bromley bequeathed property, now producing upwards of 700*l.* per annum, which is applied to the clothing and apprenticing of poor boys, and the relief of poor housekeepers. There are also various other benefactions and bequests, for the relief of the poor, amounting to more than 800*l.* per annum. A Laneasterian and two national schools, for children of both sexes, and a school of industry, are supported by voluntary contributions, and are numerous attended. At the south entrance of the town the river is crossed by a handsome stone bridge of nine arches, built in the reign of Edward III.; on the eastern side of which is a chapel, supposed to have been founded by that monarch. The present structure was, however, rebuilt by Edward IV., in memory of his father, the Duke of York, and his followers, who were slain with him in the battle of Wakefield; it is about ten yards in breadth and six in width, and is in the florid Gothic style of architecture; the eastern window, overhanging the river, is enriched with various and delicate tracery, and the western front has much architectural decoration; it is divided by buttresses into compartments, with lofty pedestals and pointed arches in relief, the spandrels being covered with sculptured ornaments; over these is an entablature, with five shorter compartments in relief, representing scriptural subjects; the whole is surmounted by battlements. On the dissolution of monasteries, the endowment was withdrawn; and the chapel, to the regret of every admirer of antiquity, has been suffered to fall into a state of dilapidation. Wakefield was the scene of the celebrated battle, at the close of the year 1460, between Richard, Duke of York, and Margaret of Anjou, queen of Henry VI., in which the former lost his life. It again suffered severely during the civil wars, when it was alternately in the possession of the royalist and parliamentary forces. Besides those natives already mentioned, this town gave birth to the following individuals: Dr. Thomas Zoueh, a learned divine; Joseph Bingham, M. A., author of "Origines Ecclesiasticæ;" and Dr. John Barton, author of the "Monasticon Eboracense."

London 42 m. NNE. Pop. 4154. M. D. Sat. Fairs, Sat. bef. Midlent Sunday, for horses, &c.; and Nov. 1, for cows.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Uttlesford, but having separate jurisdiction. It derives its name, Walden, from the Saxon words weald and den, signifying woody hill; and Saffron from the great quantities of that plant formerly cultivated in its vicinity, but which has long been abandoned. Its situation is peculiar, and is thus described by Dr. Stukeley: "A narrow tongue of land shoots itself out like a promontory, encompassed with a valley, in the form of a horse-shoe, enclosed by distant and most delightful hills. On the bottom of the tongue stand the ruins of a castle, and on the top, or extremity, the church, round which on the side of the hill and in the valley is the town built; so that the bottom of the church is as high as the town and seen above the tops of the houses." Walden contains several good streets and a spacious market-place, in which is a neat town-hall; the houses are chiefly built of lath and plaster, and some of them are very ancient. The inhabitants are principally engaged in the malt and barley trade which is very considerable. The town was first incorporated by Edward VI. in 1549; but by charter of William and Mary, it is now governed by a mayor, recorder, twelve aldermen, deputy recorder, coroner, town-clerk, and other officers. The sessions are held quarterly, and from old records the court possesses the power of inflicting capital punishment, which was acted upon more than once in the seventeenth century. A court is also held every three weeks for the recovery of debts under 10*l.* Courts leet and baron take place at stated times, at one of which constables are appointed; and the petty sessions for this division are held once a fortnight. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Colchester and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 33*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; patron (1829) Lord Braybrooke. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious and elegant structure erected in the reigns of Henry VI. and VII., it consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with an embattled tower at the west end. Several of the windows are richly decorated with mullions and tracery, and between those in the nave are carved niches for statues. Here are also places of worship for the Society of Friends, General Baptists, Unitarians, and Independent Wesleyan Methodists. The freeschool is of ancient foundation and was endowed by Edward VI. through the influence of Sir Thomas Smith, who was secretary to that monarch, a native of the town, and is said to have received his early education at this school; its present income is 74*l*. All children born at Walden, Newport, Little Chesterford, or Widdington, are taught gratuitously, subject only to an entrance-fee of fourpence; and 140 boys are now instructed on the national system. There is also a school for 100 girls similarly conducted. The almshouses founded by Edward VI. for sixteen decayed housekeepers of each sex, have been lately rebuilt in a handsome and appropriate manner. There are also various other charitable bequests. Geoffrey de Mandeville, a Norman chief and one of the most distinguished followers of William the Conqueror, erected a castle here, and also founded a Benedictine priory, which was richly endowed and subsequently converted into an abbey. On the site of this monastic edifice, Thomas first Earl of Suffolk erected a most magnificent fabric, which occupied thirteen years in completing, and was considered the largest mansion in the kingdom; only one court now remains, but this comparatively small portion of the original building forms a splendid residence. The ruins of the castle are only remarkable for the thickness of the walls and the rude character of the structure.

A principality occupying that portion of Great Britain which is situated between 51 deg. 25 min. north latitude and 2 deg. 41 min. and 4 deg. 56 min. west longitude. It was anciently subdivided into petty states governed by their own toparchs; at a later period it submitted to the control of one chief governor, but it is now wholly incorporated with England, and enjoys the benefit of all the laws and institutions of its powerful associate. In treating of the geographical position the distinction into North and South Wales is to be observed. Both sections are bounded on the west by St. George's Channel or the Irish Sea; the same channel and the estuary of the Dee constitute the northern boundary, and the Bristol Channel intervenes between South Wales and the coast of Devon; while Cheshire and the counties of Salop, Hereford, and Gloucester, are adjacent on the east. Its form is peninsular, the rivers Dee and Severn, the natural and original territorial boundaries, separating ancient Cambria from England, in a manner remarkable and almost complete. The general aspect of both divisions is rugged, mountainous, bold, and romantic. The Alpine summits of Carnarvon and Merioneth are the culminating points of the Cambrian range. Plinlimmon and the Van of Brecon are the largest mountain masses in the dreary and less picturesque regions of the southern counties. Rich and verdant vales, the great boast and happiness of the principality, form a singular and a striking contrast to the hanging woods, frowning cliffs, and lofty peaks which every where enclose and shelter them. In these a fine deep soil is not unfrequently found, and abundant harvests often reaped. The Vale of Clwyd, in North Wales, is not less remarkable for the noble panorama of natural graces displayed in a length of thirty miles, than for the verdure of its pastures and the value of its grain harvests. This, however, is the elysium of Wales. The Vale of Eideirnion is also fruitful, but less extensive and less beautiful; and the Vale of the Conway is a grassy mead of twenty miles in length, where some of the best cattle brought into England annually are reared. Though less interesting from the tameness of the impending mountains, the vales of South Wales are still to be classed amongst the characteristic features of the country. There is more breadth between the hills, less accession from the accompaniment of waving wood, and less grandeur of height and variety of form in the mountain chains. The celebrated Vale of Glamorgan, extending along the shores of the Bristol Channel, does not belong to the class of natural enclosures here alluded to, but is merely a vast sloping bank, falling gradually from the mountain base to the water's edge, and basking in a southern sun. There is yet another species of valley which appears almost peculiar to North Wales, it is called in the native language, cwm, a hollow, and is a perfect amphitheatre, or basin-formed glen, accessible sometimes only by descent, and sometimes through a small gap occurring, as it were, in the imperfect or broken rim of the great crater. The sad and solitary character of these recesses is actually imparted to the innocent beings who dwell within their bosoms, whose countenances are uniformly of a pensive cast, and the temper of their minds not unfrequently tinged with superstition. The number of commodious harbours is fewer than might naturally have been expected to occur in so great an extent of sea front; but the importance and excellence of some of them constitute a sort of equivalent. Commencing an enumeration of the chiefest and most frequented ports at the north, and passing by the shipping quays along the estuary of the Dee, at the Flintshire collieries, and Denbighshire lime-works, an improveable port occurs at Aberconway, to which place several sloops belong, where ship-building is conducted, though on a limited scale. If a safe harbour were established here by the erection of a pier and clearing away part of the bar, which it is supposed is rapidly diminishing, this would be decidedly the best station on the Welsh coast for the arrival and departure of the Dublin packets. Beaumaris Bay possesses a good roadstead. Port Penrhyn at Bangor, is a small but secure asylum. Holyhead, the station of the Irish packets, is an improved harbour, besides which the Anglesea coast is indented with others affording safe lying for vessels employed in the export of copper-ore, limestone, and cattle. There is safe lying and good shelter in the mouth of the Menai, southward of Carnarvon, but the entrance is obstructed by a shifting bar. On the Carnarvon coast, also, are Portdinlleyn and Neryn, which admit smallcraft; and St. Tudwal's Road, one of the most commodious on the British coast, being a good outlet, and so extensive, that the whole of our navy might ride here in safety. Pwllheli possesses a respectable shipping interest, and at Port Madoc is the shipping quay for Festiniog slates. Bar-mouth and Aberdovey are the only ports of consequence on the coast of Merioneth. The harbours of South Wales are greatly superior in extent, quality, and number, to those of the northern half of the principality. Commercial intercourse is promoted by means of the little harbours at the embouchures of the Ystwyth and Tyfi, but the bays of Newport and Fishguard admit of a much more extensive trade. The bay of St. Bride's, an open unsheltered area, is impressed upon the memory of the navigator by the terrors associated with its history. Those who can avoid the difficulties of the coast navigation, and reach the haven of Milford, will find there one of the noblest natural harbours in the world, consisting of as many roads, harbours, and creeks, as would contain, perhaps, all the shipping of Europe, which may either anchor safely, or lie uninjured on a slimy bottom. Into the Bristol Channel open several fine estuaries, such as those of the Towy, Tawi, and Burry; and here are several excellent harbours, both natural and formed by the skill, perseverance, and wealth of the rapidly increasing towns along the shore of the Bristol Channel. Swansea Bay is a scene of matchless beauty, it is frequently compared to the scenery of the bays of Dublin and Naples, while the little inner harbour, adjacent to the town, a scene of so much commercial bustle, and the medium through which such extensive mercantile transactions are accomplished, is entirely a work of art, and a beautiful specimen of the perfection to which engineering has been carried in the present age. Pennarth Harbour, the most easterly on the coast, is also artificial; from this the manufactures of Merthyr Tydvil are sent forth to the public market, and the commercial affairs of Cardiff are transacted. With the exception of Anglesea, the islands off this coast are few and unimportant, most of them being rather entitled to the character of rocks. Bardsey Isle and St. Tudwal's support a few fishermen, and feed some cattle; Ramsey is inhabited, but the surrounding islets, called the Bishop and his Clerks constitute the most formidable group of rocks in St. George's Channel. Skomar, Skoham, and Caldy, also belong to the shire of Pembroke, and possess means of agricultural improvement. Barry Isle is known to the antiquary, but Sully only to the minute geographer.

The climate of Wales varies little from that of England; the southern counties and the coast district generally enjoy a mild, uniform, and genial atmosphere, subject, perhaps, to less capriciousness than the weather in counties more easterly. Keen frosts are seldom experienced, and those of long continuance are still more rare. The extremes of heat and cold are less violent, and the transition from one to the other more gradual than in most other parts of Britain. Glamorgan and Pembroke shires enjoy so mild a summer climate that they have become the chosen residence of one class of invalids; and the sharp, bracing breeze of the mountains of North Wales is with equal advantage inhaled by another. The climate of the Welsh vales, like the beautiful and peculiar features of these fascinating retreats, is also remarkable. The impending mountains, in vales of one bearing, postpone the first gleam of the morning sun for some hours later than they warm the inhabitant of the plain, and to the same cause is attributable the earlier departure of the great luminary. Hence it is that the vales-man at the close of each year has received less heat, and less length of day, and his crops consequently come later to maturity. The same operating causes, however, tend in winter to produce a contrary effect. The shelter of the hills breaks or totally throws off the cutting blast, the snow in consequence scarce whitens the ground ere it vanishes, and the labour of the husbandman is blessed by the early return of a mild and gentle spring. From this explanation, the result of observation and experience of the climate of Wales during an attentive regard of many years, it appears that the temperature of the numerous vales in North and South Wales is more even, mild, and therefore better adapted to weakly constitutions than that of England generally. Snow continues upon the southern sides and in the deep ravines of Snowdon, Moel-Siabod, Cader-Idris, the Van, and several lofty peaks, until advanced periods of the year, and rain falls in greater quantities in the vicinity of the greater attracting masses. But only in seasons of remarkable severity does snow lie after the month of March, and nature has provided such a number of channels for the rapid and entire conveyance of the rain-water to the bosom of the deep, that the ground is nowhere more quickly dried up, or rather, more expeditiously drained, so that even bogs are of rare occurrence. An additional proof of the salubrious and congenial character of this climate is derived from the very high average of the ages to which the Cambrian generally attains, perhaps truly struck at seventy-five years, and by many rated higher.

It would be a task of much difficulty, and not attended with an interest commensurate to the trouble, to enumerate all the lakes, rivers, and rivulets of the principality. The minor pools and smaller streams are known sometimes to the inhabitants of their banks by one appellation, and to the topographer by another, while even different parts of the same brook are designated successively by the names of the parish, townland, or village, through which it winds its course. Amongst the catalogue of waters so extensive, it must suffice here to mention those lakes that are remarkable for their magnitude, beauty, or curious position, and such rivers as rank amongst the principal of the British islands generally, or strongly mark the features of Cambrian topography. The Lake of Bala, the most spacious in North Wales, extends eight miles in length, having an average breadth of about one mile. Its banks are less picturesque than those of the mountain pools, but are of late years beautified by the addition of plantations on one side, encircling a seat of Sir W. W. Wynne; and on the other, the handsome lodge erected by Sir C. H. Hoare, the antiquary and editor of Cambrensis. The Lakes of Llanberis are accompanied by the most sublime scenery in Snowdonia. Llyn Gwynant, Llyn Dinas, Llyn Ogwen, Llyn Idwal, Tal-y-Llyn, Craf-nant, the Nantle Pools, Llyn Cwyellyn, and Llyn Conway, all in the county of Carnarvon, are the favourite haunts of the poet, painter, and tourist, and from the summit of Snowdon, and immediately encircling its base, not less than thirty lakes may be distinctly reckoned. Merionethshire contains also many llyns, or lakes, exclusive of the Great Pool of Bala; of these the largest are Llyn-talllyn, Llyn Tecwyn, Llyn-cwm-Bychan, Llyn Glo, Llyn Irdryn, Llyn Boddlyn, Llyn Ceirwydd, and Llyn-y-Fedw. The little dark pool adjacent to the town of Welshpool, seems unworthy of the honour of giving name to so respectable a place; it is not even spacious enough to prove ornamental to the noble demesne of Castell-goch, within the boundaries of which it is included. Cardiganshire contains several small pools, the fountain of as many rivers, but there is only one lake of any magnitude in all South Wales, this is called Llyn-savathan, or Llangors Pool, and is situated in the county of Brecon. The number of rivers is greater even than that of the Welsh lakes. Some of the noblest rivers of England have their sources in the Cambrian Alps, and the growing prosperity of Wales is attributable to the various harbours found at the embouchures of the numerous rivers which discharge themselves into the Irish Sea, along the extensive line of Welsh coast. Plinlimmon, like the ancient Ida, is the fountain and parent of many streams; here the river Severn gushes from a well, and falling down the mountain side passes the towns of Llanidloes and Newtown, and abandons its native country below the town of Montgomery. The history of this great river belongs thenceforth to the topography of England. Near to Severn Head are the springs whence the Rhydol and Wye issue; the former falls into the sea at Aberystwith, and the latter, after a lengthened, devious, and picturesque course, falls into the Bristol Channel below Chepstow. Its infancy is passed in Wales, where it waters part of Montgomeryshire, flows by the town of Rhayadar, separates the shires of Radnor and Brecon, and enters England at Hay, on the confines of Hereford. Besides these there are in the southern principality, the Ystwyth, Aëron, and Tyfi; the latter navigable from the sea to Lampeter, a length of nearly thirty miles; the Dougledge, opening a navigation from Haverfordwest to Milford Haven; the East Cleddau, navigable up to Caniston Bridge; the Tafe, which falls into the sea at Llaugharne. The vicinity of the celebrated Strata Florida abounds with pools, the fruitful sources of rivers; here the Tyfi and Towy have their births, the latter prefers a southern direction, and winding along to Llandovey, Llangattock, and Llandeilo-fawr, becomes first navigable at Carmarthen, which important place it connects with the main sea in the bay of Carmarthen. The Loughor, Tame, Neath, Ogmore, and Taff, are navigable only for short distances from their respective embouchures, but form valuable acquisitions as feeders to different lines of still-water navigation, constructed for the promotion of traffic in the extensive mining and manufacturing districts of Glamorgan, Carmarthen, Pembroke, and Brecon. The rivers of North Wales are more remarkable for the fascinating scenery of their wooded banks and rocky beds, than for any assistance they lend to agriculture or to trade. The Dee, the wandering Deva of the bard, is considered to originate in the Berwyn Hills, and passing through Pimblemere, and scarcely mixing its waters with those of that vast lake, emerges at the northern extremity, and flows down the beautiful valley of Edeirnion. By Corwen it hastens rapidly, and struggling between the hills of Llangollen, obtains to the transit of an aqueduct in the widest and most picturesque portion of its course. A tortuous channel conducts its waters by Bangor-Iscoed and Holt, shortly after which it travels into another kingdom and falls into a great estuary, which there separates Wales from England. The Conway ranks second after the Dee in length, beauty, and utility of its course. Llyn Conway, in the mountains of Carnarvonshire, is its chief fountain, and the Machno, Lledder, and Llugwy its principal tributaries. Navigation is accomplished as far as the village of Trefrhiw, nearly twelve miles from the sea-entrance. The Cefni, Dulas, and Braint are the largest amongst the trifling rivulets of Anglesea, and the Ogwen and Seiont would not be entitled to a place in an outline so general, but that the former passes close by the city of Bangor, and the ancient Segantium and modern Carnarvon stand upon the banks of the latter. The promontory of Llyn is amply supplied with rivulets, but does not number a river of any magnitude. The Glaslyn, Dwyryd, Maw, and Dysynwy, have their embouchures on the Merionethshire coast, and the Dyfi intervenes between the shores of North and South Wales. The general and popular nature of this little sketch prohibits a more lengthened or more minute account of the very many streams, rivulets, and pools, which every where adorn the scenery of this romantic and fascinating country; in fact, the limits prescribed to each article in a work of this description render the omission of such tributary rivers both justifiable and necessary.

Wales is also deserving the epithet of "Land of the Mountain and the Flood." The principal parts of Carnarvon, Merioneth, Montgomery, and Denbigh, are occupied by ranges of mountains, either bold, beautiful, and rocky, or tame and unpicturesque, but yielding a good light pasture. The Cambrian range, as it is termed by geologists, culminates in the summit of Snowdon, at a height of 3575 above the sea, and stretching southward, many of its pinnacles are elevated to considerable heights: Cader Idris attains an elevation of 3550 feet; Arran-frowdy 2955 feet: and Plinlimmon only 2463, the altitudes declining as the chain passes southward into Cardiganshire and South Wales, and dipping at last under the coal strata on the margin of the Bristol Channel. The Berwyn, or Ferwyn chain, is detached a little from the Snowdonian, it occupies the eastern part of Merionethshire, and branches off into Denbigh; the average height of this range is 2000 feet, its length about sixteen miles, and mean breadth ten. The mountains of South Wales are less continuous, not so bold, and more depressed than those of the northern province. Radnorshire is overhung on the north and west by a group of dreary looking hills, and though there are more remarkable eminences in the county of Cardigan, yet the whole surface is broken and uneven. Pembroke includes but one great chain, called the Perscellau Hills. Carmarthen is bounded on the north by the Carno, Llanfyrnach, Mynydd-Castell, Pencader, and Rhûd-y-Pont mountains, while the spacious and wide spreading mass, called the Black Mountains, wholly engrosses the south-eastern hundreds. Brecon is much encumbered with crag and cliff, and abounds in romantic scenery, scattered here and there between the hills, and found along the banks of many pleasant rivers. The loftiest point amongst the Brecon hills is called the Van. The northern parts of Glamorganshire are also hilly, the Brecon chain crossing the boundary and stretching a little further to the south; but the hills gradually subside, and the surface lowers gently to the water's side.

Tracing the mineralogical structure of the Snowdonian hills in a direction towards the banks of the Menai, it will be found that the primitive masses, such as porphyry, whinstone, &c., occupy the interior and higher points; primitive stratified rocks are laid over these, then come the slates, upon which reclines the limestone constituting the shores of the Menai. The same disposition of the strata will appear upon examination of the eastern side of the chain, and the species and varieties of rocks will be found more numerous as well as in larger masses. Descending from the summit of Snowdon, through Capel-Curig, and crossing the Craig-y-Gwalch to Llanrwst, porphyry, whinstone, micaceous schist, and other primitive stratified rocks occur, large blocks of serpentine of extraordinary beauty, hornblende slate-rock, interlaced with quartz, but no genuine granite has yet been found in North Wales. A slate district extends from Bettws-y-Coed towards Festiniog, and stretches towards Corwen and Llangollen, where it is circumscribed by the limestone.

The two ridges of Cambrian primitive mountains lie nearly due north and south, the one respects its parent Snowdon, the other regards the colossal Cader-Idris. From the near approach of the primitive and secondary hills on the coast of Merionethshire, the limestone does not appear sooner than in the little harbour of Criccaeth; thence, stretching northward in an uninterrupted line, it reaches the town of Carnarvon and lines the eastern shore of the Menai as far as the suspension bridge. An interruption occurs from the protrusion of Penmaen-mawr and Penmaen-bach into the bay of Conway. Beyond this, however, in the noble promontory of Gogarth, or the Great Orme's Head, the limestone appears again and retains its position all along the coast to the entrance of the river Dee; it here takes a south-westerly direction, passes by Holywell, and the extremity of the famous vale of Clwyd to the Eglwyseg rocks in the vale of Llangollen; then running due south, it continues on the opposite side of the vale: it is broken near Oswestry by the Berwyn mountains, appears again at Llany-mynech, and is at length checked in its course by a range of primitive mountains stretching northwards out of Radnorshire. Slates occupy the whole intermediate space between the limestone region and the primitive mountains.

The Radnorshire hills are principally composed of graywacke, passing from greenish sandstone to coarse slate, the slates and rock crystals are found here resembling those from Cairngorum in Scotland. Limestone abounds in South Wales, it is the foundation-rock of the great coal-field extending from Pembroke across the southern counties into Monmouthshire, and may be seen rising from under the coal and forming the boundary of the coal strata which lie arranged in a spacious basin or concavity formed within the limestone. See Glamorganshire.

The most important mineral production of the principality is coal, which is raised in vast quantities in the counties of Glamorgan, Carmarthen, and Brecon. It is found always in the limestone district, and wherever a tract of land is found included between two hedges or ridges of limestone rock, coal is infallibly known to lie beneath. Two great limestone ridges extend across South Wales from the Irish Sea to Monmouthshire, accompanied in their progress by two seams of coal, sometimes both being visible together, and sometimes alternating in their inclinations or dips. Coals are found in the vicinity of the upper ridge in many parts of Pembrokeshire; the seam crosses the mouth of the river Towy and the northern parts of Carmarthen, Brecon, and Monmouth, and terminates perhaps in the Kingswood colleries near Bristol. The lower ridge may be said to commence at Williamston in Pembrokeshire, and continuing parallel to the limestone ridge, dips under the sea in the bay of Tenby; thence crossing the peninsula of Gowerland, dips under Swansea Bay, crops out at Cenfig in Glamorganshire, and passing Caerphilly concludes at Newport in Monmouthshire. The same coal-vein is supposed to appear again at Radstock in Somersetshire. North Wales is not so abundantly supplied with coal as the southern half of the principality, the quality generally is inferior, and the position of the fields inconveniently situated upon the remote borders of the extensive counties. The best coals are worked in the neighbourhoods of Chirk and Rhiwabon on the confines of Denbighshire, where a navigation is constructed for their transport. Collieries containing an inferior description of coal are extensively wrought along the coast of Flintshire in the parish of Whitford, at Mostyn, Caergwrle, Bychton, Holywell, &c. These are called usually Mostyn coals, and are distinguished into those raised in the Old and New Cuts; they are of the bituminous kind but more earthy than the coal of the Rhiwabon field. Some flaming coal has been raised in the limestone county of Anglesea at a place called Berw, but the works are not conducted on a scale of any great extent. Indications of coal have been observed in other places, and it is believed by the inhabitants, upon grounds not yet verified, that coal exists in the high district of Pentre-foelas in Denbighshire.

The scantiness of fruitful level land, and the sterility of the elevated districts are in some degree compensated for by the mineral treasures buried beneath them. No part of the British islands is so abundantly stored with every species of valuable mineral production, nor is there any country wherein such treasures can be brought into the light with less labour, or at a more contracted expense. A lead-mine once worked in Cardiganshire obtained the name of the Welsh Potosi, from the large per centage of silver contained in the ore. The mines of Llanfair contain silver, lead, and copper, and are probably the most valuable in the county, each ton of lead-ore yielding about seventy ounces of silver, and 1300 of lead. Llangynnog lead-mines, situated in the Craig-y-Mwyr, in the county of Montgomery, is proverbial in the mining history of Wales, having returned an annual profit of 20,000*l.* to the proprietor, the Earl of Powys, for the space of forty successive years. Although lead-ore is found in several other parts of this county, the produce of no other admits of comparison with this. Passing northward into the slate-rock region lead-ore is met every where and frequently close to the surface. Galt-y-Rûg, forming the eastern side of Llanrwst Vale, abounds in cubic ore almost capable of being taken up with the pick-axe and spade alone. Ore of a poorer quality and in a harder matrix is raised in the hills of Dolgam near to Capel-Cnrig, but no works of consequence are established at either places. There are some hands, in constant employment, however, on the opposite side of Llanrwst Vale, near to Llanrhwydlyn, in an old lead-work. The number of small works conducted by labouring-miners at their own risk, paying a farm of one-eighth to the proprietor, is very considerable, and many of the happiest and most independent peasantry in the principality prefer this unambitious mode of life. The principal and most extensive lead-mining district, however, and that with which the commercial world is familiar, is included in Flintshire. The Whiteford-Rake, Holywell-Level, and other productive veins and extensive works, have given so great an impulse to commerce in the county of Flint, that this small district contains now some of the best towns and richest individuals in North Wales. The most wonderful copper-mine in Great Britain is worked in Parys mountain in the Isle of Anglesea. Two noble families have amassed large fortunes from its treasury, and the produce continues equal to its first return, with very little abatement. The centre of the mountain presents one great cavity open at the top, the miners being ranged in galleries along the fronts of the cliffs around. Copper-works on an improved principle, have lately been established in the vale of Llanberis at the base of Snowdon, and a rich prospect of copper presents itself in the renewed works at Llinniau Nantle, near Llanllyfni in Carnarvonshire. Ironstone is diffused less plentifully, perhaps, than other useful minerals over both North and South Wales, but where it is found yields a singularly abundant return. The Glamorganshire works are the most extensive in Great Britain. Merthyr Tydvil, Aberdare, Dowlais, and Cyfarthfa, occupy more hands than any works in England, and the growing wealth of Swansea, Llanelli, Neath, and Cardiff, is attributable to the countless furnaces of this metalliferous region. In Brecon are found the Beaufort iron-works; in Flintshire, those of Hawarden; and in Denbighshire, the very extensive furnaces of Rhiwabon on the banks of the river Dee. Many of the valuable mineral productions are necessarily omitted, such an enumeration would be analogous to the composition of a mineralogical treatise, the extent and variety of such productions in this country being so unlimited. It may be remarked, however, that some beautiful varieties of marble exist in the limestone districts, particularly in Anglesea, where a curious and admired verde antico is found, as well as a fine-grained madrepore.

Distinct from coal, iron, and limestone, is the slate, the staple commodity and chief support of the working classes of North Wales. Slate-hills are distinguishable from the primitive mountains by their inferior height, by the evenness and formality of individual eminences, and by the easy-flowing, though sufficiently varied outline of the ranges. The position of the slate of North Wales, contained within a vast limestone basin, exactly resembles the arrangement of the coal-field of South Wales. There is a very material difference between the metals of different quarries, nor are those of the most pleasing appearance by any means of the best quality; those which appear smooth, thin, and well worked, are brittle and veinous; those of a moderate thickness and good gray colour, are tougher and more lasting. The largest quantities are exported from Bangor, and manufactured in the hills over Dolawen, or Llandegai; they are the property of H. D. Pennant, Esq., and the works were brought to their present very perfect state by the late Lady Penrhyn. Several quarries are worked at Llanberis, and conveyed by a railway to Moel-y-Don, on the Menai, for exportation. The quarries of Llanllyfni, Cylgwyn, and others, ship their slates at Carnarvon; and at Port-Madoc and Maentwrog are the loading-wharfs of the slates from the different works known by the general appellation of the Festiniog Quarries. Penmachno parish contains slates of an excellent colour and durable quality, and which, notwithstanding the long land-carriage, are spiritedly brought into the market, and stand competition with the manufacture of districts more fortunately circumstanced. The Llanrhwydlyn slates are exported from the quay of Trefriw on the western bank of the river Conway. The mines of Wales appear to have been known to the Romans, and to have been worked by the intruders of that nation. The tools and mining implements left by them in ancient levels do not argue any superior skill in the art. The statutes for the protection of the royal privileges and rights, operated as prohibitory laws against working of mines, but during the eventful reign of Elizabeth, and wise government of William III., an alleviation of the restrictive enactments gave a momentum to metallurgic operations, which has led to the wonderful works in earths and harder minerals, now constituting one of the chiefest sources of British manufacturing property and of her foreign and commercial relations.

The ancient Britons understood clearly the best mode of turning their rocky domains to the best advantage. Shelter, fuel, and pecuniary benefit, they well knew would be the reward of planting those brows and crags where nothing flourished but the wild heath and fern. Every mountain bears evident proofs of having been formerly well-wooded, large roots and stumps being constantly turned up. During the middle ages, as they may be termed, of the Cambrian history, while a change of proprietors, and one effected by violence, was in progress, the experiment of planting would not have been prudent or safe, but since the complete establishment of English laws, and incorporation of settlers with the ancient Britons, vast woods and forests have grown up, and more extensive still are now in prospect. Many square miles of mountains are annually planted by the great landed proprietors, and so completely have the woods repossessed themselves of their ancient territories, that the goat, the natural enemy of the young scion, is now completely banished from the principality. Oak attains a tolerable size here in fifty years, the moisture of the climate accelerating arborical vegetation generally. Scotch fir is not much approved of. Ash, sycamore, beech, Welsh elm, walnut, mountain-ash, willow, holly, and some others, are indigenous, but the most extensively planted and the tree of quickest growth is the larch, a species introduced within the last thirty years.

Agriculture is attended to with a necessity proportioned to the supply requisite for a large mining population, and the zeal and ingenuity of the husbandman are stimulated by the poverty of the soil and the disproportion between his quantity of arable land and the eager demand for grain of all descriptions. In the valleys and on the sea-coast alone can wheat be grown, and the highlands afford crops of oats, some barley, and short hay, fitted for the herds of stunted cattle peculiar to the country. It is questionable, however, whether the system of agriculture pursued here be judicious, although the nature of the tenancies seems to encourage it, for which the proprietor of course is the more culpable party. The farmer continues year after year to draw his usual succession of crops, viz. potatoes, wheat, barley, oats, and when the soil is totally spent, impoverished, and exhausted, commences a restoration with a potato crop again. Little or no grain is exported from North Wales, but some shipments are made from the southern counties into the populous districts adjacent to Bristol. The breed of horses is heavy-headed and thick-shouldered, though improvements are partially introduced into this species. The farm-horse in general is small, not well formed, but strong, hardy, and uncommonly gentle. That the climate is not unsuited to the rearing of the high-mettled racer is very fully proved by the established reputation of the horses bred at Wynnstay, Mostyn, and Belmont. The rearing of black-cattle is one of the most profitable parts of the agriculturalist's occupations, and by the sale of these the farmer is chiefly enabled to pay his rent. They are housed in winter, and fed upon straw and hay, sometimes on straw only, sent to the mountainous pastures during the summer and disposed of to the drover as storers in the autumn. When grazed for some time upon the rich pastures and marshes of Kent, they are brought into the Smithfield market. Goats have been banished totally from the mountains of the principality since plantations have been made upon extensive scales, in which it may be said much capital is now embarked. Sheep are less destructive to young trees, and more valuable for their wool and as animal food; these cannot be dispensed with though their pastures have within the last half century been much curtailed.

About the year 1709, a wolf, the last of his race, was taken and destroyed in the hills of Wales, a price having been set upon his head. Wild deer are not known, nor have any fossil remains of the deer species, such as are found in England and Ireland, been discovered here. The martin, an old inhabitant, still haunts the woods, and the otter dwells in the river banks. Badgers, wild-cats, weazels, hedgehogs, and squirrels, are very numerous. Foxes are rather few in number, but hares and rabbits in great abundance. The mole is most industrious in every species of soil here, and several kinds of rats and mice infest the dwelling-house, outhouse, field, and river side. The varieties of the feathered tribe resemble those found in England. Perhaps, the eagle, falcon, hawk, and kite, are found here not only in greater numbers, but of more uncommon species. Game is very plentiful, the wide-spread forests affording so much shelter necessarily invite a flocking hither of all migratory birds. Woodcocks are very numerous, pheasants less so, partridges abundant, but grouse do not appear to locate naturally in this country. The reptiles and insects found here are also common to every part of England, and have consequently been enumerated in the topographical description of that country; and the same observation may be applied also to the finny tribe. A species of salmon called Sewen, imparting a very delicious flavour, is taken in some of the rivers of South Wales, but with the exception of the Severn, is not found in any English river. Sparlings are claimed, also, as an exclusively Welsh fish, but there is reason to suppose them analogous to what are usually called smelts.

When Julius Cæsar invaded Britain, B. c. 54, the country included between the Severn and the sea was called Cambria, and inhabited by the Silures, Dimetæ, and Ordovices. In a little time the Romans extended hither their ambitious views, and overpowering the Aborigines, reduced their little kingdom to a province, and gave it the name of Britannia Secunda. In this territorial arrangement Monmouthshire and portions of other adjacent English counties, were annexed to Wales. Upon the retirement of the Romans, intestine feuds convulsed and rent this province for many years, and its distraction was augmented by the frequent predatory incursions of the Saxons. The ancient inhabitants, however, as if cemented by misfortunes into a closer and more indissoluble phalanx, resisted and repelled the spoliator. The Saxons imposed upon the Cambrians the appellation of Welshmen (strangers) and called their country Wales, but an ancient Briton calls himself Cymry, denoting his ancient origin, either from his ancestor Gomer, or from the race of the Cimbri. Between the years 843 and 876, Wales was divided into three dynasties, called North, South, and Powysland, by Roderic the Great, king of all Wales, and his three sons set over these respective possessions. Gwynedd, or North Wales, comprehended the counties of Anglesea, Carnarvon, with parts of Denbigh, Merioneth, and Flintshires. Deheubarth, or South Wales, included the counties of Cardigan, Pembroke, Carmarthen, Glamorgan, with portions of Brecon, Radnor, Gloucester, Hereford, and the county of Monmouth. And in Powysland were comprised the county of Montgomery, portions of Merioneth, Denbigh, Flint, and Radnor, the hundred of Bualt, in the shire of Brecon, and parts of the counties of Chester and Salop. In the year 940 this tripartite arrangement was exchanged for one great government, and continuing for some period in this form, was subjected to a division into North and South once more, previously to its falling into the power of the Normans and the English.

When Wales was partitioned into shires is not very certain. Flint is mentioned as a county in the Domesday-book, which is probably the earliest record of such divisions, although it is supposed that Alfred the Great was the inventor of the system of territorial subdivisions. The twelve counties now included within the principality are Anglesea, Brecon, Cardigan, Carmarthen, Carnarvon, Denbigh, Flint, Glamorgan, Merioneth, Montgomery, Pembroke, and Radnor. Each county is subdivided into cantrefs, or hundreds, and these again into cwmwds (comots) or communities. The parochial division does not correspond with the civil. They were arranged into circuits distinct from those of England, having their own judges and law officers; but in the year 1831, the Welsh judicature was totally abolished, and the counties attached to the Oxford and western circuits, according to the convenience of position, and included henceforth in the great sessions of England and Wales.

No traces at present exist of the early tenements of the primitive Briton, but Caerneddau mark conspicuous places, or indicate the transaction of some remarkable event at very early periods: next, the Pillar-stone records, perhaps, the mark or conquest of some numerous legion under their ruling prince; then the Cromlech, Sacrificing-stone, and Druid-circle, testify the thralldom in which the minds of those were held who fought so bravely for what they still called freedom. The ruins of Segontium, the several Sarns, or paved roads, and numerous architectural remains, establish the superiority of the Roman over the simple but courageous Briton. A few Welsh castles, such as those at Dollwyddellan, Diganwy, Nantfrankon, Cedom, Dolbadarn, Criccaeth, Castell-Gyfarch, and Dolbenmaen, do not evince a rapid progress in arts, or an age of wealth or greatness, though some, perhaps, being of later date, were in some degree formed after foreign models. It was reserved for the Normans to introduce arts and arms into Wales at nearly the same dates. They were the founders of all the beautiful castles, the ruins of which confer such a melancholy grandeur upon the solemn scenery of Wales. The castles of Chepstow, Caerphilly, Dinefawr, and very many others, give an instructive lesson to the inquiring antiquary, and an ample testimony of the historic fact. The great castles of Gwynedd were all erected by Edward I. either from the foundation, or upon the well-chosen sites of former citadels. Harlech illustrates very happily an instance of the latter; Carnarvon, Conway, and Beaumaris, exemplify the former. Christianity was, doubtless, fully and completely established here in the middle of the sixth century, and many cells of Eremites were then founded, but still the splendid monastic institutions which characterize England and Ireland, point out each date in architectural history, and adorn so many of the fairest and choicest retreats in these islands, do not appear to have been founded in this mountainous country in any numbers; Strata-florida, Vale Crucis, Lanthony, and some others, are amongst the few, and Tintern also, with its scenes of enchantment, was formerly within the principality. Feudal castles raise their haughty towers over the rich vales of Cambria, and remind the ancient Briton of the brave struggles of his forefathers for liberty and life, but they are now but phantoms of departed power; their banquet-halls are silent, their towers and dungeons fallen to decay, and they remain themselves powerless objects in a land of freedom.

About the year 843, Roderic the Great united the different petty states of Wales into one principality, and ruled over his new kingdom, though for no very long period, with conspicuous wisdom and justice. He bequeathed the sovereignty of Gwynedd to his eldest son, Anarawd; the principality of South Wales to Cadell, his second son, and to the youngest son, Merfyn, he left Powysland. In the year 877, Merfyn being deposed by his brother Cadell, the dynasties of Powys and South Wales were again united under one prince, at whose death, A. D. 907, his son Howel succeeded to the sovereignty. Prince Anarawd survived his brother Cadell only six years, and was succeeded in his government by his son Edward the Bald; but this prince being slain in an engagement between the English and the Danes, his crown was usurped by his kinsman Howel, to the prejudice of the legitimate offspring. By this last act of violence the three subdivisions of Cambria became reunited under the sceptre of one monarch, who, however unjustly he might have obtained the regal purple, has shed a lustre over this part of the Cambrian annals by the prudence of his conduct and the wisdom of his laws. He died full of years, A. D. 948, having obtained the enviable distinctive cognomen of Dda, the Good, which he is generally styled by chroniclers and historians. The death of this benevolent prince and wise legislator was the signal for the return of anarchy and bloodshed. The sons of Edwal seized upon the throne, and held the reins with unsteady hand and want of determination. The Danes took advantage of the unsettled state of affairs, and ravaged great part of South Wales, and the Saxons also became acquainted with such parts of Cambria as would be likely to remunerate the sword of the invaders. During the continuance of these domestic feuds, and the absence of an acknowledged form of government, in the year 1091, the subjugation of Wales was boldly determined on by the enterprising spirit of Robert Fitzhamon, a Norman baron. He succeeded first in the complete reduction of Glamorganshire, and afterwards, in conjunction with many adventurers from the same country, pushed their conquests northward into all the other parts of Wales. This was the origin of a new and unusual government, named that of the Lords Marchers. The jurisdiction of these nobles was absolute, and the exercise of their power attended with much cruelty and despotism. From this period the struggles of the brave Cambrians for liberty were few and faint, and their history as an independent nation henceforth hastens to a close, and may be said to have become extinct at the death of the last reigning prince, Llewellyn ap Gryffydd, in the year 1282.

Edward I. completed the entire conquest of Wales, and his policy allowed the natives to retain possession of their estates under their ancient tenures, and permitted the enjoyment of as much freedom as was consistent with English laws. But his humane intentions were frustrated by the despotic lords marchers, for in the reign of the fourth and sixth Henrys it appeared that the Welsh were reduced under a bondage the severest and most humiliating. Henry VII. received much assistance in his ambitious designs from the inhabitants of the principality, and was not forgetful of these services when the object of his hopes and wishes was attained. Under this monarch several statutes of a healing and alleviating nature were enacted, but as the power of the lords marchers still continued it was not until the twenty-seventh of Henry VIII. that substantial relief was afforded to this oppressed district. The act sets forth, "that many robberies, murders, and other evil practices, have been daily committed in the county palatine of Chester, and Flintshire in Wales, and also in Anglesea, Carnarvon, Merioneth, Cardigan, Carmarthen, Pembroke, and Glamorgan, because justice is not administered there in such form as in other places of this realm; for the remedy of this it is enacted that the lord chancellor of England, or keeper of the great seal, shall nominate and appoint justices of peace, justices of the quorum, and justices of the gaol delivery in the said counties, and that they have like power and authority as those in England." The effect of this statute was very important, it struck the first blow at the power of the lords marchers, and terrified offenders, who could no longer escape from the hands of justice, by flying from one lords marchership to another. It also established the administration of the laws upon a more solid and unimpeachable foundation, and was the origin of what was called the great sessions of Wales, a system of judicature which continued in operation until the year 1831.

The manufactures and productions of Wales are very considerable, of a kind both useful and necessary, and distributed with much equality over the habitable surface. Glamorgan contains mines of coal and iron, apparently inexhaustible. Iron-works are established on an extensive scale at Merthyr Tydvil, Aberdare, and all through that district. Every species of tin and iron-plate work is made, copper is manufactured into sheets, bolts, and all other varieties, at Swansea. Brass, copper, &c., founded at Llanelly; and half the lead and copper ore raised in Great Britain and Ireland finds its way into the blast furnaces of the prosperous town of Swansea. Iron-foundries are also worked at Rhiwabon and Wrexham in Denbighshire, and Hawarden in Flintshire. Holywell is the Swansea of North Wales; brass, lead, copper, wire, and other such articles, being wrought there, and blast-furnaces kept in constant occupation. The coal district of Flintshire and the wonderful spring of St. Winifred, rendered the position of Holywell favourable for the establishment of hardware manufactories. The manufacture of slates, if it may be so termed, is the most profitable, as well as most extensively followed in North Wales. The quarrymen here have obtained a skill in the working of the metal superior to that of any other miners, and the metal itself is not equalled by any yet discovered in these islands. Bangor, Carnarvon, and Port Madoc, are the chief places of export, at the first of which a manufacture of writing-slates, chimney-pieces, inkstands, and various useful articles formed from slate, is permanently established. The woollen-trade is also established in the twelve counties of Wales, but the best and finest webs are manufactured in North Wales. Newtown contains one of the largest factories; Welshpool is one of the best markets; large works are conducted in Dolgelly, but the greatest quantities are made in the cottages of the peasants. Small factories are erected in the most retired mountain districts; hither the careful housewife brings her wool to be carded and spun, and suffering a small toll to be retained, converts the rest into a home-woven web, or knitted stockings, gloves, or wigs. With articles manufactured in this manner, the stockings being made by the females as they walk to and from the fair or market, most of the great Welsh woollen-markets are supplied. Cottons and cotton-twist are manufactured in Flint and Denbighshires, principally at Northop, Secviog, Greenfield, Denbigh, Caerwys, and Holywell, and the silk manufacture has lately been commenced. The principal agricultural exports are those of grain from South Wales and herds of cattle from the North. The ports or harbours have been enumerated in describing the general features of the coast, but the principal places of exportation and asylums for shipping are Caerdiff, Swansea, Oxwich, Kidwelly, Carmarthen, Tenby, Milford-Haven, Fishguard, Newport, Cardigan, Aberystwith, Aberdyfi, Barmouth, Port Madoc, Pwllheli, Nevin, Carnarvon, Holyhead, Amlwch, Beaumaris, Bangor, Aberconway, Rhyl, or Fforyd, and Bagillt. The number of steamers, coasters, and vessels engaged in general commerce, is incorporated with the return of the number of British vessels, furnished to parliament, and amounting to 17,227, without separating those belonging to the Welsh ports.

The religion of the principality is that of the established church, but more than half the inhabitants attend other places of worship. Sectaries are every day multiplying, and the chapels of the Wesleyan, Baptist, Calvinist, and Methodist, are the principal buildings in every small town, or found in some part of every parish. Wales comprehends four dioceses, St. Asaph's and Bangor in North, and St. David's and Llandaff in South Wales, all suffragans to the province of Canterbury. As connected with the ecclesiastical institutions may be mentioned the new college of Lampeter and the school of Cowbridge, certificates from which are received by the Welsh bishops from candidates for holy orders.

WALL TOWN, co. Northumberland.

P. T. Haltwhistle (285) 3 m. NW b W.
Pop. 109.

A township in the parish of Haltwhistle and west division of Tindale ward. It was intersected by the Roman wall, and contained the stations, Vindolana, or Little Chesters, and Æsica, or Great Chesters; the ramparts of which, particularly the latter, are in a better state of preservation than those of any other on the wall; two of the ditches are still remaining, and considerable vestiges of a town. Roman baths, altars, curious pieces of sculpture, and numerous other relics of antiquity, have been discovered; and in a neighbouring hill, called Chapel Steads, many urns have been found. Near the military road, connecting the two stations, are four tumuli, called the "Four Lawes;" and on an adjoining hill is a monument, consisting of three rude pillars, called the Mare and Foals. Part of the ruins of a castellated mansion, formerly belonging to the Ridleys, has been removed for building a modern residence, and the remainder has been converted into a farmhouse.

WALLACETOWN, shire of Ayr, S.

P. T. Ayr (76). Pop. with Pa.

A populous and thriving village in the parish of St. Quivox and district of Kyle, situated at the northern foot of the old bridge of Ayr, and nearly adjoining the burgh of Newtown-upon-Ayr. It was founded about sixty years ago, by the late Sir Thomas Wallace, Bart., of Craigie, and is chiefly inhabited by weavers, and those employed in the adjacent collieries.

It is now a peninsula, formed by the rivers Crouch and Broomhill, and joined to the mainland by a causeway, kept up at the expense of the several parishes to which it belongs. It is about five miles in length and one in breadth.

WALLAZEY, co. Pal. of Chester.

P. T. Great Neston (194) 10½ m. N b E.
Pop. of Pa. 1169. Of To. 444.

A parish and township in the hundred of Wirrall. It is a peninsula, forming the north-west corner of the county, bounded on the west by the Irish Sea, on the north-east by the Mersey, and on the south-east by a branch of that river, called Wallazey Pool; there are sand-hills bordering on the sea, which form a natural barrier against its encroachments. This place is much frequented for sea-bathing, and many handsome houses and marine villas have been erected on the banks of the Mersey. On the sea-side is an ancient mansion, formerly a seat of the Egertons, which has been converted into a commodious hotel for the accommodation of visitors. Near it is a handsome pillar, with an inscription, erected to the memory of Mrs. Bardé, who was thrown out of her carriage, and killed on the spot. The living is a dis. rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Chester; valued in K. B. 11*l.* 0*s.* 2½*d.*; patron, the Bishop of Chester. The church, which is dedicated to St. Hilary, was rebuilt about seventy years ago, with the exception of the tower, which bears the date 1560. The freeschool was founded in 1666, by Major Henry Moels; it was rebuilt in 1799, and affords a free English education to all boys of the parish. A very strong fort, mounting fifteen guns of the largest calibre, has been lately built on the Black Rock, at the north-west corner of the parish; and further in the sea a small lighthouse is in progress of erection, on the plan of the Eddystone lighthouse. Races were held here for many years, but were discontinued about the year 1760, and the ground is now under cultivation. In the reign of Charles II. the unfortunate Duke of Monmouth ran his horse here, won the plate, and presented it to the daughter of the Mayor of Chester.

WALLBOTTLE, co. Northumberland.

WALLINGFORD, co. Berks.

London 46 m. Wb N. Pop. 2033. M. D. Tues. and Frid. Fairs, Tues. bef. Easter, for pleasure; June 24, for horses; Sept. 29, for hiring servants; and Dec. 17, for fat hogs. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough and market-town, comprising four parishes, in the hundred of Moreton, but having separate jurisdiction. It is a place of great antiquity, and was anciently a Roman station; its name is said to have been derived from the ancient British word gwallen, or the Roman vallum, each signifying an old fort, and from a ford over the river. It is situated between Reading and Oxford, on the banks of the Thames, over which is a handsome stone bridge of several arches, and about 300 yards long; it was erected in 1809, in the place of a dilapidated structure, said to have been built about five centuries ago. The town consists principally of two streets, well paved and lighted with oil, and has a very neat and clean appearance. The inhabitants are principally employed in the malt trade; and corn and flour are conveyed to London and other places by means of a canal navigation running into the Thames. By charter of James I. the government of the town is vested in a mayor, high steward, recorder, six aldermen, and eighteen burgesses, with a chamberlain, two bailiffs, two bridge-men, and a town-clerk. The mayor, who is also coroner, the aldermen and recorder are justices of the peace, exercising exclusive jurisdiction. A court of quarter-session is held, at which the mayor or recorder presides, it formerly had the power of inflicting capital punishment, but its authority is now limited to transportation. Debts to any amount may be recovered by a process from the town-clerk. The petty sessions for the division are held every Friday. This borough returns two members to Parliament; the right of election is in the corporation and inhabitants paying scot and lot; the number of voters is about 300, and the mayor is the returning officer. The livings are All Hallows, a sinecure rectory; St. Leonard, a dis. rectory, with the curacy of Sotwell; St. Mary-the-More, a dis. rectory; and St. Peter, a dis. rectory; all in the archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Salisbury. St. Leonard is valued in K. B. 7*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 134*l.*; patron, the Lord Chancellor; the church is a very ancient edifice. St. Mary-the-More is valued in K. B. 4*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 86*l.*; patron, the Lord Chancellor. The church is a very handsome structure, with a square embattled tower, ornamented with pinnacles, and on which is the figure of an armed knight on horseback, supposed to represent King Stephen; the tower, said to have been built with materials from the castle, bears the date of 1658. St. Peter's is valued in K. B. 6*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 62*l.*; patron (1829) H. Blackstone, Esq. The church is a very handsome edifice, bearing date 1769; it has a square tower, surmounted by an elegant spire of Portland stone, erected in 1777 by subscription. Here are places of worship for Baptists, the Society of Friends, and Independent and Wesleyan Methodists. The freeschool was founded and endowed by Walter Bigg, Alderman of London, in 1659, for six boys, who are chosen by the aldermen. In 1672 the fraternity of St. John the Baptist, London, now the Merchant Taylor's Company, gave 32*l.* 10*s.* for the erection of a freeschool, and 2*l.* 10*s.* for the master. A school, in which twenty boys and thirty girls are clothed and educated, was established in 1819, and is supported by subscription. An almshouse, for six poor widows, was founded and endowed in 1681, by William Angier, and Mary his sister. During the civil war between Stephen and the Empress Matilda, the castle, which was built by the Romans, was occupied and held for the latter; it was subsequently the place of meeting between King John and the Barons. At the commencement of the parliamentary war it was repaired and garrisoned for the King, and was not surrendered till nearly the close of the war; in 1653 it was completely demolished, and part of a wall towards the river is all that now remains of this ancient and celebrated structure. This town gave birth to Richard de Wallingford, abbot of St. Alban's, and John de Wallingford, a monk of that abbey; the former was an eminent mathematician, and the inventor of a curious clock, which showed not only the course of the sun, moon, and principal stars, but also the ebbing and flowing of the sea; this ingenious machine he presented to the abbey church. The latter was an historian, whose chronicle was published by Dr. Gale, in his collection of English histories. Wallingford gave title of Viscount to the Earls of Banbury.

WALLINGTON, co. Hertford.

P. T. Baldock (37) 3½ m. E b S. Pop. 210.

A parish in the hundred of Odsey; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Huntingdon and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 16*l.* 15*s.* 2½*d.*; patron, Emanuel College, Cambridge. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure, with an embattled tower, surmounted by a short spire. Here is a small endowed school.

WALLINGTON, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Downham Market (84) 3 m. N b E. Pop. 72.

A parish in the hundred of Claekclose; living, a rectory with that of South Runcton, in the archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich, not in charge. The church, which was dedicated to St. Margaret, is now in ruins; patron (1829) Mr. Bell.

A hundred situated on the east side of the county, containing twelve parishes, including the towns of Carshalton or Casehorton, and Croydon.

WALLINGTON, co. Surrey.

P. T. Croydon (9) 3 m. WSW. Pop. 847.

A hamlet in the parish of Beddington and hundred of Wallington, situated on the banks of the Wandle, and is supposed to have been a place of considerable importance, from its having given name to the hundred. The foundations of ancient buildings have been discovered here, and also urns, spear-heads, and other relics of antiquity.

WALLINGTON DEMESNE, co. Northumberland.

P. T. Morpeth (288) 14 m. W. Pop. 205.

A township in the parish of Hartburn and north-east division of Tindale ward.

WALLINGWELLS, co. Nottingham.

P. T. Worksop (146) 4 m. N b W. Pop. 7.

An extra-parochial liberty in Hatfield division of the wapentake of Bassetlaw. A Benedictine nunnery was founded here in the reign of Stephen; it is now the residence of Sir T. W. White, Bart. In 1829 several stone coffins were found near the house, and amongst them that of Dame Margery Dourant, second abbess of the convent, who died in the reign of Richard I.; on opening it the body appeared nearly perfect, but on exposure soon suffered decomposition; her shoes and also a silver chalice were entire.

WALLOP, NETHER, co. Southampton.

P. T. Stockbridge (66) 4 m. W b N. Pop. 839.

A parish in the hundred of Thorngate, Andover division; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Winchester; valued in K. B. 13*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; church ded. to St. Andrew; patrons, the Dean and Chapter of York. Here is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists; and also a small endowed school, in which twenty-four children are instructed. On a point of an elevated ridge, called Danebury Hill, are considerable remains of a circular fortification, with very lofty ramparts; and near them are several barrows, one of which is called Canute's Barrow.

WALLOP, OVER, co. Southampton.

P. T. Stockbridge (66) 5½ m. WNW. Pop. 499.

WALLRIDGE, co. Northumberland.

P. T. Newcastle-upon-Tyne (274) 12½ m. NW b W. Pop. 3.

A township in the parish of Stamfordham and north division of Tindale ward, containing only one farm-house.

WALLS, shire of Orkney and Shetland, S. See Waas.

WALLS, shire of Orkney and Shetland, S. Pop. 1991.

A parish, with the ancient parish of Sandness united, in Mainland, Shetland; and including the isles of Foula and Papa-Stour. The districts of Walls and Sandness are of a triangular form, eleven miles in length by nine in breadth, diversified by small eminences, and much indented by creeks of the sea, affording secure anchorage to vessels employed in the fisheries, which branch of trade is the principal source of profit to the inhabitants, agriculture being only a secondary object with them; of these Vaila Sound is the most frequented. The interior, though mossy and heathy, yields pasturage for numerous sheep and horses, excepting in the depth of winter, when the former repair to the coast to feed upon sea-weed. Limestone, freestone, and slate, abound in Sandness; and excellent peats are procured in various parts of the parish. The living is in the presbytery of Shetland and synod of Orkney; patron, Lord Dundas. The church, which was built in 1746, is a very commodious well-finished structure. The parochial school, besides the usual salary, is endowed with 40s. per annum, by the Rev. Mr. Buchan. In the neighbourhood the remains of many Pietish huts are still visible.

WALLSEND, co. Northumberland.

P. T. Newcastle-upon-Tyne (274) $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. ENE. Pop. 5103.

A parish in the east division of Castle ward. Its name is derived from its situation at the extremity of the wall of Severus on the east; it contained the Roman station, Legedunum, and was garrisoned by the first cohort of the Lergi, who were stationed here for the defence of their shipping; many altars, coins, and urns, with other curious relics, have been discovered here; and the ruins of a quay, as well as the causeway which communicated with it, evidently prove it to have been a considerable trading colony of the Romans. Wallsend is large and well built, situated near the Shields road, and bounded on the south by the river Tyne; it contains many good houses, with a spacious green in the centre, crossed by a raised causeway. Here are several yards for ship-building, extensive lime-kilns, and manufactories for copperas and earthenware; and at the place where the Romans discharged their cargoes more than 1000 years ago, are numerous staiths, projecting from the northern bank of the Tyne, whence vessels are continually taking in immense quantities of that excellent coal, termed Wallsend, for the London and other markets. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Durham and diocese of Northumberland, not in charge; patrons, the Dean and Chapter of Durham. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter, is a neat stone edifice, with a small spire; it was erected at the expense of nearly 5000*l.*, and was consecrated in August, 1809. The old church, which was dedicated to Holy Cross, being in a very dilapidated state, was taken down. Here are also three places of worship for Wesleyan Methodists, and one for Anti-Burglars. The Sunday-schools are attended by about 600 children. In October, 1821, fifty-two persons were killed by an explosion in one of the neighbouring collieries. Wallsend gave birth to two eminent brothers, John and William Martin, the first distinguished as historical painter to the king, the other as an ingenious inventor of several useful machines.

WALLSTOWN, co. Cork, Munster, I.

P. T. Doneraile (156) $3\frac{1}{2}$ m. SE. Pop. 918.

A parish in the barony of Fermoy; living, a rectory and vicarage in the diocese of Cloyne and archdiocese of Cashel; valued in K. B. 6*l.*, and united with the rectory of Ballygrogan; patron, the Bishop.

WALMER, co. Kent.

P. T. Deal (74) 2 m. S. Pop. 1563.

A parish and a member of the town and port of Sandwich, in the hundred of Cornilo, lathe of St. Augustin. It is situated on the high road to Dover, is neatly built, and contains many pleasant residences. It is noted for the salubrity of its air, and is much frequented during the bathing season. Here are barracks, but they are partially disused. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Canterbury; certified value 32*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 124*l.* 18*s.*; patron, the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, displays some curious specimens of Norman architecture. Walmer Castle was erected by Henry VIII., at the same period with those of Deal and Sandown, for the defence of the coast; it stands close to the sea-shore, and commands a beautiful view of the Downs, the straits of Dover, and the French coast. This fortress is appropriated to the lord warden of the cinque-ports, for whose residence the principal apartments were newly fitted up a few years ago, when the fosse was converted into a garden.

WALMERSLEY, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Bury (195) 2 m. N b E. Pop. 3290.

WALNEY, ISLE OF, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Dalton (276) 5 m. SW. Pop. with Pa. 692

A chapelry in the parish of Dalton-in-Furness and hundred of Lonsdale, north of the sands. This place, which is insular at high water, is ten miles long, and about one broad, having a lighthouse on its southern extremity. It contains several wells of fresh water, which are affected by the tide, and the waters of which rise and fall with the ocean. It is said to have been once covered with wood, of which it is now extremely barren; the whole island seems to lie upon a bed of moss, which is found by digging through a layer of sand and clay. The abbots of Furness kept up a dyke to prevent the encroachments of the sea, which having been neglected, the sea has made considerable inroads. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Richmond and diocese of Chester; certified value 9*l.* 14*s.*; ann. val. P. R. 80*l.*; patron, the Vicar of Dalton. On a rocky islet, near the lighthouse, called the Pile of Fouldrey, or the Island of Fowls, are the venerable ruins of a strong castle, erected by one of the abbots of Furness. Near this are several other small isles, the principal of which is Old Barrow, situated between this and the mainland, opposite the small village and port of Barrow.

WALPOLE, ST. ANDREW, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Lynn Regis (96) 3½ m. W b S.
Pop. 360.

A parish in the Marshland division of the hundred of Freebridge which derives its name from the great wall raised by the Romans, to defend it from the encroachments of the sea, and from an extensive pool of water near it. Many Roman bricks and the remains of an aqueduct have been discovered near this embankment. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; patron (1829) T. Hankinson, Esq.

WALPOLE, ST. PETER, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Lynn Regis (96) 9 m. W b S.
Pop. 1102.

A parish in the Marshland division of the hundred of Freebridge; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 21*l.*; patron, the King. The church, which was erected in the reign of Henry VI., is a very beautiful embattled structure, consisting of a chancel, a nave, having thirteen clerestory windows on each side, and exhibiting fine specimens of painted glass, two aisles, the windows of which have flattened arches, and a handsome south porch, with a room above. Here is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists.

WALSALL, co. Stafford.

London 118 m. NW. Pop. of Pa. 11,914
Of To. 5504. M. D. Tues. Fairs, Feb. 21;
Whit-Tues. for horses and horned cattle; and Tues. before Old Michaelmas-day, for horses, cattle, cheese, and onions.

A market-town and parish in the south division of the hundred of Offlow, but having separate jurisdiction. It is a place of great antiquity, situated on a pleasant eminence, and watered by a small brook which falls into the river Tame. The town consists of several regular and spacious streets, is well paved and lighted with gas; it contains many handsome houses of modern erection, also a subscription library, (an elegant edifice,) and a handsome though rather ancient town-hall. Assemblies are held at the principal hotels, one of which is a very spacious and handsome building. The inhabitants are principally employed in the manufacture of stirrups, spurs, and every kind of sadlers' ironmongery, buckles, snuffers, and various other kinds of hardware, coach-harness and furniture, plated ware, locks, curb and dog chains, and other articles; a considerable trade is also carried on in malt; there are several brass and iron foundries, and in the vicinity are extensive limestone quarries. The trade is greatly facilitated by a branch of the old Birmingham Canal, which comes up to the west end of the town. By a charter granted in the thirteenth of Charles II. the government is vested in a mayor, recorder, and twenty-four capital burgesses, with a town-clerk, two sergeants-at-mace, and other officers. The mayor, the late mayor, the recorder, and two senior burgesses, are justices of the peace, and hold a court of quarter-sessions for all offences not capital; and a court of record, as often as requisite, for the recovery of debts not exceeding 20*l.* The hundred court is held here for the recovery of debts under 40*s.*, and the lord of the manor holds an annual court-leet at which constables and other officers are chosen. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Stafford and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry; valued in K. B. 10*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.*; patron (1829) the Rev. P. Pratt. The church, which is dedicated to St. Matthew, or All Saints, an ancient and spacious cruciform structure with a fine tower surmounted by a lofty spire, was, with the exception of the tower and chancel, rebuilt in 1821. St. Paul's chapel is a handsome edifice erected in 1826, by the governors of the free grammar-school, the living is a perpetual curacy, and the head master of the school is appointed to the office of minister by the governors. Here are also two Roman Catholic chapels and places of worship for Unitarians and Independent Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school, founded and endowed by Queen Mary, is open to all boys of the parish; the annual income is about 780*l.* An English school is supported from the same funds, and 120 boys are educated. The blue-coat charity-school for the instruction of twenty-five children of each sex, has been incorporated with a national school, which is chiefly supported by subscription. There are also several Sunday-schools belonging to the established church and the dissenting congregations. The almshouses founded and endowed in the reign of James I. were rebuilt in 1790, for six aged widows, among whom 10*l.* per quarter is divided in equal shares. In the reign of Henry VI., Thomas Mollesley gave to the corporation a manor and estates in the county of Warwick for the purpose of distributing a dole of 1*l.* to every person in the parish on the eve of the Epiphany. In 1825 almshouses were erected and endowed for eleven aged widows, to which purpose the dole was appropriated. There are also numerous other benefactions for apprenticing children and for the relief of the poor.

WALSHAM, NORTH, co. Norfolk.

London 123 m. N.E. N. Pop. 2303. M. D. Thurs. Fair, Wed. bef. Holy Thurs., for cattle and petty chapmen. Statutes for hiring servants twice a year.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Tunstead. It is situated on the road from Norwich to Cromer, and consists of three streets diverging from a central area, in which stands the church. In the year 1600 a very destructive fire occurred here which consumed property of the value of 20,000*l.* The market-cross, erected by Bishop Thirlby in the reign of Edward III., was repaired after the fire by Bishop Redman. A neat theatre has been lately erected and is opened for performances once in two years. A silk manufactory has been recently established, and a navigable canal passes near the town. Two courts-baron are held annually, and the magistrates for the hundred meet here every week. The living is a vicarage with the rectory of Antingham St. Margaret, in the archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 8*l.*; patron, the Bishop of Norwich. The church, which is dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a spacious structure, but the tower, which fell down in 1724, is in ruins; in the chancel is an elegant monument to the memory of Sir William Paston, Knight, the founder of the grammar-school. Here are places of worship for the Society of Friends, Independents, and Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists. Forty boys are educated in the free grammar-school, at which Admiral Lord Nelson received part of his education. A Sunday-school on the national system is supported by subscription. About a mile south of the town is a stone cross erected to commemorate a victory in 1382, by Spencer, Bishop of Norwich, over some rebels headed by a dyer named Leycester.

WALSINGHAM, GREAT, or OLD, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Little Walsingham (113) 1½ m. N. b. E.
Pop. 113.

A parish in the hundred of North Greenhoe, consisting of the united parishes of All Saints and St. Peter. It was formerly a place of considerable importance and contained three churches. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 18*l.* 2*s.* 9*d.*; patron (1829) H. Lee Warner, Esq. The church is remarkable for the fine proportions of its architecture, which is in the English style.

WALSINGHAM, LITTLE, or NEW, co. Norfolk.

London 113 m. NNE. Pop. 1067. Fair, Mon. fortnight after Whit-Mon., for pedlery and horses.

A parish, and formerly a market-town, in the hundred of North Greenhoe. It is situated on the banks of a small river, which falls into the sea, at the distance of about seven miles; and is surrounded by bold heights, presenting diversified scenery. It was formerly noted for the growth of saffron, which has long been abandoned. The quarter-sessions are held here by adjournment from Norwich. The hospital for lazars, founded in 1486, is now used as a bridewell. The living is a donative in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 54*l.* 9*s.* 1*d.*; patron (1829) H. Lee Warner, Esq. The church, which is ded. to St. Mary, is a spacious structure, containing some very ancient monuments, and a very beautiful octagonal font, elevated on a plinth of four ornamented steps, and representing in compartments, the seven sacraments of the church of Rome, and the crucifixion. Here is also a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed in 1639, for the maintenance of a master and an usher, to teach thirty boys. Here are also eight almshouses, occupied by paupers having large families. In 1061 the widow of Ricoldie Faverches founded a small chapel, in honour of the Virgin Mary, similar to the Sancta Casa at Nazareth, for which this place obtained great celebrity for many centuries; her son confirmed the endowment, and added a monastery for Augustine canons, with a conventual church; this institution became immensely rich, and was as much frequented as the shrine of St. Thomas-à-Becket, at Canterbury. Among the illustrious visitants was Henry VIII., who, in the second year of his reign, walked barefoot from Barsham to this place, to present a valuable necklace to the image of the virgin. The venerable remains of this once noble and stupendous pile, consist chiefly of the great western portal, a lofty and richly ornamented arch, sixty feet high, which formed the east end of the conventual church; the spacious refectory, seventy-eight feet by twenty-seven, with walls twenty-six feet and a half in height; a Saxon arch, part of the original chapel, with zigzag mouldings; part of the cloisters, with zigzag mouldings; part of the cloisters, a stone bath, and two wells, called the Wishing Wells; the devotees who had permission to drink of the waters were taught to believe that, under certain restrictions, they should obtain whatever they might desire. Here was also a house of gray friars, founded in 1346, by Elizabeth de Burgo, Countess of Clare. Walsingham gives title of Baron to the De Grey family.

WALTHAM ABBEY, co. Essex.

London 12 m. N b E. Pop. 3982. M. D. Tues. Fairs, May 14; and Sept. 25 and 26, for hiring servants, horses, cows, and hogs.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Waltham. It is situated on the banks of the river Lea, which here divides into several streams, and separates the two counties of Essex and Hertford, and also the parishes of Cheshunt and Waltham Abbey. The town is spacious, but irregularly built, and consists principally of one long street. It was built in the time of Canute the Great, and was originally part of the forest of Essex, and derived its name from the Saxon words ham, a place, and weald, woody, the whole site being anciently overgrown with trees; and its additional appellation from an abbey, which was founded here by Earl Harold. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the gunpowder mills, established by government, and about 100 in printing silk handkerchiefs; here are also a brewery, flour-mill, and two malt-kilns, and a small manufacture of pins. Courts leet and baron are held on Whit-Monday. The living is a Donative and a peculiar in the diocese of London, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 100*l.*; patrons, the Trustees. The church, which is dedicated to Holy Cross and St. Laurence, and comprises only the nave of the old abbey church, is a spacious Norman structure, with a tower of later date; on the south side is the Lady Chapel, now used as a vestry, beneath which is a fine crypt, arranged in vaults. The body is divided from the aisles by six arches on each side, supported by massive pillars, five of which are semicircular, and decorated with zigzag ornaments; the sixth, or western arch, is pointed, and apparently of later construction. The interior contains various ancient monuments and sepulchral memorials. Here are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists. The freeschool is supported by voluntary subscription, and fifteen boys and eight girls are instructed. About twenty boys and ten girls are educated in the Leverton school, founded by Mrs. Rebecca Leverton, in 1824. Green's almshouses were rebuilt and enlarged in 1818, for eight poor widows, some of whom receive a weekly allowance. The remains of the ancient and magnificent abbey consist of a fine gate, with a postern, the bridge leading to it, some ruinous walls, and the church.

WALTHAM CROSS, co. Hertford.

London 11 m. N. Pop. with Pa.

A ward in the parish of Cheshunt and hundred of Hertford, is crossed by the New River, and separated from the parish of Waltham Abbey by the river Lea. It derived the appellation of Cross, from an elegant stone cross, erected on the east side of the road, by Edward I., in memory of his beloved consort Eleanor, whose corpse rested here on its way from Lincolnshire to London; it is hexangular, and beautifully decorated with tabernacle-work and foliage, having pendant shields, bearing the devices of England, Castile, Leon, and Poitou, and crowned statues of the queen. This beautiful monument having suffered much from mutilation, was enclosed by a brick wall in 1757, at the expense of Lord Monson, then lord of the manor. Here is a chapel, the living of which is a donative; patrons, the Trustees of the Earl of Norwich; and also a place of worship for Independents. The almshouses for four poor widows, were taken down in 1830, and are now rebuilt. Courts leet and baron are held twice a year.

London 6 m. NE b N. Pop. 4304.

A parish in the hundred of Becontrec, situated on the borders of Epping Forest, and separated from the county of Middlesex by the navigable river Lea, which is crossed by a bridge; it consists of numerous dwelling-houses and mansions, detached and surrounded with trees and woodland. On the banks of the river are extensive copper-mills, and an oil-mill. The government of the parish is intrusted to a select vestry of seventeen persons, besides the minister and churchwardens, which privilege was granted by Bishop Montaigne in 1624; courts leet and baron are held as often as requisite. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Essex and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; patron (1829) the Rev. W. Wilson, D.D. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious structure, with a tower at the west end; it contains various ancient, curious, and beautiful monuments, and was repaired and beautified in 1817. Here are places of worship for Independents and Unitarians. The free-school was founded and endowed for educating and clothing children. A national school, in which 120 boys and ninety-four girls are instructed, is supported by voluntary subscription, aided by bequests, amounting to 17*l.* 10*s.* per annum. An infant-school, attended by 170 children, is similarly supported. In a school, belonging to the Independents, thirty girls receive instruction, twenty of whom are clothed. Here are also thirteen almshouses for poor men and women, and six for poor widows.

WALTON-IN-LE-SOKEN, co. Essex.

P. T. Manningtree (60) 12 m. SE b E.
Pop. 293.

A parish in the hundred of Tendring, bounded on three sides by the sea, forming a noted promontory, called the Naze, from the Saxon word, signifying a nose of land. The beach is a delightful promenade, and affords superior facilities for bathing; convenient machines and baths are in constant readiness, and many commodious lodging-houses have been erected for the accommodation of visitors. The shore abounds with pyrites, immense quantities of which were formerly manufactured here into green copperas or sulphurate of iron; but the works having gone to decay, the pyrites are now collected and sent to other places. Many curious fossils, the tusks of elephants, with the horns, bones, and teeth of other huge animals have been found in the clay, particularly after the ebbing of very strong tides. The living is a dis. vicarage with those of Kirby-le-Soken and Thorpe-le-Soken, exempt from visitation, and in the diocese of London; valued in K. B. 9*l.*; patronage with Kirby-le-Soken vicarage. The church, which is ded. to All Saints, was erected and consecrated by Bishop Porteus, about twenty-five years ago, the ancient structure having been entirely swept away, as well as the churchyard, and every house but one in the old village. The district comprising these three parishes was called Le Soken, from some peculiar privileges, originally granted to certain refugees from the Netherlands, who established themselves here, and introduced several manufactures, particularly that of cloth. Near the old hall is a lofty quadrangular brick tower, erected by the corporation of the Trinity House, serving to direct vessels passing or entering the port of Harwich; and on other parts of the coast are two Martello towers.

WALTON-UPON-THAMES, co. Surrey.

P. T. Weybridge (18) 2 m. NE b E.
Pop. 1891. Fair, Wednes. and Thurs. in Easter-week, for horses, cattle, and sheep.

A parish in the hundred of Elmbridge, situated on the banks of the Thames, over which is a handsome bridge of considerable length. It derives its name from the Roman works still visible in the neighbourhood, the principal of which, on St. George's Hill, is called the Camp of Cæsar, who here gave battle to Cassivelaunus, at the head of the Britons; but that chieftain having driven sharp stakes into the bed of the Thames, successfully opposed the vigorous attempts of the Romans to force the passage of the river: the place is still called Coway Stakes. In the vicinity are many elegant villas, and several noble mansions. Strata of iron-ore appear in different parts of the parish. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Surrey and diocese of Winchester; valued in K. B. 12*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; patron, the Lord Chancellor. The church, which is ded. to St. Mary, is an ancient and handsome structure, containing many beautiful monuments. Here is also a place of worship for Independents. A national school is supported by subscription; there are also some endowed almshouses, and a remarkable bequest, by one Smith, originally a beggar, who having amassed a considerable sum, left a portion of it to the poor of every parish in this county, except those wherein he had been punished as a vagabond. App's Court, in this parish, was once a residence of Cardinal Wolsey, but the site of the ancient building is now occupied by a more modern mansion, the proprietor of which is subject to an old custom of distributing annually a barrel of beer, and a quarter of corn made into bread, amongst such travellers as may happen to present themselves on the 13th of November. Ashley House, one of the many edifices erected by Wolsey, was occasionally the residence of Oliver Cromwell. Oatlands, once the property of the late Duke of York, is partly in this parish and partly in that of Weybridge.

WALTON-UPON-TRENT, co. Derby.

P. T. Burton-upon-Trent (125) 4 m. SW.
Pop. 416.

A parish in the hundred of Repton and Gresley; living a rectory in the archdeaconry of Derby and diocese of Lichfield and and Coventry; valued in K. B. 171. 2s. 8½d.; patron (1829) Marquis Townshend. The church, which is ded. to St. John the Baptist, contains several ancient monuments, and has been recently repaired by subscription. A school, in which all the poor children of the parish are instructed, is endowed with about 20*l.* a-year, and is further supported by subscription. Edward II. here forded the Trent, in pursuit of Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, and the disaffected barons.

WALTON, WEST, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Wisbeach (91) 3 m. NE b N. Pop. 735.

A parish in the Marshland division of the hundred of Freebridge; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 16*l.* 13s. 4d.; church ded. to St. Mary; (1829) H. H. Townshend, Esq. The rectory of West Walton Elien is valued in K. B. 16*l.*; patron, the Lord Chancellor.

WALTON-ON-THE-WOLDS, co. Leicester.

P. T. Loughborough (109) 4 m. E. Pop. 239.

A parish in the hundred of East Goscote, situated near the river Soar; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Leicester and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 15*l.*; church ded. to St. Bartholomew; patron (1829) the Rev. W. T. Roe.

WALTON WOOD, co. Huntingdon.

P. T. Huntingdon (59) 6 m. N b W.
Pop. 211.

A parish in the hundred of Norman Cross; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Huntingdon and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 11*l.*; church ded. to St. Andrew; patron (1829) Sir R. H. Bickerton, Bart.

WALWICK CHESTERS, co. Northumberland.

P. T. Hexham (278) 4 m. N b W.
Pop. with Warden parish.

An extra-parochial liberty in the north-west division of Tindale ward, situated on the west bank of the river Tyne, and on the site of the Roman wall. It was the Cilurnum of the Romans, where the Ala Secunda Asturum was quartered; its extent, which may still be traced, was 570 feet from east to west, and 400 from north to south. Numerous relics have been discovered, among which are a spacious vault, a broken statue of Europa, and a remarkable tablet commemorative of the rebuilding of some edifice by the Astures. Walwick Grange, now occupied by a farmer, was formerly the seat of the Errington family, built out of an ancient tower.

WALWORTH, co. Pal. of Durham.

P. T. Darlington (241) 4 m. NW. Pop. 162.

Pop. 366.

A parish in the hundred of Rhôs; living, a rectory in the diocese of St. David's; valued in K. B. 7*l.* 13s. 4d.; patron, the Lord Chancellor. Area of parish, 2472 acres of land. Gwalchmai, the cousin of King Arthur, and a man of gigantic stature, being driven from his inheritance of Galway, was wrecked on this coast, and interred here. His body is said to have been discovered in the reign of William the Conqueror. Here are the ruins of an ancient castle.

WAMBROOK, co. Dorset.

P. T. Chard (140) 2 m. SW. Pop. 201.

A parish in the hundred of Beaminster, Bridport division; living, a rectory and a peculiar of the Dean of Salisbury; valued in K. B. 8*l.* 7s. 1d.; church ded. to St. Mary; patroness (1829) Mrs. Edwards.

WAMPHRAY, shire of Dumfries, S.

P. T. Moffat (49½) 9 m. SSE. Pop. 554.

A parish five miles in length and three in breadth, in figure like an amphitheatre, the straight part being formed by the river Annan, which bounds it on the west. It contains 8750 Scotch acres, which on the bank of the river is level, fertile, and well-cultivated, but towards the north the surface is considerably elevated, affording only pasturage for numerous sheep and black-cattle. Around the old castles of Lochwood and Wamphray are extensive woods, and the church occupies a singularly romantic situation in a wooded recess on the banks of the Wamphray, a stream that forms a succession of beautiful cascades in its course through the parish, and falls into the Annan. Living in the presbytery of Lochmaben and synod of Dumfries; patron, the Earl of Hopetoun. The great road between Carlisle and Glasgow passes through this parish, and there are some vestiges of a Roman road, with large stones, five feet high, standing by the side of it, about one Scotch mile asunder. At a place called Girth Head there is a Roman station. This district has been the scene of most barbarous and sanguinary feuds in former ages; songs descriptive of which are still sung by the natives.

WAMPOOL, co. Cumberland.

P. T. Wigton (393) 5 m. N b W. Pop. 97.

A township in the parish of Aikton, Cumberland ward.

WANBOROUGH, co. Surrey.

P. T. Guildford (29) 4 m. W. Pop. 107.

An extra-parochial liberty in the hundred of Woking.

WANBOROUGH, co. Wilts.

P. T. Swindon (83) 3½ m. E b S. Pop. 903.

A parish in the hundred of Kingsbridge; living, a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Wilts and diocese of Salisbury; valued in K. B. 21l. 10s. 7½d.; church ded. to St. Andrew; patrons, the Dean and Chapter of Winchester. Here is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists.

WANDEL, shire of Lanark; S.

P. T. Biggar (27½) 8½ m. SW b W.
Pop. with Lamington.

An ancient parish in the middle ward, now united to the parish of Lamington. It contains about 5000 acres, of which one-fifth only is arable, the rest consisting of more elevated land, being appropriated to sheep pasturage. Here is a parochial school, and in this district are the sites of two ancient towers.

WANDSWORTH, co. Surrey.

London 6 m. SW. Pop. 6702. Fair, Mon., Tues., and Wednes. in Whitsun-week, for horses, cattle, pigs, and toys.

A parish in the hundred of Brixton, deriving its name from its situation on the river Wandle which here falls into the Thames. It consists chiefly of one street occupying the declivities of two hills, on each of which are several elegant mansions. The inhabitants are employed in scarlet dyeing, making hats and bolting-cloths, printing kerseymeres, whitening and pressing stuffs, and calico printing; there are also three corn-mills, and mills for the preparation of iron, white lead, and linseed oil; vinegar-works, distilleries, and a large brewery. The Surrey rail-road extends from the basin, near the confluence of the Wandle with the Thames, through Mitcham and Croydon to Merstham, and furnishes means of conveyance for the manufactures and other commodities. A court of requests is held here for the recovery of debts under 5l., and the petty sessions for the hundred are held every Saturday. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Surrey and diocese of Winchester; valued in K. B. 15l. 5s. 5d.; patron (1829) the Rev. W. Borrodaile. The church, which is dedicated to All Saints, is a plain brick structure rebuilt in 1780, with the exception of a square at the west end. A new church, dedicated to St. Anne, has been recently erected by the commissioners under the late acts. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, Independents, the Society of Friends, and Wesleyan Methodists; the Society of Friends have two schools, at one of which the eminent citizen Sir John Barnard was educated. The freeschool founded and endowed in 1710, has been incorporated with the national schools, in which 125 boys and 100 girls are educated, twenty-five of the boys and thirty of the girls being also clothed; the original endowment is appropriated exclusively to the use of thirty-five boys. The school of industry is attended by forty girls and supported by subscription. One hundred and seventy boys and sixty girls are educated in the school established in 1821, for children of every religious denomination. Here are some small bequests for apprenticing children and for the relief of the poor, and fifteen watermen of this parish receive 4l. per annum each. Amongst other charities, those of the benevolent Alderman Smith, who was born and buried here, deserve particular notice, he bequeathed very considerable sums for setting poor people to work, not only to Wandsworth but to most of the principal towns in the county. In Garra Lane, between this place and Tooting, was formerly a moek election after every general election, of a Mayor of Garra, to which Foote's dramatic piece of that name has given celebrity.

WANGFORD, co. Suffolk.

B. 14*l.* 4*s.* 4½*d.*; church ded. to St. Nicholas; patron (1829) Sir C. H. Palmer, Bart. A Roman tessellated pavement, several coins, urns, and other antiquities, have been discovered near the old fosse road which passes in the vicinity. This parish is in the honour of Tutbury, and within the jurisdiction of a court of pleas held at Tutbury.

WANLOCKHEAD, shire of Dumfries, S.

P. T. Leadhills (46) 2 m. SSW.
Pop. with Pa.

A considerable village in the parish of Sanquhar, situated on the southern bank of a river of the same name, in the immediate vicinity of the Lothiers, a dreary range of mountains rising 3000 feet above the level of the sea, and famous for its valuable coal and lead-mines. These latter contain a variety of rich specimens, as the potter's lead-ore; the steel-grained ore, very rich in silver; white lead-ore, or carbonate of lead; green phosphate of lead, &c. &c.; and produced in 1809 about 875 tons in bars, which at 32*l.* per ton amounts to nearly 28,000*l.* This place is entirely occupied by miners who have established a subscription library to amuse their leisure hours. An ordained minister resides amongst them, and a private school has been instituted for the benefit of their children.

WANSFORD, co. Northampton.

London 88 m. N b W. Pop. 179.

A parish in the liberty of Peterborough, connected with the county of Huntingdon by a stone bridge over the river Nen; living, a curacy subordinate to the rectory of Thornborough, in the archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough, not in charge; church ded. to St. Mary; patronage with Thornborough rectory.

WANSFORD, E. R. co. York.

P. T. Great Driffield (196) 3 m. ESE.
Pop. 344.

A township in the parish of Nafferton and wapentake of Dickering. The inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of cotton goods and carpets, the latter is the only one of the kind in this part of the country. Here is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists.

WANSTEAD, co. Essex.

London 7 m. NE. Pop. 1354.

A parish in the hundred of Becontrec, situated on the borders of Epping Forest, and containing many handsome residences. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Essex and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 6*l.* 13*s.* 9*d.*; patron (1829) the Hon. W. T. L. P. Wellesley. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome brick edifice cased with Portland stone, with a fine Doric portico and a cupola supported by eight Ionic columns; the interior is light and elegant, aisles being separated from the nave by pillars of the Corinthian order; in the chancel is a window of beautifully-stained glass, representing Christ bearing the cross, from the picture at Magdalen College, Oxford; also a superb monument with a marble effigy of the deceased, to the memory of Sir Josiah Child, Bart., who died in 1699. The freeschool is partly supported by a bequest, and partly by subscription, sixty children of both sexes are instructed, forty of whom are also clothed. Waustead House, once a very large and magnificent structure, situated in an extensive and beautiful park, and surrounded with gardens and pleasure-grounds, was erected in 1715, by Sir Richard, son of Sir Josiah Child, created Viscount Castlemain in 1718, and Earl of Tylney in 1731; it was the temporary residence of the Prince of Condé, but having come by marriage into the possession of the Hon. W. T. L. P. Wellesley, it was taken down and sold by auction in 1822, and the park has been since let out in portions for the grazing of cattle; of this splendid mansion nothing remains but the stables and out-offices. On the south side of the park, a tessellated pavement of considerable dimensions, several coins, fragments of urns and other relics of antiquity were discovered in the year 1735.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Wantage. It is situated on the borders of the Vale of White Horse, on a branch of the river Ocke, and is very irregularly built. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the malt and flour trade, and in the manufacture of sacking and twine. A branch of the Wilts and Berks Canal comes up to the town, by means of which coal is brought here, and corn, flour, and malt sent to different parts of the country. A manorial court is held annually, and the petty sessions for the hundred every Saturday. The living is a vicarage and a peculiar of the dean and canons of Windsor; valued in K. B. 35*l.* 2*s.* 8½*d.*; patrons, the Dean and Canons of Windsor. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a spacious and handsome cruciform structure, with a square embattled tower rising from the intersection, it contains several ancient monuments. Here are also places of worship for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school for the sons of inhabitants, has an income of about 200*l.* a-year; an English school is connected with it in which twenty-four boys are educated; here are also Sunday-schools connected with the established church and the dissenters. Seven almshouses were founded and endowed by Richard Styles in 1680, for twelve poor persons who receive a small weekly allowance. Wantage is celebrated as the birth-place of Alfred the Great, who was born in 849, and died in 901, and whose memory is here retained by a well called Alfred's Well. This town also gave birth to Dr. Joseph Butler, Bishop of Durham, and the well-known author of the "Analogy of Religion," he was born in 1692 and died in 1752.

WARE, co. Hertford.

London 21 m. N. Pop. 3344. M. D. Tues. Fairs, last Tues. in April, and Tues. bef. Sept. 21, for horses and other cattle.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Braughin. It is a place of considerable antiquity, situated in a valley on the east side of the river Lea, which is navigable to Hertford and London. The town, tolerably well built and lighted, consists of one principal street, about a mile in length, with several smaller ones intersecting it. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the malting trade, which is carried on to a very great extent; and most of the London breweries are supplied from this town, which now contains about seventy malting establishments, and others are in progress of erection. The market-house is supported on sixteen arches, and contains an elegant assembly-room. A public library was established in 1795. The town is under the superintendence of four constables and three headboroughs: a court baron is held annually, and the petty sessions for Ware division every alternate Tuesday. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Middlesex and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 20*l.* 10*s.*; patron, Trinity College, Cambridge. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious and ancient structure, consisting of a nave, chancel, and aisles, with an embattled tower at the west end; it contains an antique font, and numerous sepulchral memorials: at the west end is a gallery, erected by the governors of Christ's Hospital, who had originally a school established here for the younger children of the charity, but which has been many years removed to Hertford. Here are also two places of worship for Independents, two for Wesleyan Methodists, and one for the Society of Friends. 100 boys are educated in the national school, which is supported by subscription; eighty are instructed in a British school, which is supported by the Independents; and a freeschool, for 100 girls, is chiefly maintained by two ladies, assisted by private subscriptions. Here are seventeen almshouses, for widows and other poor persons, some of which have small endowments; bequests to the amount of about 300*l.* a-year have been left for the poor, for whose relief also, a lying-in society and a friendly institution have been established. In the reign of Henry III., a Benedictine priory was founded here; there was also a house of Franciscan friars, but the time of its foundation is uncertain. Near the town are two springs of excellent water, which, under the superintendence of the New River Company, supply the metropolis; one of these, called the Chadwell Spring, is also denominated the New River Head, and the other, the Amwell Spring.

WAREHAM, co. Dorset.

London 112 m. SW b W. Pop. 1931. M. D. Sat. Fairs, Midsummer-day; April 17; and Sept. 11; for cattle, cheese, and hogs; besides six cattle-markets in the spring. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough and market-town comprising three parishes having separate jurisdiction, but locally situated in the hundred of Winfrith Blandford, south division. It is a place of great antiquity and existed in the time of the Britons, and was subsequently in the possession of the Saxons and Romans. The name is derived from the Saxon words var-ham, signifying a fishing-village on a shore. Brithric, King of the West Saxons, in the beginning of the ninth century, and Edward the Martyr, previous to his removal to Shaftesbury by St. Dunstan, were interred here. In 1215 Peter of Pomfret and his son were cruelly executed on account of the former having foretold the deposition of King John. In the time of the parliamentary war, this place was alternately in the possession of both parties, but was finally given up to that of the king on the surrender of Corfe Castle. The town is pleasantly situated on an eminence between the mouths of the rivers Frome and Piddle, and is nearly enclosed by an earthen rampart; it consists of four principal and several small streets, and is approached on the north and south by bridges over the above rivers; that over the Frome is a fine modern structure of five arches, built in 1779 in place of an ancient one which was supposed to have stood from the time of William Rufus. On the south side of the town is an extensive and convenient quay, though the trade is now comparatively small; at an early period it is said to have been a port of considerable consequence. Many of the inhabitants are employed in the manufacture of shirt-buttons and knitting stockings, and great quantities of pipeclay obtained in the neighbourhood are shipped hence to the Staffordshire potteries and many other parts of England for various purposes. The town is governed by a mayor and eighteen burgesses, assisted by a recorder, town-clerk, and other officers. Quarter-sessions are holden by the mayor and burgesses; the former is also justice of the peace and corner; a court of record is held monthly for the recovery of debts, and a manorial court annually. Wareham is a borough by prescription, its privileges having been confirmed by several charters, the last of which was obtained in the reign of Anne, and it has returned two members to Parliament since the time of Edward I. The right of election is vested in the mayor, magistrates, and inhabitants paying scot and lot, the whole number being about 700; the mayor is the returning officer. The livings, three in number, are valued in K. B. that of St. Martin's and St. Mary's parishes, united rectories, 8*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.*; that of the Holy Trinity 7*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.*, in the archdeaconry of Dorset and diocese of Bristol; patron (1829) John Calcraft, Esq. St. Mary's church is the only one extant, the others having long since fallen to decay; the remaining structure is spacious and of great antiquity, formerly having belonged to a priory founded here in the ninth century; within are several memorials to the Calcraft family, and two ancient monuments of warriors accoutred in complete suits of mail. Here are also places of worship for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists and Unitarians, an endowed freeschool, and almshouses for six men and five women. A portion of the ancient walls built by the Danes in the time of Alfred, is called Bloody-bank, from the circumstance of this having been the place of execution of Baxter Holme and others in 1684, for their attachment to the Duke of Monmouth. Here are also remains of a castle and the priory; the latter traceable in a dwelling-house. Dr. John Chapman, tutor to Lord Camden, and Horace Walpole, Earl of Orford, were natives of Wareham.

It is one of the six into which the late extensive parish of Simonburn was divided in 1814; is situated on the west side of the North Tyne, which is crossed by a ferry, and has been considerably improved by the recent erection of a handsome row of houses. Courts leet and baron are held annually in October. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Northumberland and diocese of Durham, not in charge; patrons, the Governors of Greenwich Hospital, who have erected a handsome Gothic church, which was opened for divine service on the 10th of Aug. 1818. Here is also a place of worship for Presbyterians. The national school, in which the poor children of the parish are instructed was also erected by the patrons. Here are traces of several encampments, said to have been formed by Edward III.; and on the bank of the river is Moat Hill, anciently occupied by a tower, and subsequently used as an observatory, to watch the movements of enemies. About half a mile north of the parish are the ruins of an old church, a tumulus, and a cairn, in which urns and other relics have been discovered.

P. T. Alnwick (308) 7 m. SE. Pop. of Pa.

2265. Of To. 594. Fairs, 1st Thurs. in May;

Thurs. before Aug. 18; and Thurs. before

Nov. 23; for cattle.

A parish and township in the east division of Morpeth ward, situated about a mile from the sea, and almost surrounded by the river Coquet, over which is an ancient bridge of two arches, having at the south end a tower gateway, formerly defended by an iron gate, through which the road passes. It consists of three streets, containing many good modern-built houses, and two very commodious inns; the principal street leads from the castle down a steep hill to the ancient cross, where a market, granted by King John, was formerly held on Thursdays, but is now obsolete. The parish abounds with excellent coal, freestone, limestone, and whinstone; and gems and pebbles of great value are frequently found in the bed of the river. Warkworth was anciently a borough, supposed to have been formed in the time of the Saxons by King Ceolwulph. The Duke of Northumberland holds a court-leet on the first Wednesday in October, at which a borough-reeve, two moorgrievs, three constables, and other officers are annually appointed. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Northumberland and diocese of Durham; valued in K. B. 18*l.* 5*s.* 7½*d.*; patron, the Bishop of Carlisle. The church, which is ded. to St. Laurence, is a very ancient and handsome structure, ornamented with a spire nearly 100 feet high; it is said to have been erected by Ceolwulph, King of Northumberland, in 736, and rebuilt at a later period. Here are also places of worship for Scottish Seceders and Wesleyan Methodists. A school-house was erected in 1736 by Mr. G. Lawson; it is now sometimes used as a town-hall, and a more commodious school-room was erected by subscription in 1824, and is now conducted on the Madras system; besides a girls' national school, and an infant-school for both sexes. Near the churchyard are some remains of a small Benedictine priory, founded about the year 1257. On a bold eminence rising from the river, stand the venerable and magnificent ruins of Warkworth Castle; the moat by which it is surrounded, encloses more than five acres, the area is of an oblong form, on the north side of which stands the keep, on a lofty mound, encompassed by a wall thirty-five feet high, both in excellent preservation; the grand entrance has been a stately edifice, but only a few of its apartments now remain. About half-a-mile west of the castle is an ancient hermitage, with a small chapel, curiously decorated in the old Gothic style of architecture; it contains an altar, and various other devotional emblems, with the representation of a recumbent female on a table monument, and that of a hermit standing over it in a mournful attitude. Warkworth gives title of Baron to Percy, Duke of Northumberland.

WARMINSTER, co. Wilts.

Pop. 9846.

A hundred situated at the western extremity of the county, containing ten parishes.

WARMINSTER, co. Wilts.

London 96 m. WSW. Pop. 5612. M. D. Sat. Fairs, April 22; Aug. 11; and Oct. 26; for cattle, sheep, swine, and cheese.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of the same name. It is a place of great antiquity, and supposed to have been the Verlucio of the Romans. The town is situated on the river Willey, near the southwestern extremity of Salisbury Plain, and consists principally of one well-paved street, about a mile in length. The town-hall, which has been lately rebuilt at the expense of the Marquis of Bath, is a handsome building in the centre of the market-place, containing a fine suite of apartments, for assemblies, public meetings, &c., and accommodation for holding the sessions.

The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the malt trade, and in the manufacture of broad cloths and kerseymers; the silk trade has been recently introduced, and affords employment to many females and children. The market is very considerable for the sale of corn, and the average quantity sold each market-day is from two to three thousand quarters. A high constable, deputy constables, and titlingmen are annually chosen at the manorial court of the Marquis of Bath, who has a noble mansion at Longleat. The county sessions of the peace are holden here annually in July. A court of requests for the recovery of debts not exceeding 5*l.* is held every Tuesday fortnight at Warminster and Westbury alternately, the jurisdiction of which extends over the hundreds of Warminster, Westbury, and Heytesbury; petty sessions are held monthly by the neighbouring magistrates. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Salisbury; valued in K. B. 18*l.* 0*s.* 2½*d.*; patron, the Bishop of Salisbury. The church, which is dedicated to St. Dennis, stands near the western extremity of the town, and is a spacious and handsome stone structure, with a square tower rising from the centre. Near the market-place is a neat chapel of ease, erected many years since for the greater convenience of the parishioners. A new church has been recently built by subscription, aided by a grant from the parliamentary commissioners. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, Unitarians, and Independent, and Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school, in which twenty boys are instructed, was founded and endowed by the first Viscount Weymouth. A national school for children of both sexes, and a Lancasterian school for girls, are supported by subscription. Warminster is considered one of the most healthy towns in England, and remarkable for the longevity of its inhabitants. In the vicinity are many British tumuli, and several remains of Roman encampments, particularly Battlesbury, where spear heads and other weapons have been frequently found. Near this intrenchment, on the bank of the river Willey, a beautiful tessellated pavement and the foundations of a Roman villa were discovered in 1786. On the west side of the town is Clay Hill, a steep and conical eminence, surmounted by a tumulus; it is nearly 900 feet above low watermark at Bristol, and was formerly used as a beacon. The environs are rich in fossil remains, many of which have been deposited in the British Museum. Dr. Huntingford, Bishop of Hereford, and Dr. Samuel Squire, Bishop of St. David's, were natives of this town.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of West Derby; it is a place of great antiquity, supposed to have been a British town, and afterwards made a Roman station, in the year 79, when Agricola invaded the country. The present name is a corruption of the appellation it obtained when in the possession of the Saxons, namely, Wæring and Tun, signifying a fortified town. During the parliamentary war, this place was for some time garrisoned for the king, the inhabitants having showed themselves royalists from its commencement, and it was several times the scene of very obstinately contested struggles. The town, pleasantly situated on the river Mersey, consists of four principal streets, running from a centre, besides many small ones; they are well paved and lighted with gas. The bridge, over the river, was first erected in the reign of Henry VII., by Thomas, the first Earl of Derby, when the king was on a tour in this part of the country; it, however, after having been many times repaired, was pulled down in 1812, and rebuilt with wood, on stone piers, by the counties of Lancaster and Chester conjointly. Here are a public library, a mechanics' institution, a horticultural society, assembly-rooms, and a theatre. A considerable trade is carried on in cotton goods and sail-cloths; and hardware, pins, and glass, are extensively manufactured. By means of the Mersey and Irwell navigation and the Sankey Canal, there is a direct communication with Manchester and the chief places of the district; and a railway from hence joins that of Manchester and Liverpool; and by different branches there is a direct communication as far as Wigan. The town is in the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, who hold petty sessions here twice a-month; a court-leet is also held annually, at which constables and other officers are appointed; the former are held in the town-hall, a neat edifice, built by a contribution of the inhabitants in 1820. The livings are a rectory and two curacies in the archdeaconry and diocese of Chester; valued in K. B., the rectory, 40*l.*; patron (1829) Lord Lifford: the curacies, that of St. Paul, not in charge; patron, the Rector; that of the Holy Trinity of the certified value of 17*l.* 10*s.*; ann. val. P. R. 106*l.*; patron (1829) Thomas Leigh, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Elphin, is a venerable old structure of Saxon origin, containing some fine specimens of several styles of architecture, and some curious old monuments. The chapels are neat edifices; that of St. Paul, very recently erected by the commissioners under the late act. Here are also places of worship for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, the Society of Friends, Lady Huntingdon's connexion, Unitarians, and Roman Catholics. The freeschool was founded and endowed by one of the Boteler family, in 1526; the head master has a salary of 300*l.* a-year; and there are two others who have 100*l.* and 60*l.* per annum; all boys in the parish who have attained the age of seven years, are eligible; and Lord Lifford has the appointment of the head master. The late Right Hon. George Tierney received his education at this institution. Here are also a richly-endowed blue-coat school, for the education of 150 boys and forty girls, a small number of which are clothed; a charity-school for 100 boys and fifty girls, an infant-school, and several very large Sunday-schools. The other charitable institutions of this town are a society for the relief of widows and orphans of clergymen of the archdeaconry of Chester; a lying-in charity, supported by the ladies; a dispensary; and a branch of the Royal Humane Society. Litherland, the inventor of the patent lever-watch, was a native of Warrington; and John Blackburne was born a short distance hence, who was very successful in the cultivation of the cotton-tree; he was also a botanist, and the second individual who brought the pine-apple to perfection in this country. Warrington gives title to the Grey family, who are Earls of Stamford and Warrington.

WARWICK, County of.

N to S about 50 m. E to W, extreme breadth, 35 m. No. of statute acres 977,280. Pop. 271,392. Hundreds 4. Liberty 1. Parishes 201, exclusive of those which extend into other counties. City 1. Borough 1. Market-towns 14. Memb. of Pt. G. Midland Circuit. Dioceses of Lichfield and Coventry, and Worcester. Province of Canterbury.

An inland county, bounded on the north and north-west by Staffordshire; on the east by the counties of Leicester, Northampton, and Oxford; on the south by Gloucestershire; and on the west by Worcestershire and Staffordshire. The northern part of this county appears to have been included within the territories of the ancient British tribe of the Cassii, and the southern part within those of the Doburni. Under the Romans it formed a part of the province called Flavia Cæsariensis. It was intersected from the south-east to the north-west by the great Roman road called the Watling Street; by the Fosseway, which crossing the former, enters this county northward of Monks Kirby, and passes obliquely entirely across the county to Moreton-in-the-Marsh, in Gloucestershire; and by the Icknield Street, which extends through a projecting portion of this county, passing northward by Alcester into Worcestershire; there is also an ancient road called the Ridgeway, which may be traced for some distance on the eastern confines of the county. Among the Roman stations in Warwickshire were Manduessedum (Manchester), in the north, and Alanna (Alcester), in the south, and there was perhaps another station at Chesterton. After the conquest of South Britain, by the Anglo-Saxons, this county belonged to the kingdom of Mercia or the Middle Angles. At Seckington, near its northern extremity, an obstinate engagement took place in 757, between Cuthred, King of Wessex, and Æthelwald, King of Mercia, in which the latter was killed; and after the termination of the heptarchy this part of the country was repeatedly ravaged by the Danes. In 1263, during the war between Henry III. and his barons, Kenilworth Castle was garrisoned by the latter, but in 1266 it was taken by the king, after a siege of six months. In the civil war of the seventeenth century, the people of Warwickshire in general adhered to the cause of the parliament, through the influence probably of the Earl of Warwick and Lord Brooke; the latter of whom, in January, 1643, was appointed general and commander-in-chief, under the Earl of Essex, of the associated counties of Warwick and Stafford. Edge Hill, on the south-eastern confines of the county, was the scene of the first pitched battle between the forces of Charles I. and the parliamentarians, in which the men of Warwickshire distinguished themselves on the side of the latter. The outline of this county forms an irregular oval, terminating in a point, both on the north and on the south. A narrow portion of this county on the south-west, is separated from the other parts of it by a detached tract belonging to Worcestershire; and there is a smaller insulated district near the western border, but enclosed by Worcestershire. The boundary-line on the north-east is partly formed by the Watling Street, and on the south the river Avon for a few miles divides it from Gloucestershire, but the boundaries in general are arbitrary. The surface displays alternations of hill and dale, the height in general being inconsiderable. The county is divided into two unequal portions by the river Avon. The southern, or smaller portion, which is called Feldon, is a champaign country of great fertility, bordered on the south-east by an elevated range of limestone hills, of which Edge Hill and Brails Hill form a part, and these as well as other eminences afford various and extensive prospects. The northern portion, called the Woodland, is chiefly in a high state of cultivation, but it includes tracts of wild heath and moorland, and a part of it still bears the appellation of the Forest of Arden; here also was anciently situated the royal forest of Killingworth or Kenilworth. The most elevated points of land in this district and in the county are the hills at Corley and Great Packington. The climate is reckoned mild and salubrious, and the prevailing winds are from the south-west, often attended with rain; but in spring vegetation sometimes suffers from the continuance of winds from the eastern quarter. Great diversities of soil prevail in different parts of the county. In the north the soil is gravelly; in the middle of the county clay predominates, with a substratum of limestone; and in other parts are found sandy and clayey loam, resting sometimes on freestone or limestone, and sometimes on gravel. The land in the forest of Arden and around Warwick, is especially adapted for the growth of the oak; elsewhere are found plantations of various kinds of timber-trees, among which, the most common is the elm. Wheat, barley, oats, beans, peas, potatoes, and tares, are raised in considerable quantities; and in the vale of the Avon the land is peculiarly adapted for the cultivation of turnips; flax is produced in several places, but the quantities are not considerable. In the northern part of the county, and on the banks of the Avon, are numerous meadows and pastures, in which are fed kine, chiefly of the long-horned Lancashire breed, for the dairy; and cheese is made here in abundance. Sheep are kept here, principally of the old Warwickshire breed, but often crossed with the new Leicester variety, whose fleeces produce wool of a fine quality. The principal rivers are the Avon, the Leam, and the Tame; besides which may be mentioned the smaller streams of the Anker, the Arrow, the Alne, the Swift, and the Stour. The Avon, which rises in Northamptonshire, after forming the boundary between that county and Leicestershire, enters Warwickshire at Bensford Bridge, flows westward to Ryton on Dunsmore, then takes a serpentine course by Warwick and Stratford-upon-Avon; and after skirting a part of the southern border, and cutting off a nook of the county, it enters Worcestershire, and passing Evesham it joins the Severn at Tewkesbury. The Leam has its origin on the confines of Northamptonshire, and taking a devious course westward unites with the Avon, near Warwick. The tract, called Dunsmore Heath, between the Avon and Leam, now chiefly enclosed, is famed in romantic history as the scene of some of the extraordinary adventures of the famous Guy Earl of Warwick. The Tame, from Staffordshire, enters this county westward of Birmingham, and passing eastward to its junction with the Cole, north of Coleshill, it takes a northern course to Tamworth, in Staffordshire. This county is divided into the hundreds of Hemlingford, including the divisions of Atherstone, Birmingham, Solihull, and Tanworth; Knightlow, with the divisions of Kenilworth, Kirby, Rugby, and Sontham; Barlichway, with the divisions of Alcester, Henley, Snitterfield, and Stratford; and Kington, with the divisions of Brails, Burton-Dassett, Kington, and Warwick; besides the district of the county of Coventry. The market-towns are Atherstone, Alcester, Birmingham, Coleshill, Henley-in-Arden, Kington, Kenilworth, Leamington, Nuneaton, Rugby, Solihull, Loutham, Stratford-on-Avon, and Sutton-Coldfield. Two members are returned to Parliament for the county, two for the city of Coventry, and two for the county-town and borough of Warwick.

WARWICK, co. Warwick.

London 90 m. N.W. Pop. 8235. M. D. Sat. Fairs, Jan. 21; Feb. 11 and 23; April 1; May 13; June 3; July 5; Aug. 12; Sept. 4; Oct. 12; Nov. 8; and Dec. 16, for horses, sheep, and cheese; that of Oct. is also a statute and pleasure fair. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market, and county town, under a separate jurisdiction, but situated within the Warwick division of the hundred of Kington. Some antiquaries have ascribed its foundation to the Britons or the Romans, but its origin may with greater probability be referred to the time of the Saxon Heptarchy, when Warremund, a Mercian chief, either founded or rebuilt a fortress here, from him called Warrewyke, whence its present appellation. Warwick appears to have been destroyed by the Danes, and restored about 913, by Ethelfleda, the daughter of King Alfred; and after the Norman conquest, the town was encompassed with walls, and the castle was enlarged, or perhaps rebuilt. In the reign of Edward I., the fortifications were repaired by Guy Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, who, in conjunction with Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, having taken prisoner Pierce Gavestone, the dissolute favourite of Edward II., had him executed by decapitation at Blacklow Hill, about a mile from the town, in 1312. In the civil war under Charles II., Warwick Castle was garrisoned for the parliament, by its proprietor, Robert Lord Brooke, when it was attacked by the royalists, who, after besieging it during a fortnight, were obliged to retreat. In 1694 a dreadful fire took place, which destroyed more than half the town; but in a few years it was rebuilt, contributions to the amount of 110,000*l.* having been collected for that purpose. A charter was granted to this town, vesting the government of it in a mayor, in the reign of Philip and Mary; and a new charter was given in 1694 by Charles II., and confirmed with some modifications by William III. The town is now governed by a corporation, consisting of a mayor, a recorder, a deputy-recorder, twelve aldermen, and twelve assistant burgesses, with a town-clerk, a sergeant-at-mace, and other officers. The mayor is chosen annually on the 29th of September, from the aldermen, by the burgesses; the recorder, who is appointed by the corporation, holds his office for life, and he appoints his deputy, who is also town-clerk; the aldermen are elected by the mayor and aldermen, who also elect the assistant-burgesses. The mayor, the preceeding mayor, the recorder, the deputy-recorder, and three senior aldermen, are justices of the peace, and they hold courts of session quarterly for the trial of all except capital offences; and a court of record, for the recovery of sums not exceeding forty pounds, is held weekly, before the town-clerk. This borough has sent members to Parliament ever since the reign of Edward I.; the right of election, by decision of the House of Commons in 1722, is stated to be vested in the inhabitants paying church and poor rates, about 550 in number; and the mayor is the returning officer. One member has usually been returned through the influence of the Earl of Warwick. The county assizes and quarter sessions are held at Warwick, as being the county town. This town is divided into two parishes; the living of that of St. Nicholas is a vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Worcester; valued in K. B. at 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 125*l.*, and in the patronage of the Corporation of Warwick. The church is a modern Gothic edifice, having been rebuilt in 1780, except the tower and spire, which were erected about forty years before that period. The living of the parish of St. Mary is a vicarage in the same archdeaconry and diocese as the preceding; valued in K. B. 20*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 135*l.*; and in the patronage of the King. The church, formerly collegiate, was partly destroyed by the fire already mentioned, and rebuilt in 1704; and though the architecture displays an inconsistent mixture of the Gothic and Roman styles, it is still a magnificent edifice. The chancel, a part of the original structure, possesses much architectural elegance, and contains several ancient monuments. The beautiful Beauchamp Chapel, erected by Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, in the latest pointed style, is also one of those portions of the church that escaped the conflagration. In the centre of this sepulchral chapel is a splendid altar-tomb, with a recumbent statue, much ornamented, erected in honour of the founder. On the north side of the church is the ancient chapter-house, now used as a mausoleum; and the chapel over it is now occupied as a national school. Here are places of worship for the Independents, the Quakers, the Unitarians, and the Wesleyan Methodists. A free grammar-school or college was founded here by Henry VIII., and endowed with property which had belonged to the dissolved monasteries; the patronage is vested in the King; the master has a salary of 130*l.* a-year; and the school is open to all boys of the town, on payment of 1*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* entrance money, and five shillings every half year. The scholars are entitled to two exhibitions at the university of Oxford, and two at that of Cambridge. There is a charity-school for thirty-nine boys and thirty-six girls, endowed by Lady Greville, Lord Brooke, and Mr. Oaken. A national-school for 200 children, is supported by subscription; and there is a school of industry, under the patronage of the Countess of Warwick. An hospital was founded by Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, for a master and twelve brethren, and endowed with property from which the master receives 400*l.* a-year, and each of the brethren 50*l.* a-year, besides leaving a surplus for the erection of additional buildings to accommodate ten more brethren. In different parts of the town are a very considerable number of almshouses, for aged women and other indigent persons; and large sums have been left in trust to the corporation for charitable purposes. The town is agreeably situated on a rock of freestone, with a declivity from the north, towards the river Avon. It consists principally of two spacious and regular streets, intersected by another; the houses are in general modern, and many of them are handsome specimens of architecture; and the streets are lighted with gas, and well paved, and from their local situation, are kept extremely clean. On the south side of the town stands the castle, one of the most complete and magnificent examples of the baronial architecture of the middle ages in this kingdom. It is picturesquely situated on a rock, forty feet above the level of the river Avon. The principal entrance is by an embattled gateway, from which a winding road has been excavated out of the solid rock, and on its sides are planted a profusion of ivy, and shrubs of various kinds. This approach is so contrived as to conceal the castle from view till it reaches a point, where, at a sudden turn, the lofty towers burst upon the eye in all their magnificence. To the left appears what is called Cæsar's Tower, 147 feet in height; it is considered as the most ancient part of the building, and is supposed to have been erected soon after the Norman conquest. On the right is Guy's Tower, 128 feet high, but standing on an elevated part of the rock, it commands the preceding. This tower, the walls of which are ten feet thick, was built in 1394, by Thomas Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick. These towers are connected by a massive embattled wall, in the centre of which is a spacious arched gateway, leading into the inner court, and this originally formed the grand entrance to the castle. In advance of this front is a deep moat, now dry, and having its surface covered with trees and shrubs. Over the entrance is a watch-tower. On the left stands the noble castellated mansion, now the family residence of the Earl of Warwick, a grand and extensive structure, which, notwithstanding modern improvements, still exhibits an air of antiquity. The entrance is by a Gothic porch, which leads to the hall, a handsome apartment, ornamented with numerous relics of antiquity; and the state-rooms, the armory, and other parts of the building, are appropriately decorated. The lawns and gardens are tastefully laid out; and in the green-house is a beautiful vase of Grecian sculpture, which was found among the ruins of the Villa Adriani, at Tivoli, in Italy. The town-hall is a handsome building of freestone, with a portico in front; and among the other public edifices may be mentioned the county hall, the courthouse, the county gaol, the bridewell, the judges' house, and the theatre. There is a public library, with a news-room, supported by subscription. The theatre is only opened occasionally, except during the races, which are held twice a-year, in March and September; and at the latter, among the prizes is a king's plate, value one hundred guineas. But little trade is carried on in this town, except that which arises from the demands of the local population; and the manufactures, which are not very important, include worsted-spinning, nail-making, rope-making, and an iron and brass foundry. On the banks of the Warwick and Napton Canal, are coal, timber, and lime wharfs. In and near the town were anciently several monastic establishments. A priory of canons regular of the holy sepulchre was founded in the reign of Henry I.; and some parts of the buildings belonging to it, situated at the entrance to the town from Birmingham, are still standing, having been converted into a dwelling-house. The hospital of St. John the Baptist, founded in the reign of Henry II., likewise still remains, on the Leamington road. Here were also colleges of secular clerks, a Dominican convent, and several churches, besides those now existing. This town gives the title of Earl to the family of Greville.

WARWICK, co. Cumberland.

P. T. Carlisle (301) 5 m. E. b N.

Pop. of Pa. 518. Of To. 257.

A parish and township in Cumberland ward, pleasantly situated on the west bank of the river Eden, over which is a stone bridge of four arches, near the foot of an eminence, on which are the remains of trenches, probably raised to guard the pass during the times of Scottish invasion. From the large earth-works, still remaining, this place is supposed to have been a Roman station. The living is a curacy, with that of Wetheral, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Carlisle, not in charge; patrons, the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. The church, which is dedicated to St. Leonard, is a Norman stone structure, with a semicircular east end, and appears to have been formerly much larger. A Sunday-school was built by the late Thomas Parker, Esq., who was a liberal benefactor to the poor.

WARWICK BRIDGE, co. Cumberland.

P. T. Carlisle (301) 6 m. E. Pop. 648.

A township in the parish of Wetheral, Eskdale ward, situated on the east bank of the river Eden, and connected with the parish of Warwick by a stone bridge of four arches. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in extensive cotton-mills and bleaching-grounds, established by Messrs. Dixon and Sons, who also support a Sunday-school. Here is a Roman Catholic chapel.

WASDALE, or NETHER WASDALE, co. Cumberland.

P. T. Ravenglass (279) 7 m. NNE. Pop. 211. Fair, 1st Mon. in Sept., for sheep.

Sat. Fair, Nov. 17, for cattle, &c.

A seaport, market-town, and township, in the parish of St. Decuman's and hundred of Williton and Freemanors. It is pleasantly situated in a valley, on a creek of the Bristol Channel, and consists chiefly of four paved streets. It was formerly a place of considerable trade, and noted for its herring-fishery: vessels are now employed in the coasting-trade, and in the importation of coal from Newport and Swansea. A small manufacture of woollen cloth and paper furnishes employment to some of the inhabitants. The pier, originally erected by the Wyndham family, was repaired by Sir William Wyndham, at the commencement of the last century, and the harbour cleansed; it is now kept in tolerable repair, by a tonnage duty, granted by act of parliament. Two packets ply between this place and Bristol every fortnight. Here are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists. The cliffs in the vicinity abound with alabaster and limestone. This ancient port several times suffered severely from the Danes, who, on one occasion, not content with destroying the houses, put all the inhabitants to the sword.

WATERFALL, co. Stafford.

P. T. Leeke (154) 7 m. ESE. Pop. 531.

A parish in the south division of the hundred of Totmonslow, almost surrounded by the river Hamps, which enters the ground at the Waterhouses, and pursues a subterraneous course of about three miles to Ilam, where it emerges and joins the river Manifold. Limestone, gritstone, and lead-ore are found in the neighbourhood. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Stafford and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry, of the certified value of 7*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 63*l.*; church ded. to St. James; patrons (1829) Mr. and Mrs. Wilmott. Here is also a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists. Eight poor children are instructed by means of a small bequest.

WATERFORD, County of, Munster, I.

N to S 29 m. E to W 51. No. of acres, 425,692. Baronies 8. Boroughs 1. Market-towns 6. Parishes 74. Pop. 127,842. Memb. of Pt. 4. Dioceses of Waterford and Lismore. Archdiocese of Cashel.

A maritime county, and one of the six into which the province of Munster is divided. The counties of Killkenny and Tipperary form its northern boundary, from both of which it is separated by the navigable Suir. Waterford Haven bounds it on the east, and intervenes between this and the county of Wexford. It is bounded on the west by the county of Cork, and its southern limit is the Atlantic Ocean. The eastern baronies form a champaign country, fertile, beautiful, and highly cultivated, but the barony of Glanebing is occupied by the wild and mountainous district known usually by the name of the Commons of Clonmell. Monevallah bogs and hills encumber the barony of Decies-without-Drum, and the lofty hills of Knock-mele-down, on the borders of Coshbride, attain an elevation of 2700 feet above sea-level. Good pasture is found on all these mountains, and the hilly and undulating districts afford excellent crops of every description. Beauty and fertility naturally accompany the course of rivers; an assertion fully established by a reference to the streams and rivers of this county. The noble river Suir, second in magnitude to the Shannon, enters Waterford at the north-west angle, and receiving the contributions of the Four-mile-water, the Claudagh, and other streams, and passing through the prosperous towns of Clonmell and Carrick-on-Suir, flows in a broad volume by the city of Waterford, and finally expands into a haven twelve miles in length and two in breadth. The Blackwater rises in the county of Cork, and, taking an easterly direction, glides by the ancient city of Lismore to the town of Cappoquin, where, turning at right angles, it pursues a southerly course, and falls into the sea in Yonghal Harbour. Its banks present a series of delicious river views, and are adorned with very many ancient and noble seats. The surface is also well watered by minor rivers, the chief of which, perhaps, are the Lickey, Bride, Phinisk, Oonashad, Baal-Lieky, the Beciky, and Colligan, which discharge their waters into Dungarvan Bay, the Tay, the Mahon, and Nier. There are but two lakes in this county, and these are merely accumulations of bog-water, Lough Come and Lough Saloge. Agriculture is in a forward and still improving condition. The number of resident gentry here, who farm extensively, contributes to expand the views of the less educated and more bigoted, and leads necessarily to the abandonment of obsolete and the introduction of new and improved modes of husbandry amongst the agricultural peasantry. Dairy-farms occupy a great portion of the soil, and the butter-making engages the industrious farmer. The rearing of pigs is also a profitable employment here, from their long established market for their sale in the city of Waterford. The horses are strong, active, and well-bred, and the black-cattle, improved by a cross with the Leicester breed. Dutch short horses are in request upon the dairy-farms. No mineral productions of any importance have been discovered, with the exception of a vein of rich copper-ore; on the banks of the river Mahon, underlaying the lands of the see of Waterford, and the estates of the Marquis of Ormond. The mining companies have obtained leases from the proprietor, and copper is now raised there. The Earl of Middletown has also leased a mineral district at Knockatrelawn, the produce of which is copper-ore, to the same company. The civil division comprehends the baronies of Coshbride, Cosmore, Decies-within-Drum, Decies-without-Drum, Gaultier, Glanahiry, Middlethird, and Upperthird. In them, the principal places of note are the city of Waterford, Lismore, anciently a city, now a picturesque and respectable town, Tallow, a disfranchised borough, Cappoquin, Dungarvan, Tramore, and a part of the capital town of Clonmell. Manufactures have established but a narrow base on the broad superficies of this county. All industrious exertions are as yet directed to the augmentation of agricultural production. Pigs, bacon, butter, hides, live cattle, potatoes, timber, and grain, are exported from the great quay of Waterford, and from the little harbour of Dungarvan, and conveyed thence to the Bristol and other English markets. The navigation of the river Suir, from the sea up to Clonmell contributes to promote the trade and commerce of an extensive, productive, and populous district, and the western baronies possess a partial advantage of a similar kind in the navigation of the Blackwater to the town of Cappoquin. Two members are returned to Parliament for the county, one for the city of Waterford, and one for the borough of Dungarvan.

WATERFORD, co. Waterford, Munster, I.
 Dublin 94 m. SSW. Cork 67 m. Pop. 28,679.
 Fairs, May 4; June 24; and Oct. 25. Memb.
 of Pt. 1.

A city in the county of the city of Waterford, standing upon the southern bank of the broad and navigable river Suir, which is crossed here by a wooden bridge designed by Lemuel Cox, an American. This is one of the most prosperous ports in the kingdom, and possesses singular natural advantages. Vessels of five hundred tons burden can lie safely in deep water at the quay, a distance of twelve miles from the sea. The whole of the city is confined to the Waterford side of the river, the buildings ascending the brow of a hill of trifling acclivity. The spire of the cathedral, an elegant modern structure, is seen elevated above all, and the towers of the different churches also contribute to vary the level surface of the city's roofs. Amongst the public buildings the bishop's palace ranks next to the cathedral in architectural beauty; it is of cut stone, presents two well-finished and handsome fronts, and commands an extensive view across the river into the county of Wexford. The county hall is also handsome, and the exchange, custom-house, gaol, theatre, thosall, barraeks, public rooms, freeschool, &c., are all on a spacious and liberal scale. The Roman Catholic cathedral is a splendid edifice, the interior finished in a chaste and costly style. Besides the places of worship already noticed, there are three parochial churches and four Roman Catholic chapels. The foundation of the city is attributed to the Danes, and dated A. D. 879, and its destruction again stated to have occurred in the year 981. In the year 1171 it was restored on an enlarged scale by Strongbow, Earl of Strigul; Richard II. was crowned here A. D. 1399; and in the reign of Henry VII. the city was further augmented and considerable privileges bestowed upon it. James II. embarked at this port for France immediately subsequent to the battle of the Boyne, in 1690, and King William III. was, on two separate occasions, a guest of the citizens of Waterford, whose ancient privileges and immunities he finally confirmed. The corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, two sheriffs, eighteen aldermen, nineteen assistants, a town-clerk, coroner, clerk of the crown and peace, mareschal, searcher, public notary, water-bailiff, sword-bearer, and four sergeants-at-mace. The city member is elected by freeholders and freemen. The ecclesiastical division of the county of the city comprehends the parishes of Trinity Within, Trinity Without, St. Michael's, St. Olave's, St. Peter's, St. Stephen's, St. Patrick's, St. John's Within, St. John's Without, Kill, St. Nicholas, Killculliheen, Killbarry, and Killoteran. The first four parishes are within the city, and constitute part of the corps of the deanery of Waterford; valued in K. B. 18*l*. 9*s*. 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ d.; and possessing two churches, two parsonages, exclusive of the deanery house, and 645 acres of glebe; patron, the King. The tithes of Trinity parish are held in common by the Dean and Chapter. The parishes of St. Patrick, St. Stephen, St. Peter, and St. John, are also within the city and constitute the corps of the archdeaconry; valued in K. B. 5*l*. 10*s*. 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ d.; and possessing one church and half an acre of glebe; patron, the Bishop of Waterford. This place being much frequented about half a century back by foreign refugees, government benevolently built a French chapel here and endowed it with 50*l*. per annum. The see of Waterford was established some time in the eleventh century, and united with that of Lismore A. D. 1363, by Pope Urban V., which union was confirmed by Edward III. It comprises the eastern part of the county of Waterford, extends thirteen miles in length and nine in breadth, and occupies an area of 31,300 acres of land, and includes forty-two parishes. The chapter consists of a dean, chancellor, treasurer, and archdeacon, the latter not enjoying the privilege of a vote. This is a place of considerable foreign and coasting trade; the exports in the year 1830 exceeding 2,000,000*l*. sterling in value.

Tipperary conveys hither its agricultural produce for exportation, and considerably increases the extensive provision trade established here. Amongst the various objects and commodities of traffic shipped at the noble quay of this commercial city may be mentioned beef, butter, grain, hides, tallow, and pork. About 5000 hogs are slaughtered here weekly, and nearly 100,000 casks of butter annually exported. It is not an uncommon occurrence to witness the quay, a length of nearly one mile, completely occupied by live stock preparing for embarkation.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Cashio. It is situated on the river Colne, and consists of one principal street, well built and paved, and about a mile in length. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in three silk throwsting-mills, and the manufacture of straw plat; there are also eight malt-kilns, and two extensive breweries. The market-house is a long building, supported on wooden pillars, with granaries above. The Grand Junction Canal passes about a mile west of the town, by means of which a communication is opened with the metropolis and the northern part of the kingdom. A meeting of magistrates is held every Tuesday; and there is a weekly court of requests for the recovery of debts under 40*s.*, the jurisdiction of which is co-extensive with the liberty of St. Alban's. Thelivin is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of St. Alban's and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 21*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*; patron (1829) the Earl of Essex. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a spacious structure, consisting of a nave, aisles, and chancel, with a massive embattled tower at the west end, about eighty feet high, surmounted by an hexagonal spire of twenty feet; it has two chapels attached, and contains many ancient and curious monuments. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, those in the connexion of the late Countess of Huntingdon, and Wesleyan Methodists. The free-school, founded by Elizabeth Fuller, in 1704, and subsequently endowed, is a handsome building, with a residence for the master and mistress; fifty boys and thirty girls are educated. A parochial freeschool, in which twelve boys are instructed, was founded and endowed by Francis Coombes, in 1641. A national school is chiefly supported by the Earl of Essex; and there are two small bequests for Sunday-schools. Here are also almshouses for twelve poor widows, a bequest for apprenticing poor children, and various other charities.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Pitron. It is situated between the two high roads leading from London to Oxford, is irregularly built, and the streets are narrow; it is watered by a brook, rising in the vicinity, and on which are four corn-mills. Lace-making forms the chief employment of the labouring females; and a school, established for the purpose of teaching this art, is generally attended by from thirty to forty girls. In the centre of the town stands the market-house, a substantial brick building, with a room above, in which the public business is transacted. Two courts leet are held annually, and the petty sessions for the hundred once a fortnight. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford; valued in K. B. 12*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 131*l.* 16*s.*; church ded. to St. Leonard; patron (1829) John H. Tilson, Esq. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, and Independent and Wesleyan Methodists. Nineteen boys are instructed in the free grammar-school, which was founded and endowed in 1664. Watlington Castle formerly stood north-east of the church, but the moat by which it was surrounded is all that now remains. On Bretwell Hill are some remains of trenches, indicating the site of an ancient encampment.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Wayland. It is situated in the centre of the hundred, near that part of the county called Filand, or the open country; the neighbourhood is noted for supplying the metropolis with large quantities of butter, called Cambridge butter. In the year 1673 this town suffered severely by fire, when property to the amount of 10,000*l.* was destroyed. A manorial court is held annually, and petty sessions for the hundred every month. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 7*l.* 0*s.* 4*d.*; patron, John Raby, Esq. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, appears to have been erected in the reign of Henry I.; the tower is circular at the base, and octangular above. Near the town is a place of worship for Independent Methodists. A national school, erected in 1819, is supported by voluntary subscription, and about 100 children are educated. Almshouses have been founded and endowed for four poor widows. Wayland Wood, near this town, gives name to the hundred, and is supposed to be the scene of the tale of "The Children in the Wood."

That part of the parish called Nether Weare was anciently a place of some importance, and had a weekly market with an annual fair, and in the 34th and 35th of Edward I. enjoyed the privilege of sending members to parliament.

WEARMOUTH, MONK, co. Pal. of Durham.

P. T. Sunderland (268) ½ m. N. Pop. 7644.

A parish in the east division of Chester ward, forming the north suburb of Sunderland, of which it may be considered a part. See Sunderland. It derives its name from its situation at the mouth of the river Wear, and the distinctive appellation from a monastery founded in 674 by Biscopius, a Saxon nobleman. In the reign of Ethelred this institution was destroyed by the Danes, but subsequently restored; the inmates were, however, near the end of the eleventh century removed to Durham. The town consists chiefly of two long streets running east and west, and a number of buildings on the shore where formerly were only a few fishermen's huts. The trade of the place is principally in connexion with the shipping of Sunderland. The living is a perpetual curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Durham; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 130*l.*; patron (1829) Sir H. Williamson, Bart. The church, ded. to St. Peter, is of great antiquity, said to have been built in 634. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, Presbyterians, and Wesleyan Methodists; and a freeschool in which nearly a hundred boys receive instruction; it is supported by an annual subscription of 25*l.* by Lady Williamson and voluntary contributions by other inhabitants. Bede passed the early part of his life in the above-named monastery, and it is supposed by some individuals that Monk Wearmouth was the place of his nativity.

WEARMOUTH PANS, co. Pal. of Durham.

Fair, Aug. 5, for cattle and sheep.

A parish in the hundred of Bempstone, very pleasantly situated on a considerable eminence; the immediate neighbourhood was formerly covered with water the greater part of the year, but from the extensive drainage effected during the last century, it has been converted into valuable land. Wedmore, originally written Wet-Moor, and anciently a borough, is under the superintendence of a portreeve annually chosen at the manorial court, with water-bailiffs, constables, and other officers. The living is a dis. vicarage and a peculiar in the diocese of Bath and Wells; valued in K. B. at 20*l.* 8*s.* $6\frac{1}{2}$ d.; patron, the Dean of Wells. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome cruciform structure in the Gothic style of architecture, with a tower rising at the intersection crowned with balustrades. Here are also places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists. A national school is supported by subscription. From the custom of appointing water-bailiffs, and the discovery of a large vessel, in draining the adjacent moor, it is supposed that the sea, at some remote period, came up to the town.

WEDNESFIELD, co. Stafford.

A market town and parish in the south division of the hundred of Offlow. It is a place of considerable antiquity, situated near the source of the river Tame. In the time of the Mercians, it was distinguished by a noble castle, and was fortified in 916 against the Danes, by Ethelfleda, a daughter of Alfred the Great. The town is celebrated for its numerous and valuable manufactures, the principal of which are gunlocks, coach ironmongery, agricultural implements, apparatus for gas, locks, screws, nails, horse-shoes, and cast and wrought iron works of every description, many of which are prepared for exportation. In the neighbourhood are numerous collieries, producing a species of coal which, from its great heat, is admirably adapted for the forges ; and a species of iron-ore, termed blond metal, is also found here, and is chiefly used in the manufacture of axes and other sharp instruments. On a small rivulet near the town are some corn-mills, and an extensive manufactory for edge tools. A branch of the Birmingham Canal passes in the vicinity. The town is governed by a constable, chosen at the manorial court, held annually in October. A court of requests, for the recovery of debts not exceeding 5*l.*, is held here occasionally. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Stafford and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry ; valued in K. B. 4*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* ; patron, the Lord Chancellor. The church, which is dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is an elegant structure, in the pointed style of architecture, with a handsome tower, surmounted by a lofty spire ; it stands on the summit of a hill, commanding a beautiful prospect, and is supposed to occupy the site of the ancient castle. Here are also places of worship for Independents and Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists ; also an almshouse, and an endowed school, for the education of poor children. A Lancasterian school is supported by voluntary contributions. William, the first Lord Paget, secretary of state to Henry VIII., was a native of this town.

London 67 m. NNW. Pop. 4454. M. D. Wed. Fairs, Easter-Wed, for horses and hogs; Whit-Wed, for horses, horned cattle, and sheep; and Oct. 29, ditto and cheese.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Hamfordshoe. It derived its name from the fountains or wells that abound here, of which that denominated Redwell, was formerly so celebrated for its medicinal effects, that in 1626 Charles I. and his queen resided in tents during a whole season, for the purpose of drinking the water pure at its source. It was a place of some consequence in the time of the Saxons; and was constituted a market-town by a charter from King John. The town, which was nearly destroyed by fire in 1738, is situated on the slope of a hill, nearly a mile north of the navigable river Nen: it consists of several streets, lighted and pitched, the principal of them meeting in the market-place: the houses, which are built of red sandstone, are modern and handsome. The inhabitants are chiefly occupied in the manufacture of boots and shoes and bobbin-lace; the former was very extensive during the war, and is still considerable; and the latter, though on the decline, employs many females and children: a silk-mill has been recently established, and the market for corn is very considerable. Manorial courts are held annually in October, and petty sessions for the division every week, by the county magistrates, who assemble at the town-hall, which has been lately erected. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough; valued in K. B. at 24*l.* 1*s.* 8*d.*; patron (1829) John Vivian, Esq. The church, which is dedicated to All Saints, is a spacious and handsome structure, with a tower at the west end, surmounted by a handsome spire; on the south side is a Norman door, the interior contains some ancient screen-work and stalls, and the east window is richly decorated with sculpture and tracery. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, the Society of Friends, and Wesleyan Independent Methodists. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed in the reign of Edward VI. In the charity-school, established about 1711, twenty-five boys are taught to read, and twenty-five girls to read, sew, and make lace. There are also some charities for the benefit of the poor.

WELLINGTON, co. Salop.

London 142 m. NW. Pop. 8390. M. D. Thurs. Fairs, March 29; June 22; Sept. 29; and Nov. 17; for horned cattle, horses, sheep, and swine.

A market-town and parish in the Wellington division of the hundred of Bradford, South. It occupies a low situation near the ancient Roman Watling Street, and is partly bounded by the river Tern. The streets are mostly narrow, but they have been recently greatly improved, and are now lighted with gas, and the houses in general are well built and of modern appearance. The trade consists chiefly of the different branches of iron manufacture, particularly that of nails; and several companies of iron-masters have establishments in the neighbourhood. There are also a glass manufactory, corn-mills, and malt-kilns, and some business is carried on in timber. The town is governed by a mayor and constables, and two clerks are appointed to regulate the market; a manorial court is held annually in November, at which these officers are appointed; petty sessions for the division take place weekly, and a court of record for the recovery of debts under 20*l.* is held on specified days. The living is a vicarage with the rectory of Eyton, exempt from visitation, and in the diocese of Lichfield and Coventry; valued in K. B. 9*l.* 5*s.*; patronage with Eyton rectory. The church, which is dedicated to All Saints, is an elegant modern structure of freestone, supported by cast-iron pillars; and the window-frames, one of which is fifteen feet high, are likewise of iron. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, Independents, and Wesleyan Methodists; a freeschool for poor children of both sexes, a national school, and an almshouse for poor women. About a mile and a half from the town are two valuable springs, one chalybeate the other sulphureous; a commodious inn and baths have been erected here at considerable expense, and it has become a much frequented and favourite watering-place. During the civil war this was the first place of rendezvous of Charles I., who, on the 19th of September, 1642, assembled his forces near the town, and after issuing orders for the maintenance of strict discipline, delivered in person the remarkable address mentioned by Clarendon. The base of the huge mound of the Wrekin is only two miles from the town; it rises from the plain to a height of about 1100 feet above the bed of the Severn, comprises an horizon of from 350 to 400 miles in circumference, and is surmounted by an ancient fortification.

WELLINGTON, co. Somerset.

London 148 m. WSW. Pop. 4170. M. D. Thurs., chiefly for corn. Fairs, Thursdays bef. Easter and Whitsuntide, for cattle.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Kingsbury, situated on the road from Bath to Exeter. The town is well built, and consists of several streets, the chief of which is about half a mile long; it has latterly undergone several improvements, and in June of the present year 1832, the first stone of a new market-place was laid. The manufacture of serges and druggets was formerly carried on here to a considerable extent, but is now only on a limited scale. The government of the town is vested in a bailiff and other officers, chosen annually at the manorial court. The living is a vicarage and a peculiar in the diocese of Bath and Wells; valued in K. B. 15*l.* 10*s.* 2½*d.*; patron (1829) the Rev. W. P. Thomas. In the church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a handsome monument to Sir John Popham, lord chief justice in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I. A chapel for the church of England service has been erected by the Rev. N. P. Thomas; and the Baptists, Society of Friends, and Independent Wesleyan Methodists, have places of worship here. In 1604 Sir John Popham founded and endowed almshouses for six poor men and six poor women, a master, and matron; the two last to give instruction to some of the children of the parish. Wellington confers the title of Viscount, Earl, Marquis, and Duke, on Arthur Wellesley, the distinguished military commander, hero and prince of Waterloo. At a short distance from the town a magnificent pillar has been erected by voluntary contributions, in commemoration of his Grace's splendid victory at Waterloo, in 1815.

A parish in the hundred of Wellow, intersected by a railway from the Welton collieries, communicating with the Avon and Kennet and the Radford canals. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Wells and diocese of Bath and Wells; valued in K. B. 20*l.* 6*s.* 10½*d.*; church ded. to St. Julian; patron (1829) Edward Gardiner, Esq. Here is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists. Ten poor children are instructed by means of a bequest of 10*l.* a-year, and two for a rent-charge of 2*l.* At the extremity of the parish is a very large barrow called Woodeborough, and another smaller one in which several stone coffins have been found. Amongst numerous other Roman antiquities, three tessellated pavements, with altars, pillars, and fragments of pateræ and other vessels have been discovered in the neighbourhood.

WELLS, co. Somerset.

London 120 m. W b S. Pop. 5888. M. D. Wed. and Sat. and every 4th Sat., a large market for corn, cattle, and cheese; Jan. 6; May 14; July 6; Oct. 25; and Nov. 30; for cattle, horses, and pedlery. Mem. of Pt. 2.

An ancient city and bishop's see, under a separate jurisdiction, but locally within the hundred of Wells Forum. It stands at the base of the Mendip Hills, near the source of the river Ax; and it derives its name from a remarkable spring called St. Andrew's Well, which, rising near the bishop's palace, flows through the south western part of the city. Here Ina, King of Wessex, in 704, founded a collegiate church, dedicated to St. Andrew the Apostle; and from the gradual accumulation of buildings in its vicinity the city probably originated. The college was subsequently endowed by Eynewolf, one of the successors of Ina, and in the reign of Edward the Elder it appears to have been made the seat of a bishop, whose diocese included the county of Somerset. In 1087 John de Villula, an ecclesiastic who was skilled in the art of medicine, being made bishop, removed the see to Bath, as also did his two immediate successors; and the circumstance gave rise to violent disputes between the people of Bath and those of Wells, either party claiming the exclusive right of having their city made the seat of the bishopric; but the point in question was at length settled by the mediation of the bishop, who decided that the episcopal title should in future include both cities, that the prelates should be elected by delegates from each chapter, and that the ceremony of installation should be celebrated in both churches. A charter was granted to the city constituting it a free borough, by Bishop Fitz Jocelyn, in the reign of Richard I. The next prelate, Savaricus, removed the seat of the bishopric to Glastonbury; but after his death, in 1205, the monks recovered their independence, being placed under the government of an abbot, but they were obliged to give up a considerable part of their revenue to the bishop, who resumed the title of Bishop of Bath and Wells. Contests subsequently arose between the ecclesiastics of the two cities relative to the right of electing the bishop, till, at the reformation, the monastic establishment of Bath being suppressed, the clergy of Wells obtained undisputed authority. Among the more distinguished prelates who have presided over this see may be mentioned Cardinal Wolsey, William Laud, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas Ken, deprived as a non-juror, and his successor, the learned Dr. Richard Kidder, who was killed, together with his lady, by the fall of a stack of chimneys in the episcopal palace at Wells, during the memorable storm which happened in the night, November 26th, 1703. The ecclesiastical officers, exclusive of the bishop, are a dean, a sub-dean, a chancellor, a precentor, a treasurer, three archdeacons, forty-nine prebendaries, four priest-vicars, eight lay-vicars, and others. The bishopric of Bath and Wells is valued in K. B. 533*l.* 1*s.* 3*d.* The deanery is valued in K. B. 116*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*, and is in the patronage of the Crown; the subdeanery is valued in K. B. 21*l.* 15*s.*; the chancellorship 40*l.* 5*s.*; the precentorship 24*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.*; the treasurer'ship 62*l.* 2*s.* 3½*d.*; the archdeaconry of Bath 25*l.* 15*s.*; that of Wells 144*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*; and that of Taunton 83*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*—all which, with the prebends, are in the patronage of the Bishop. The cathedral church, which is situated at the eastern extremity of the city, is a most magnificent cruciform edifice, chiefly in the decorated pointed style. It was principally erected by Bishop Jocelyn de Welles, in 1239. The west front, which is most richly ornamented, is divided by buttresses into compartments, in the centre of which is the doorway, surmounted by tiers of canopied niches, filled with statues, and decorated with tabernacle work, arranged in a pyramidal form. In the superior portion of this compartment are the statues of the twelve apostles, below them other figures, and still lower, a representation of the Resurrection, sculptured in high relief. The lateral compartments are surmounted by massive square towers, the lower stages of which have embellishments corresponding with the other part of this front, and the upper display ornamented buttresses, windows, and a pierced parapet. In the centre of the building, at the intersection of the nave and choir with the transept, is a loftier tower, elegantly ornamented with buttresses, pinnacles, and an open parapet. The nave is separated from the aisles by a noble range of clustered pillars, from which spring pointed arches, surmounted by a triforium of lancet arches, and a range of clerestory windows, enriched with beautiful tracery. The nave has a finely-groined ceiling, and the west window is ornamented with painted glass. The choir displays the decorated pointed style, and beyond it is the Lady Chapel, almost unrivalled for elegance of design and richness of architectural embellishment, having a ceiling ornamented with elaborate tracery, and the other parts are of a corresponding character. There are in different parts of the cathedral a number of chapels, some of which are enclosed with handsome screens; and in an old chapel, in the north transept, is a curious piece of machinery, called Peter Lightfoot's clock, which was brought from Glastonbury Abbey, and which exhibits an astronomical dial, and a train of figures like armed knights, moved by the clockwork so as to form a circular procession. Here are many curious ancient monuments, as the tomb of Bishop Beekington, in a chapel in the presbytery, with a recumbent statue in alabaster; anciently there was a handsome monument for Bishop Jocelyn, in the centre of the choir; and in the nave is said to have been interred King Ina, the legislator of the West Saxons, and original founder of this church. On the south side of the cathedral are the cloisters, which form a quadrangle. The chapter-house is a handsome octangular building, with a groined roof, supported by a clustered pillar in the centre; and beneath it is a crypt. The episcopal palace is an ancient castellated mansion, which, with its moats, tower, and battlements, more resembles the fortress of a feudal chief, than the abode of a clerical dignitary. The charter, originally granted to the city by Bishop Fitz Jocelyn, was superseded by one given by Queen Elizabeth, in the thirty-first year of her reign, under which the civic government is vested in a corporation, consisting of a mayor, a recorder, seven masters or aldermen, sixteen gownsmen, or common-councilmen, with a town-clerk and other officers. The mayor, the recorder, and the senior master, are justices of the peace within the city. The freedom descends to the eldest son of a freeman, or may be obtained by marrying the eldest daughter or by apprenticeship. The corporation has the power of holding sessions half-yearly, for the trial of all except capital offences; and also a court of record, for the recovery of debts unlimited in amount. The summer assizes for the county are held in the town-hall, in this city, alternately with Taunton; and the quarter-sessions are likewise held here, at Epiphany and Easter. Members have been returned to Parliament for this place regularly ever since the reign of Edward I. The right of election, by decisions of the House of Commons in 1723 and 1729, is vested in the mayor, masters, and burgesses or freemen, in number 450; and the mayor is the returning officer. The city constitutes what is called the in-parish of St. Cuthbert, enclosing the precincts of the cathedral; and a circumjacent district, seven miles in circumference, forms the out-parish of St. Cuthbert, containing several hamlets. The cathedral precinct or liberty of St. Andrew, which is extra-parochial, is subject to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter, as also is the out-parish; but the in-parish is in the jurisdiction of the Bishop. The living of St. Cuthbert is a vicarage; valued in K. B. at 33*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*; and in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter. The church is a large and handsome edifice, in the later pointed style of architecture, consisting of a nave, aisles, and choir, with a lofty square tower, ornamented with battlements and pinnacles. It contains several sepulchral chapels, some of which are of an ancient date. The Independents, the Baptists, and the Wesleyan Methodists, have their respective places of worship in this city. Besides the collegiate school, the mastership of which is in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter, there is a freeschool, founded in 1654, by Mary Barkham, Adrian Hickes, and Philip Hodges; the present endowment of which, amounting to more than 500*l.* a-year, is appropriated to the education and clothing of thirty-four boys and twenty girls, the former of whom also receive apprentice-fees and gratuities. An hospital for twelve aged men, and the same number of women, with a chaplain, was founded in the beginning of the fifteenth century, by Bishop Nicholas Bubwith; and the revenue, improved by the subsequent benefactions of the prelates, Beekington, Bourne, and Still, now amount to about 400*l.* a-year, the number of the inmates having been augmented to thirty, besides the chaplain. There are likewise almshouses for six aged women, founded by Henry Llewellyn, in 1614; for decayed burgesses, by Walter Brick, in 1638; and for decayed wool-combers, by Archibald Harpur, in 1711. The city is not very extensive, but the houses in general are well built, and several of them display elegance of structure, being of modern date, while there are others which have an antiquated appearance. There are four principal streets, which derive their appellations from the four verderies into which the city is divided; the whole is well paved; and a handsome public conduit, erected in the place of one built by Bishop Beekington, furnishes an abundant supply of water from St. Andrew's Well. The town-hall is a convenient structure, situated on one side of the market-place, an extensive area communicating by an ancient gateway with the cathedral close. An antique market-cross, which formerly stood here, was taken down in 1780, when the conduit was rebuilt. The only manufacture carried on in the city which requires notice, is that of knit stockings; but in the vicinity, at Wookey and Bleadney, are paper-mills, where are made considerable quantities of paper of a fine quality. The trade chiefly arises from the demands of the resident population; and the weekly markets are well supplied, especially with provisions; there is also a monthly market on Saturdays, for cattle, cheese, and corn. In that part of the city called Sonthover, are some relics of the priory of St. John, originally founded by Hugh de Welles, Bishop of Lincoln and Archdeacon of Wells, in the beginning of the thirteenth century, and subsequently augmented by Bishop Joscelyne; the buildings have been converted into a woolcomber's shop. The neighbourhood, especially on the side of the Mendip Hills, abounds with geological interest. Among the natives of Wells may be mentioned Dr. George Bull, Bishop of St. David's, a learned theological writer, who died in 1709, at the age of seventy-five. Races take place annually in the vicinity of this city.

WELLS-NEXT-THE-SEA, co. Norfolk.

London 118 m. NNE. Pop. 2950.

Fair, Shrove-Tues.

A seaport-town and parish in the hundred of North Greenhoe. It is situated on a creek about a mile from the German Ocean, consists principally of two streets, partly paved, and contains a neat theatre and a subscription library. The harbour, from the accumulation of sand, is rather difficult of access, but considerable improvements have been lately effected by the harbour commissioners. The custom-house is a brick building, situated on the quay, and the establishment consists of a collector, comptroller, land and tide waiter, &c. The chief traffic is the exportation of grain and malt, and the importation of coal, deals, tiles, bark, linseed, and rapeseed cakes, tar, and wine; and an oyster-fishery also furnishes employment to many persons. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; patron (1829) John Hill, Esq. The church, which is dedicated to All Saints, is a spacious and handsome flint structure, with a lofty embattled tower. Here are also places of worship for Independents, the Society of Friends, and Wesleyan Methodists. The freeschools, for thirty boys and thirty girls, were founded and endowed by C. Ringer, Esq., of Field Dalling. Petty sessions for the hundred are held once a fortnight; and courts leet and baron are held annually by the lord of the manor, at which the steward presides. Races formerly took place here, but are now discontinued.

Several Roman coins, urns, and other antiquities have been discovered here turned up by the plough.

WELSHPOOL, or POOL, anciently TRALLWNG, co. Montgomery, N. W.

London 171 m. NW. Pop. 3535. Fairs, 2d Mond. in Mar.; on Palm-Mond.; June 5; 1st Mond. aft. July 10; Sept. 12; and Nov. 16. M. D. Thurs. Market for flannels, every alternate Thurs.

A handsome, well-built, market-town, enjoying a separate jurisdiction, but locally situated in the hundreds of Pool and Cawrs. It stands at a short distance from the banks of the Severn, in a rich and beautiful country, and has the advantage of the transit of the Montgomeryshire Canal through here. The principal avenue ascends the front of a gentle eminence, commencing from the canal bridge, and contains a number of respectable houses, built mostly of brick. The county-hall, a modern structure, is ornamented with a portico, supported by pillars of cut stone, and was built by subscription. The flannel-hall is less architectural. St. Mary's Church hangs over the Cross Street, and is itself out-topped by a cemetery, filled to a most displeasing degree with melancholy remains, and rising so rapidly behind as to obscure the very windows of the church. Here are chapels of the Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, and Calvinists. Two good inns welcome the traveller, and many neat villas and pretty cottage-residences in the immediate vicinity of the town, present a prospect of agreeable retirement to respectable persons of moderate incomes. The ancient borough, disfranchised in 1728, contributed with Montgomery in returning a member to parliament, and comprehended sections of several of the adjoining parishes. It continues to be governed by two bailiffs, who are ex officio justices of the peace, and elected annually by the aldermen and burgesses, and retains its recorder and high steward. Lord Clive is proprietor of the manor, and holds a court-baron once in each year; besides which, there are also a court-leet and a borough court, wherein debts of any amount may be sued for. The great sessions for the county of Montgomery are held here in the spring and autumn, as well as the petty sessions for the hundred of Cawrs. The living is a dis. vicarage in the diocese of St. Asaph; valued in K. B. 13l. 5s. 2½d.; patron, the Bishop. The rectorial tithes, with those of Bultington, Guilsfield, and Meiford, belonged originally to the abbey of Ystrad-Marshell, in this parish, and were granted by Cardinal Wolsey to the dean and canons of Christ College, Oxford. The parish is all enclosed, and separated into three sections, for the easier collection of rates; they are called Upper, Middle, and Lower, and comprise the townships of Gynngrogfawr, Llannerch-huddol, Tref-nant-fechan, and Welshtown, in the lower division; the whole town of Welshpool in the middle division; and Dyserth, Strydan-fechan, Trallwn-gollen, Tyddyn-prydd, and Cyfronydd, in the upper division. The market is well supplied with grain, and extensive sales are effected here weekly. The chief trade, however, consists in the sale of flannels, for which this is the best market in North Wales. Every second week a flannel market is held, and the annual value of webs sold here is estimated at 200,000l. Besides the proximity of the river, which is navigable here during several months in the year, the trade and general prosperity of the vicinity have been much improved by the easy mode of transport afforded by the Montgomeryshire Canal, which passes through the town, and opens a communication with Chester and Liverpool. Two additional canals are in actual progress, the effect of which will be to establish a ready intercourse also with London and Birmingham. The free-school enjoys the benefit of a small endowment. A second school is conducted here on Dr. Bell's system, and there is a Sunday-school also held in the parish church. Besides other benevolent and charitable institutions, this town possesses a dispensary for the gratuitous distribution of medicines to the labouring poor. The surrounding county is remarkably fertile and disposed into agreeable undulations; the summit of each eminence is clothed with wood, and the base in general spread with the greenest pastures. But the pride of Welshpool is the ancient palace of Castell Côch. It is built of red sandstone, occupies the summit of an eminence, commanding a view over the town, and the rich vale of the Severn; and the range of the Freiddyn Hills terminates the panorama, on the loftiest of which stands Rodney's column. The style of the building is formal and quaint. Here are inner and outer courts, and other appendages of baronial greatness. Hanging gardens, the taste and fashion of a different age and climate, adorn the southern front, approached by successive flights of steps, cut in the solid rock, the latter protected by heavy-ornamented balusters. The park is spacious and beautiful, affording many exquisite passages of forest and general sylvan scenery; the little dark pool, whence the hundred and the town are supposed to borrow their appellations, is situated within the demesne, at a short distance from the private gate, leading into the high street. Castell Côch was the chief residence of the Princess of Powys, and passed by the marriage of Hawys-Gadarn, the last Welsh heiress of the line to the Charltons of Apley; it was again transferred by marriage to the family of Grey, who sold it to the Herberts, now Earls of Powys, and proprietors of vast possessions in this county. On the summit of the Freyddyn Hills, in this parish, is the ancient encampment of Caractacus, where the last struggle for British liberty was maintained awhile, and then lost for ever by the surrender of that brave prince. The town itself is an early Saxon settlement, as appears from the old charters and corporate records. The learned Doctor Morgan, afterwards Bishop of St. Asaph, and translator of the Welsh Bible, was once the vicar of this parish.

WELTON, co. Lincoln.

P. T. Lincoln (132) 6 m. N b E. Pop. 484.

A parish in the east division of the wapentake of Lawres, parts of Lindsey; living, a dis. vicarage, exempt from visitation, and in the diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. R. 80*l.*; patron, the Lord Chancellor. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, contains a very ancient and once-splendid monument, said to have been removed from Burstall Abbey. Here are also places of worship for the Society of Friends and Wesleyan Methodists.

WELWYN, co. Hertford.

P. T. Hertford (21) 8 m. WNW. Pop. 1287.

A parish in the hundred of Broadwater, situated on the small river Mimram, and on the high road from London to York; it consists of one principal street, with a smaller leading to Stevenage, and contains several handsome residences and an assembly-room. In Mill Lane is a fine chalybeate spring, formerly in considerable repute. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Huntingdon and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 21*l.*; patron, All Souls College, Oxford. The church is dedicated to St. Mary. Over the altar is a piece of embroidery with a suitable inscription, by Lady Betty Young, wife of Dr. Edward Young, author of the "Night Thoughts," who was many years rector of this parish; he died on Good Friday, 1765, and was buried by the side of his lady under the communion-table. There is also a monument to his memory. Here are also places of worship for the followers of Lady Huntingdon and Wesleyan Methodists. Dr. Young founded and endowed a school for sixteen poor boys, who are clothed and instructed in reading, writing, and arithmetic, and in the duties of the Christian religion, according to the principles of the established church. A national school, in which about fifty boys are educated, is supported by contributions.

WEM, co. Salop.

London 163 m. NW. Pop. of Pa. 3603. Of To. 1555. M. D. Thurs. Fairs, March 4 and May 6 and 20, for horned cattle, horses, sheep, linen, and flax seeds; June 29; Sept. 30 and Nov. 22, for horned cattle, horses, linen-cloth, pigs, and swine.

A market-town, parish, and township, in Whitchurch division of the hundred of Bradford, North. It is pleasantly situated on the north bank of the river Roden, and consists principally of one spacious street, called High Street, with several smaller streets and lanes, branching off in different directions. In 1677 the town suffered severely from a dreadful fire, which consumed the church and market-house, and destroyed property of the value of upwards of 23,000*l.* The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the tanning and malting trade, which is carried on to a very considerable extent. The market-house is a neat brick building, with stone quoins, having a room above in which the courts leet are held. Wem appears to have been incorporated, though at what period is not known; but, from a copy of court-roll, it must have been prior to the reign of Edward VI. The principal officers are two bailiffs chosen annually at the court-leet, held after Michaelmas, one by the lords steward, and the other by the borough jury. Their authority is, however, very limited; and they do not possess magisterial powers. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Salop and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry; valued in K. B. 26*l.* 4*s.* 4½*d.*; patron (1829) the Marquis of Cleveland. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a spacious and handsome structure, with a lofty tower, and a fine chancel; it appears to have been built at an early period, but the subsequent alterations and repairs it has undergone have left little of the original style. An elevated spot at the north-west corner of the churchyard, now converted into gardens, is supposed to have been the site of the ancient castle. Here are also places of worship for Baptists and Presbyterians. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed in 1659, by Thomas Adams, Esq., who was born here in 1586; he became Lord Mayor of London, in 1645, and was created a baronet in 1660. This school enjoys the benefit of two exhibitions, founded by Mr. Careswell. It has been conjectured by Horsley that Wem occupies the site of the ancient Rutunium, but there is no authentic account of it prior to the Conquest, at which period William Pandulf, who held twenty-eight manors of Earl Roger de Montgomery, made it the head of a barony, and fixed his residence here; and on the forfeiture of the estates of Robert de Belesme, son of Earl Roger, for rebellion in the reign of Henry I., Pandulf held it immediately of the crown, and thence became a baron of the realm. After continuing for several generations in this family, and passing through the hands of other proprietors, the barony was, in 1665, purchased by Daniel Wycherley, father of the poet, and by him sold to the unprincipled Judge Jefferies, who was created Baron of Wem in 1685, being the first who enjoyed that dignity by patent, but at the death of his son the title became extinct. Wem was the first town in this county which declared for the parliament in 1643; in the same year a party of the king's troops, under Lord Capel, attempted to capture it by storm, but were repulsed by the small garrison, aided, it is said, by the active exertions of the women. Mr. John Ireland, author of "Hogarth Illustrated," was born in this parish.

WEMBDON, co. Somersct.

P. T. Bridgewater (139) 1½ m. NW.
Pop. 293.

A parish in the hundred of North Pether-ton, situated near the navigable river Parret; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Taunton and diocese of Bath and Wells: valued in K. B. 9*l*. 16*s*. 10*d*.; church ded. to St. George; patron (1829) C. K. Tynte, Esq.

WEMBURY, co. Devon.

P. T. Earl's Plympton (212) 5 m. S. by W.
Pop. 561.

A parish in the hundred of Plympton, bounded on the west and south by the English Channel, and on the east by the river Yealm. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Totness and diocese of Exeter; certified value 28*l*. 13*s*. 4*d*.; ann. val. P. WEMYSS, shire of Fife, S.

P. T. Dysart (14) 13 m. NE. Pop. 4157.
Fair, 2d Wed. in Sept.

A parish in the district of Kirkaldy, six miles in length, one and a-half in breadth, and containing the seaport town of West Wemyss, with the villages of East Wemyss, Birckhaven, East Coaltown, West Coaltown, Kirkland, and Methil. The surface rises abruptly from the shore towards the north, and becomes almost level to the centre, where it again rises into what may be termed table land. It affords a diversity of soil which in general is arable and well-cultivated, though an extensive portion of it is covered with plantations. Coal of excellent quality is wrought to a great extent and shipped at West Wemyss, where there are several salt-pans; limestone also abounds, and the rocks on the coast are chiefly composed of freestone, which in many places exhibit deep caves, whence the parish seems to have derived its name, Weems, or Wemyss, signifying in Gaelic, Rocky Caverns; of these the glass cave, near West Wemyss, and another at East Wemyss, are the most noted. The living is in the presbytery of Kirkaldy and synod of Fife; patrons, the Town Council of Edinburgh. The church was rebuilt about twenty years ago. On the summit of a lofty promontory jutting into the sea is the ancient castle of West Wemyss, celebrated as the scene of the first interview between the unfortunate Mary and Lord Darnley; it has been much modernized and is still the residence of the family of Wemyss, which is lineally descended from the old Earls of Fife. At East Wemyss are two towers and other remains of Macduff's castle, so termed from its founder, in 1057, who was created Earl of Fife by Malcolm Canmore. Wemyss gives the title of Earl to the family of Charteris.

WEMYSS, EAST, shire of Fife, S.

P. T. Dysart (14) 13 m. NE. Pop. 648.

A village in the parish of Wemyss and district of Kirkaldy, situated on the northern coast of the Firth of Forth, but possessing no harbour except for boats employed in the fisheries. Here are a considerable manufacture of linen and a large brewery.

WEMYSS, WEST, shire of Fife, S.

P. T. Dysart (14) 2 m. ENE. Pop. 592.

A burgh of barony and seaport in the parish of Wemyss and district of Kirkaldy, occupying a pleasant site on the north side of the Firth of Forth. It has a good harbour convenient for the exportation of coal which abounds in the neighbourhood, and is shipped in immense quantities in vessels belonging to the port. The manufacture of salt also is carried on to some extent, and vitriol works have been established; but of late years the trade of the place has greatly decayed from the decrease in ship-building, which once formed the principal business of the inhabitants. It is governed by two baillies, a treasurer, and council, under the superiority of the family of Wemyss, of Wemyss castle. See Wemyss.

WENDOVER, co. Buckingham.

London 35 m. NW b W. Pop. 1602. M. D. Mond. Fair. May 13 and Oct. 2, for cattle. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish in the hundred of Aylesbury. It is situated at the foot of the Chiltern hills, near the entrance to the vale of Aylesbury. A branch of the Grand Junction Canal has been brought to the town, and is supplied with water by means of a large reservoir, which covers about seventy acres. The inhabitants derive their chief support from lace-making. The manor was given by Henry II. to Farnus de Boulogne, and it was subsequently in the possession of the Fiennes; Sir John Molins; Alice Perrers, a favourite of Edward III.; Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent; Edward, Duke of York, in 1388, (between which period and 1564 it was held either by the queen or some branch of the royal family); and Sir Francis Knollys and Catherine his wife; in 1660 it was purchased by the Hampden family, and continued in their possession until the decease of the late lord. Wendover, which is a borough by prescription, returned members to Parliament from the 28th of Edward I. to the 2d of Edward II., and, after a discontinuance of more than 300 years, the privilege was recovered through the exertions of Mr. Hakeville, a barrister, who, on examining the ancient parliamentary writs in the tower in the 21st of James I., discovered that Amersham, Wendover, and Great Marlow, had all sent representatives. The right of election is vested in housekeepers not receiving alms; the number of voters is about 130, and the constables, chosen at the court-leet of the manor, are the returning officers; the influence of Lord Carrington is predominant. The celebrated patriot Hampden represented this borough in five successive parliaments. Petty sessions are held once a fortnight, and courts leet and baron occasionally. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 12*l.* 16*s.* 1*d.*; church ded. to St. Mary; patron, the Lord Chancellor. Here are places of worship for Baptists and Independents, an endowed school for the instruction of twenty poor children, and a national school supported by subscription. This town gave birth to Roger de Wendover, historiographer to Henry II.; and Richard, Bishop of Worcester, in the reign of Henry III.

WENLOCK, MUCH, co. Salop.

London 148 m. NW. Pop. 2200. M. D. Mon. Fairs, March 12; May 12, for cattle, horses, and sheep; July 5, for sheep; Oct. 17 and Dec. 4, for horned cattle, horses, sheep, pigs, and swine. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of Wenlock, but having separate jurisdiction. It is pleasantly situated in a valley, and consists principally of two streets; the houses, chiefly of brick, are in general well built, several being modern and handsome residences: the guildhall is an ancient building of timber-frame work, supported by piazzas. In the reign of Richard II. this place was famous for its copper-mines and limestone quarries; the former are not now worked, but the latter are still extensive. The elective franchise was granted in 1478, by Edward IV., when it returned one member; at present it sends two. The right of election is vested in the free burgesses, whose number is from 5 to 600; the bailiff is the returning officer, and the influence of Lord Forester and Sir W. W. Wynn is predominant. This borough was the first that possessed the right of parliamentary representation by virtue of a charter from the crown. The freedom is obtained by birth after the father has been sworn, and is also conferred upon residents, by election from a common hall. The corporation, which is very ancient, consists of a bailiff, recorder, and bailiff peers, with a coroner, treasurer, town-clerk, sergeant-at-mace, and other officers; the bailiff, recorder, and two of the peers, are justices of the peace, and, with the exception of the coroner, who holds office for life, are elected annually on Michaelmas-day, by a jury of burgesses. They are empowered to hold a court of common pleas every Tuesday fortnight; a court of assize for trying criminal nals, with the power of life and death, now partly discontinued; a court of record, for the recovery of debts to any amount; and a court of requests, for the recovery of debts under forty shillings: manorial courts are held at Easter and Michaelmas, at the latter of which constables are appointed. Wenlock gives name to a deanery; the living is a dis. vicarage, with the curacies of Burton and Benthall, in the archdeaconry of Salop and diocese of Hereford; valued in K. B. 12*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.*; patron (1829) Sir W. W. Wynn, Bart. The church, which is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a venerable structure, with a square tower at the west end, surmounted by a spire: it partakes in a very remote degree of the style of the abbey, being partly of the Norman, and partly of the decorated English style: the interior consists of a chancel, nave, and aisles, separated by cloistered piers and obtusely pointed arches. A small theological library, left by one of the vicars for the use of the clergy, has, within the last forty years, been extended by subscription into a circulating library, for the use of the inhabitants. Here are also a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists, almshouses for four poor widows, and a freeschool, partly endowed, and further supported by subscription; twelve boys are educated on the foundation. Wenlock is of considerable antiquity; its Welsh name was Llan Meilien, or St. Milburgh's Church; and in the Monasticon it is denominated Winnica, or the windy place. Its early importance was derived from the establishment of a convent, about 680, by Milburga, daughter of King Merwald, and niece of Wolphere, King of Mercia, who presided as abbess, and at her death was interred here. Having been destroyed by the Danes, it was restored by Leofric, Earl of Mercia, in the time of Edward the Confessor, after which it fell into decay. It was rebuilt, or repaired, by Roger de Montgomery, soon after the conquest, who largely endowed it, converted it into a priory for Cluniac monks, and dedicated it to St. Milburga. The ruins, which are situated on the south side of the town, are extensive, and present every variety of the most finished specimens of the latest Norman, and the early and decorated styles of English architecture. Of the church, the south transept is in the most perfect state; the end and side walls, including the triforium and clerestory windows, are standing, and exhibit the purest specimens of elegant design and elaborate execution; one wall of the north transept also is remaining, in which is a continuation of the same details; the bases of the four massy piers that supported the tower, and of those which separated the aisles from the nave and choir, are still uncovered by turf, and mark out the ground-plan of a cathedral, which, for its magnificence and elegant decoration, scarcely had its equal in the kingdom. Three beautiful Norman arches, highly ornamented, form an entrance to the chapter-house, the walls of which are embellished with successive series of intersecting arches, with clustered columns of exquisite design. Two of the cloisters also remain in a very perfect state; the one of the lighter decorated style, with a lofty ceiling, richly groined, and ornamented with slender shafts, terminating in corbels on the walls; the other of the more massive, but finished Norman style, with low clustered pillars, ranged upon circular plinths.

It is a place of considerable antiquity, situated on the high road from Hereford to Knighton; it consists of one principal street, and many of the houses are well-built modern structures, the town having been partly destroyed by fire. This borough first sent members to Parliament in the 23d of Edward I.; the right of election is vested in the owners of the ancient burghage-houses, resident at the time of election, or in the inhabitants of such houses who have been resident forty days; the number of voters is about ninety-three, and the influence of the Marquis of Bath is predominant. The town is governed by two constables, who are the returning officers. Petty sessions for the hundred are holden here; and a manorial court, for the recovery of debts under 40*s.*, is held annually in October. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Hereford; valued in K. B. 9*l.* 1*s.*; church ded. to St. Peter and St. Paul; patron, the Bishop of Hereford. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed by William Crother, in 1655, for the education of children born in the parishes of Weobley, Wormesley, and in the township of Wootton, in the parish of King's Pion. A national school, for children of both sexes, is supported by subscription. On the south side of the town are the remains of an ancient castle, which was taken from the Empress Maud, by King Stephen.

London 99 m. W b S. Pop. of Pa. 7816. Of Bo. 2117. M. D. Tues. Fairs, 1st Frid. in Lent and Whit-Mond., for pedlery; Easter-Mond. and Sept. 24, for cattle, horses, and cheese. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of the same name. The town, which is of considerable antiquity, is situated under Salisbury Plain, and consists of three principal streets, irregularly built, branching off towards Frome, Bradford, and East Lavington. The inhabitants are principally employed in the manufacture of broad cloth and kerseymere, there being in and near the town eight manufactories and several others within the parish; a considerable quantity of malt is made. The clothing trade was formerly carried on to a very great extent, one house alone employing a thousand persons. The charter of incorporation was granted by Henry IV.; the municipal body consists of a mayor, recorder, twelve aldermen, and burgesses, with other officers. Courts leet are held by the mayor in November, and by the steward of the lord of the manor in May. A court of requests for the recovery of debts not exceeding 5l. is held here and at Warminster alternately every Tuesday fortnight, the jurisdiction of which extends over the hundreds of Westbury, Warminster, and Heytesbury. Two high constables are appointed at the manorial court. This borough has sent members to Parliament regularly since the 27th of Henry VI.; the right of election is in the occupiers of burghage tenements, in fee or for lives, or ninety-nine years, determinable on lives, or by copy of court-roll, paying a burghage rent of fourpence, or twopence, yearly, being resident within the borough and not receiving alms; the number of voters is sixty-one; the mayor is the returning officer, and the influence of Sir Ralph Franco Lopes is predominant, at whose expense a handsome town-hall was erected in 1815. The living is a dis. vicarage with the curacies of Bratton and Dilton, and a peculiar of the Precentor of Salisbury cathedral, who is also the patron; valued in K. B. 44l. 16s. 0½d. The church, which is dedicated to All Saints, is a spacious and handsome structure, with a tower rising from the centre, supposed to have been erected about 900 years ago; in the interior are several handsome monuments. Here are two places of worship for Independents, three for Baptists, and one for Wesleyan Methodists. A national school, in which about forty boys are instructed, was endowed with 1000l., by John Matrauers, an opulent clothier of this town, and a member of the Society of Friends, who also left 1000l. for clothing twenty poor women at Christmas. Bryan Edwards, historian of the British colonies, in the West Indies; and Dr. Philip Withers, a writer of considerable distinction in the last century, were natives of this town.

WESTMEATH, County of, Leinster, I.

N to S 34 m. E to W 42 m. No. of acres 371,979. Baronies 12. Borough 1. Market-towns 6. Parishes 67. Pop. 123,819. Memb. of Pt. 3. Dioceses of Meath and Ardagh; archdiocese of Armagh.

An inland county, and one of the twelve comprehended in the province of Leinster. It is bounded on the north by the county of Cavan; on the east, by Meath, alias East-Meath; on the west by Longford county, and an expansion of the river Shannon, called Lough Reagh; and on the south by the King's County. The surface is somewhat hilly, but by no means mountainous. It is interspersed with bog, and with numerous depositions of water; but contains a proportion of arable and pasture land, exceeding considerably the consumption of its population. The soil affords much variety, deep and cold in some places, light and gravelly in others. Limestone gravel, which can be had at a short depth from the surface, constitutes an excellent correction to the chilly character of the deep soils. Few counties are better watered. The noble river Shannon separates it from the province of Connaught; the river Inny forms the north-western boundary for a considerable length, passing through several lakes. The Dele crosses the eastern side, and the Brosna, issuing from Lough Hoyle, flows southward into the King's County; while a short and rapid stream runs westward into Lough Iron, which discharges its waters, by the Inny, into the river Shannon. To this catalogue must be appended the names of some of the lakes, the great ornament and pride of Westmeath: they are, Dereveragh, Lene, Iron, Lough Owel, the reservoir which supplies the Royal Canal, Lough Ennel, Lough Reagh, a great inland sea, adorned with wooded islands, and now navigated by steamers, besides several others of less note. Varieties of fish are taken, both in the lakes and rivers; salmon, pike, and trout, the last of an extraordinary size, chiefly taken in the lakes, and some of them said to possess an emetic quality. The baronies are named Demifore, Moygeesh, Corkerry, Moy-ashell, Magheredernon, Delvin, Farbill, Rathconrath, Killkenny - West, Brawney, Clonlonan, Moyeashel, and Fertullagh. The towns of this county are neither large nor numerous, the principal are Athlone, an ancient fortress, and a borough; Clonmellon, Castletown, Delvin, Castle-Pollard, Kinnegad Mullingar, the assizes town, famous also for its great cattle and wool fairs, and agreeably situated between Loughs Howel and Ennel; Killbeggan, Street, Rathowen, Ballymore, and Moyvore. The linen manufacture has permanently established itself amongst the peasantry. The cutting, sale, and transport of turf, the only fuel in the county, constitutes a second source of emolument. The woollen manufacture occupies a third portion; and the fourth, by far the greatest part of the population, are engaged in agricultural pursuits. Here is bred the active hunter and strong carriage-horse. Black-cattle are disposed of in vast numbers at the great fairs of Mullingar, a mart well known to the English dealer; and the transit of the Royal Canal through the centre of the county facilitates the carriage of grain and fuel to a brisk market in the city of Dublin. Two members are returned to Parliament for the county, and one for the borough of Athlone. The family of Nugent enjoy the dignity of Marquis of Westmeath.

WESTMORLAND, County of.

N to S about 32 m. E to W, greatest extent, 40 m. No. of statute acres 488,320. Pop. 51,359. Wards 4. Parishes 32. Borough 1. Market-towns 7. Memb. of Pt. 4. Northern Circuit. Dioceses of Carlisle and Chester. Province of York.

An inland county, being surrounded on every side by the land, except for a small space on the south, where its borders on Morecombe Bay. It is bounded on the north by Cumberland, on the east by Durham and Yorkshire, on the south by the latter county and Lancashire, and on the west by Lancashire and Cumberland: its boundaries are formed by rivers, lakes, and mountains, except on the south, where it is connected with Lancashire. It appears to have been anciently inhabited by the British tribes of the Voluntii and Sistantii. Under the dominion of the Romans this part of the country was included in the province of Maxima Cæsariensis. Through it passed a branch of the Watling Street, and within it were the Roman station called Vataris by Richard of Cirencester, and Verteræ in the Itinerary of Antoninus, supposed to be Brough; and that of Brovonacis or Brocavonacis (Kirkby Thur). The remains of supposed Roman camps may be traced at Castle-how, near Tebay, in the parish of Orton; at Castle-steads and Coney-beds near Natland, south of Kendal; at Maiden Castle, on Stainmore Forest, besides several others; and tessellated pavements, altars, urns, and coins have been found in various places. After the retreat of the Romans this county was included in the kingdom of Strathclyde, or Cumbria, and subsequently it formed a part of the Anglo-Saxon kingdom of Northumberland. At this period it appears to have received from the Angles the appellation of West-Moringaland, or the district of the Western moors, whence its present name. In the middle ages this county suffered severely from the inroads of the Scots, who burnt the town of Appleby in 1173, and again in 1388. In the war between Charles I. and the parliament, Appleby Castle was garrisoned for the king, by Anne Clifford, the spirited daughter of the last Earl of Cumberland, who held it till after the ruin of the royal cause. When the young Pretender invaded England, in 1745, a skirmish took place between the Highlanders and the English, as the former were retreating before the Duke of Cumberland; and some of their troops entered the town of Kendal, but were repulsed by the inhabitants. This county is of a very irregular shape, which has been supposed to resemble a vine-leaf. The name is descriptive of its nature and surface, which consists of lofty mountains, naked hills, and black barren moors, which here, as well as in Cumberland, are frequently called fells: between the mountains are pleasant and fertile valleys, watered by rivers, among the most extensive of which are the Vale of the Eden, stretching from about ten miles south-east of Kirkby Stephen, north-westward by Appleby, towards Penrith; and that of Kendal, southward of that town. Among the principal mountain heights are Helvellyn and Bow-fell, on the confines of Cumberland; Rydal-head, near Ambleside; and the High Street, so called from an ancient road that passes along its summit, where horse-races and country sports are held annually in the month of July. This county is distinguished for the number and picturesque beauties of its lakes, among which the most important are Winander Mere, Ulles Water, Grass Mere, Hawes Water, Elter Water, Broad Water, and Rydal Water; besides which there are many smaller lakes, provincially termed tarns. Winander Mere is situated on the western border of the county, dividing it from Lancashire, into which the southern part of the lake extends. It is about ten miles and a half in length, and from one to two in breadth, covering a space of 2574 acres, including thirteen islets, the entire surface of which is about forty acres, the largest called Curwen's Island, containing twenty-seven acres. The western shore of the lake is bold and abrupt, presenting wild and magnificent scenery; but on the east the land rises gradually from the water's edge, and the country is diversified by enclosures and plantations, interspersed with rocky heights, varying in extent and elevation. This lake is frequented by multitudes of water-fowls; and its fisheries, which are rented of the crown, produce trout, pike, perch, eels, and especially char, of which there are two kinds, the golden and the silver char, the latter of which is reckoned peculiarly delicate, and is potted for the London market. Ulles Water partly divides this county from Cumberland, but its southern portion, called Ousemere, is situated entirely in Westmorland. It is about nine miles in length and two in its broadest part, the depth varying from thirty-five to thirty-six fathoms. The shores are extremely irregular, and much indented; they are bordered on the north by pleasant enclosures, intermixed with woods and cottages; but on the south, towards Patterdale, the surface of the country becomes rugged, wild, and mountainous. The glens and hollows between the hills are remarkable for their echoes. In this lake are found plenty of perch and eels, and some char, as well as a peculiar kind of trout, called gray trout, some of which weigh thirty pounds. The principal rivers are the Eden, the Eamont, the Lowther, or Loder, the Lune, and the Kent. The Eden, rising near the south-eastern border of the county, passes north-westward by Kirkby Stephen and Appleby to Temple Lowerby; and after skirting the county for a short distance, enters Cumberland. The Eamont issues from the northern extremity of Ulles Water, and takes its course towards the north-east to join the Eden. The Lowther, which rises in the moors, north of Wetsleddale, unites with a stream from the Hawes Water lake, and passing northward, falls into the Eamont. The Lune has its source in the parish of Ravenstonedale, near the eastern border of the county, and flows southward into Lancashire. The Kent rises on the south side of the eminence, called the High Street, and taking its course through Kentmere Tarn, passes by Kendal to fall into Morecombe Bay. In the former part of the last century scarcely one quarter of the county was under cultivation, and the greater portion of the surface has never yet been subjected to the operations of husbandry. The land, which is under tillage, is principally appropriated to the growth of oats, but barley and wheat are also raised here, as well as turnips and potatoes, the latter especially in the neighbourhood of Kendal. Some of the mountains afford good pasturage for sheep, and on the lower heights graze herds of black-cattle. On the moors are bred great numbers of geese, and the hills abound with grouse; and hence they are the great resort of sportsmen during the shooting season. In the valleys, watered by rivers, are kept considerable numbers of cattle for the dairy, and much fine butter is made here for the London market. Among the mineral productions of the county are lead, copper, coal, marble, slate of a very fine quality, gypsum, freestone, and limestone. Lead is found in the mines of Dunfell, Dufton, and in other places; and copper has been procured at Limbrig, Asby, and Rayne; veins of gold are said to have been discovered in some places. Quarries of finely-veined marble have been opened near the river Kent, about three miles southward of Kendal, near Ambleside, and elsewhere. Westmorland is divided politically into the baronies of Kendal and Westmorland, the former of which contains the wards of Kendal and Lonsdale; and the latter, sometimes termed the Barony of Appleby, comprises the east and west wards. The only borough is Appleby, the county town. The market-towns are Brough, Burton, Kendal, Kirkby Lonsdale, Kirkby Stephen, and Milnthorpe, which is also a seaport, Orton, and Ravenstonedale; but the markets of Brough and Ravenstonedale are become extinct. Among the seats of the nobility and gentry in this county may be mentioned Lowther Castle, belonging to the Earl of Lonsdale; Appleby Castle, to the Earl of Thanet, hereditary high sheriff of the county; Sizergh Hall, to Thomas Strickland, Esq.; and Leven's Hall, to the Hon. Colonel Howard. Westmorland gives the title of Earl to the family of Fane.

P. T. Wigton (303) 3 m. SE b S. Pop. 1287.

A parish in Allerdale ward, below Darwent, bounded on the east by the Wampool river, and on the south by branches of the Waver. Here are excellent quarries of limestone, red freestone, and slate; and also seams of cannel and other coal. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Carlisle; certified value 23l.; ann. val. P. R. 58l.; patrons, the Dean and Chapter of Carlisle. The church stands on an eminence, called Church Hill, in the township of Stoneraise. Here is an endowed school, in which seven poor children are instructed. About a mile and a half north of the church, and one mile south of Wigton, on the Roman road from the city of Carlisle to Ellenborough is Old Carlisle, the site of an extensive Roman station, still covered with ruins and foundations of innumerable buildings; with fragments of altars, statues, images, inscriptions, and various other remains. The walls enclosed an oblong area, 170 yards long, by 120 broad, with obtuse angles, and an entrance on each side, and were surrounded by a double ditch. Antiquaries differ about the name of this important station, but Mr. Horsley asserts that it is the Olenacum of the Notitia, where the Ala Herculea and Ala Augusta were quartered. There are also vestiges of several intrenchments in this parish, some of a square, and others of a circular form.

A market-town and chapelry in the parish of Spofforth and upper division of the wapentake of Claro. It is pleasantly situated on the north bank of the river Wharfe, here crossed by a handsome stone bridge. The town, which is well built, consists chiefly of one long street, behind which is the market-place. A little above the bridge the river forms a beautiful cascade, by falling over a high dam, erected for the purpose of enabling several mills to grind corn, press oil, and rasp logwood for the use of clothiers and dyers. The quarter-sessions for the West Riding are held here at Christmas. The living is a curacy subordinate to the rectory of Spofforth, in the archdeaconry and diocese of York; certified value 18*l.* 3*s.* 2*d.*; church ded. to St. James; patron, the rector of Spofforth. Here are also places of worship for Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. During the civil wars this town was garrisoned for the parliament, and successfully repulsed two attacks made upon it by Sir Thomas Glenham; before the erection of the bridge, the Roman military way crossed the Wharfe at St. Helensford, a little below Wetherby. The surrounding country is very rich and beautiful.

WETTON, co. Stafford.

P. T. Ashbourn (139) 6 m. NW b N. Pop. 609.

A parish in the south division of the hundred of Totmonslow, pleasantly situated and surrounded by romantic cliffs; the river Manifold flows as far as Wetton Mill, where it suddenly disappears through the fissures of its limestone bed, and continuing a subterranean course for about five miles, emerges near the place where the river Ilamps reappears in like manner. On Ecton Hill are extensive lead and copper-mines, which afford employment to a number of the inhabitants. Wetton is in the honour of Tutbury, duchy of Lancaster, and within the jurisdiction of its court of pleas. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Stafford and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry; certified value 7*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 41*l.* 8*s.*; patron (1829) M. Burgoyne, Esq. The church, which is dedicated to St. Margaret, is a very ancient structure. Twelve poor children are instructed by means of a bequest of 5*l.* per annum. Here is a remarkable cavern of large dimensions, called Thor's Cave, in which the Druids are supposed to have offered human sacrifices to their god Thor.

WETWANG, E. R. co. York.

WEXFORD, County of, Leinster, I.

N to S 56 m. E to W 32 m. No. of acres 550,838. Baronies 8. Boroughs 2. Market-towns 5. Parishes 148. Pop. 170,806. Memb. of Pt. 4. Dioceses of Ferns, Dublin, and Glendalough; archdiocese of Dublin.

A maritime county, and one of twelve into which the province of Leinster is divided. It occupies the south-eastern angle of the island, is immediately opposite to South Wales, from which it is separated by St. George's Channel; on the south it is washed by the Atlantic Ocean, stretching from the entrance of St. George's Channel to the spacious estuary, which forms the harbour of Waterford, by which, and by the navigable river Barrow, and a reach of the river Suir, it is bounded on the west. Being bounded thus on the east and south by the sea, on the west by the haven of Waterford and the rivers just named, this county assumes a peninsular form: and on the north and north-east is again detached from intercourse with the adjacent counties of Carlow and Wicklow, by stupendous mountains, in which only two passes occur, one by the sea-side at Auklow, the other, called Seollough Gap, opening into the county of Carlow. The range adjoining Wicklow extends from Sliebl-Bwy, a beautiful, verdant, conical hill, to the valley of the river Slaney, which separates it from a second chain of greater extent and magnitude. The great range on the Carlow boundaries includes the remarkable eminence called Mount Leinster, and the great mass of the Blackstairs. In this conspicuous group there are three remarkable pinnacles, the intervals between which are called The Leap of Ossian's Greyhound. The detached and peninsular form of this county is supposed to have held out inducements to the Normans of South Wales to make this the first landing-place, in their meditated descent upon Ireland, and in the baronies of Forth and Bargil, where the intruders first made a settlement, and afterwards intrenched themselves: their descendants are found to the present day. They speak a dialect of the Anglo-Saxon, possess peculiarity of countenance and habits, and half a century ago, were much distinguished from the inhabitants of the other baronies. The surface generally is dotted with insulated hills, some of them attain considerable altitudes, and are composed of secondary strata, chiefly schistose argillite. The Forth Mountain consists mostly of hornstone, and Forth barony is level, fertile, and abounds with marl, coralline, and other excellent natural renovators of an exhausted soil. The Barrow, part of the western boundary, is navigable to New Ross. The Slaney, a beautiful and fertilizing stream, rises in the county of Wicklow, and entering this county near Newtown Barry, flows nearly through the centre, and discharges itself into the haven of Wexford. Several rivulets, rising in the hills of Bantry, become tributary at length to the river Slaney. The Bann rises in the north of Gorey barony, and taking a direction due south, is characterized by a succession of picturesque scenes and romantic views, until it unites with the Slaney, at Scarewalsh Bridge. The coast has no ports, and is inhospitable. On the south are the harbours of Bannow, where Earl Strongbow first landed; Lough Harbour, a shallow inlet, Grenore Bay, Wexford Haven, and the little artificial harbour of Courtown, at the embouchures of the Ownevarra and Blind rivers. Agriculture is in an improved state here; the extensive shore affords sea sand and weed, both forming an admirable manure; and in this district beans and barley are raised in alternate crops for years, without detriment to the strength of the soil. Grain of every description, tares, rape, turnips, and potatoes, are raised through the county generally, and find an exit at the quays of Enniscorthy and Wexford: and the study of agriculture is promoted by the establishment of a school, wherein the culture of the soil constitutes the principal subject of instruction. At a place, called Bunastown, lead-ore was discovered, and copper-ore at Kinlogue, near Wexford, and Galma, in the parish of Killan, near Enniscorthy. Limestone is found in several places, marl and calcareous sand near the seashore, and the Leinster granite-field extends through the county, to the point of Carnsore. Ballaghkeen, Bargie, Bantry, Forth Gore, Scarewalsh, Shelburne, Shielmalier, are the names of the baronial divisions. Wexford is the assizes town, and the capital of the county. Enniscorthy is a place of some trade, for the promotion of which it is well circumstanced. New Ross, on the Barrow, is a prosperous place, and a borough-town. Gorey, Clonmines, Taghmore, ancient boroughs, are now insignificant villages. Ferns, the residence of the bishop, is a mean town; but Newtown Barry is one of the most pleasing villages in the province of Munster. Fethard and Bannow, though small places, were also formerly borough-towns. The manufactures consist of iron, linen, and woollen. The exports are chiefly agricultural productions. Fishing is a very principal and important source of employment, the great fishing-banks on the eastern coast lying immediately off this county. For the promotion of this necessary and valuable occupation, asylums for smallcraft are still much required along the eastern coast. There are two members returned to Parliament for the county, one for the town of Wexford, and one for the town of New Ross.

WEXFORD, co. Wexford, Leinster, I.

Dublin 91 m. S. Pop. 10,206. Fairs, March 17; May 1; June 29; Aug. 2; and Nov. 1.

A town, comprehending the parishes of St. Therius, St. Mary's, St. Michael's, St. Patrick's, St. Selskan, and St. Tulloge, in the barony of Forth, situated upon the navigable river Slaney, which here discharges itself into the sheltered haven of Wexford. It is the county-town, returns a member to Parliament, is irregularly built, with narrow and inconvenient streets, but is notwithstanding the best and most populous town in the county. Amongst the public buildings are two churches, a Roman Catholic chapel, two meeting-houses of Dissenters, the county gaol and court-house, a market-hall, barrack, infirmary, fever hospital, and lunatic asylum. The river is crossed by a wooden bridge, 2100 feet in length, built after the design of Lemuel Cox; and the quay is extensive and convenient. The Danes are acknowledged to have been the founders of this town, which was called by them Wessford, and also Carman, and was a place of greater strength and better trade than it now possesses. The harbour is obstructed by a bar, and its entrance defended by two forts, Fort Margaret, on the north side, and Fort Rosclair on the south. On the 4th of May, 1170, the English wrested the town from the Danish occupants, after a spirited siege of four days. Cromwell besieged this place on the 1st of October, 1649, and having obtained admission through the treachery of James Stafford, put the garrison, consisting of 2000 soldiers, together with Sir Edward Butler, the governor, inhumanly and wantonly to death. The corporation consists of a mayor, mayor of the staple, recorder, two bailiffs, and a town-clerk. One member represents the town in Parliament (St. Iberius, St. John's, and St. Michael's). The chief trade, independent of the county traffic, consists in the export of malt, barley, wheat, oats, butter, beef, hides, and tallow. Provisions are procured here on moderate terms, a circumstance which has induced many persons of respectability, but slender means, to make this their place of abode. The woollen manufacture is extensively carried on in the suburbs. Here are two reading or news rooms, a diocesan school of thirty-six boarders and forty-seven day scholars; a Lancasterian school of 207 children, taught gratuitously; and a convent school of 230 girls, whose only instructors are the nuns. The district lunatic asylum and the infirmaries are the principal institutions here appropriated to the relief of the afflicted poor. Here is an efficacious chalybeate spa. A priory of regular canons, and dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul of Selskar, was founded here originally by the Danes, and endowed by the Roche family. The priory of Knights Hospitallers, founded by William Mareschal, Earl of Pembroke, and dedicated to St. John and St. Brigid, antecedent to the extinction of the order, was the grand commandery, an honour subsequently transferred to Killmainham hospital, near Dublin. The conventual Franciscans founded a settlement for themselves in this town, in the reign of King Henry III., and was refounded in A. D. 1486. Here was also an hospital for lepers. Wexford gives the title of Earl to the ancient and noble family of Talbot, Earls of Shrewsbury, in England.

WEXHAM, co. Buckingham.

P. T. Slough (20) 1½ m. NE. Pop. 154.

A parish in the hundred of Stoke, the neighbourhood of which abounds in ragstone; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 15*s.*; church ded. to St. Mary; patron, the Lord Chancellor. The learned Fleetwood was rector of this parish from 1705 to 1708, during which time he published his "Chronicon Pretiosum."

WEYBREAD, co. Suffolk.

P. T. Harleston (99) 2 m. SSW. Pop. 680.

A parish in the hundred of Hoxne; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Suffolk and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 4*l.* 15*s.*; ann. val. P. R. 90*l.*; church ded. to St. Andrew; patron (1829) the Rev. John Edge.

WEYBRIDGE, co. Surrey.

P. T. Guildford (29) 12 m. NE b N. Pop. 897.

A parish in the hundred of Elmbridge, deriving its name from the river Wey, which was formerly crossed by a bridge, and on which it is situated near its conflux with the Thames. In the neighbourhood are many elegant seats, the principal of which is Oatlands, the country residence of his Royal Highness the late Duke of York, standing on the brow of an eminence, near a fine sweep of the Thames. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Surrey and diocese of Winchester; valued in K. B. 7*l.* 0*s.* 5*d.*; patron, the Lord Chancellor. The church, which is dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a neat edifice, containing several ancient and modern monuments; her Royal Highness the late Duchess of York, was interred here. Here is a place of worship for Baptists; and also an endowed school, in which twelve poor children are instructed.

WEYHILL, co. Southampton.

P. T. Andover (63) 3 m. W b N. Pop. 408. Fair, Oct. 10, for sheep; the five following days, for leather, hops, and cheese.

A parish in the hundred of Andover, Andover division, situated on the border of Salisbury Plain, and celebrated for the great fair held in the neighbourhood, on the first day of which more than 140,000 sheep have been sold. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Winchester; valued in K. B. 26*l.*; church ded. to St. Michael; patron, Queen's College, Oxford.

WEYMOUTH, co. Dorset.

London 128 m. SW b W. Pop. 2370; with Melcombe Regis 8622. M. D. Tues. and Fri. Memb. of Pt. with Melcombe Regis 4.

A seaport, borough, and market-town, having, together with Melcombe Regis, a separate jurisdiction, but locally within the hundred of Calliford-Free, division of Dorchester. This place is situated on the bank of the river Wey, near its mouth, opposite to Melcombe Regis with which it is united by a handsome stone bridge. It derives its name from its situation at the estuary of the Wey; and it is noticed in Domesday-book, under the appellation of Wai, or Waia; but it existed at an earlier period, as it is mentioned in a charter granted by King Athelstan to the abbey of Milton in 938. Henry I. gave the port of Weymouth with that of Melcombe to the prior and monks of St. Swithin's abbey, Winchester, who transferred it in exchange for other property, to Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, who held it in the reign of Edward I.; and from him it descended to Lionel Duke of Clarence, the son of Edward III. This prince procured the town to be made a borough, and bestowed many privileges on the inhabitants. Weymouth at that period was a place of some naval importance; and in 1317 twenty ships and 264 seamen were contributed from this port, to form the armament which sailed to attack Calais. In 1588 six ships belonging to Weymouth made a part of the fleet employed to harass and watch the Spanish armada, then advancing towards the British coast, and one of the enemies' vessels, which was captured was brought into the harbour of Weymouth. The disputes between the municipal authorities of Weymouth and Melcombe, which were terminated by the consolidation of the two towns into one borough, in the reign of Elizabeth, have been noticed elsewhere. See Melcombe Regis. During the civil war, under Charles I. Weymouth was alternately garrisoned by the royalists and the parliamentarians, the latter of whom, in 1644, obtained possession of it, after having expelled a body of the king's forces, and taken several vessels and a quantity of arms. The parliament held it during the remainder of the war; and in 1645 erected a fort to defend the harbour from the attacks of the people of Portland, who were attached to the royal cause. In the reign of Charles II. the town was greatly injured by an accidental fire, and in 1673 the sum of 3000*l.* was collected, by means of a brief, towards repairing the damage which had taken place. It subsequently fell into a state of decay, and remained almost destitute of commercial importance till within the last fifty years, when it gradually became frequented as a station for sea-bathing; and chiefly through the visits of George III. and his family, who frequently resorted thither in the summer season, it recovered from the depression which it had suffered, and was raised to notice as one of the most fashionable watering-places on the southern coast of England. Weymouth was constituted one borough with Melcombe Regis by a charter of Queen Elizabeth, which was confirmed by act of parliament in the fifteenth year of James I., and this charter being forfeited, through the neglect of the corporation, in 1803, a new one was granted by George III. Under this the municipal government is vested in a mayor, a recorder, two bailiffs, certain aldermen, usually about eight in number, and twenty-four capital burgesses, with a town-clerk and other officers. The mayor and the bailiffs are chosen annually, on St. Matthew's Day. The mayor, recorder, and bailiffs act as justices of the peace, and have authority to hold quarterly courts of session for the trial of all except capital offences; and a court of record is held weekly, for the recovery of debts unlimited in amount. This town has returned two members to Parliament ever since the reign of Edward II. The right of election for the joint borough of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis is declared by a decision of the House of Commons in 1730, to belong to the mayor, aldermen, bailiffs, and capital burgesses inhabiting the borough, and in persons seised of freeholds within the borough and not receiving alms; the number of electors being about 700, each of whom is entitled to vote for four candidates. The mayor is the returning officer. The living is a curacy annexed to the rectory of Wyke Regis. The church, which was dedicated to St. Nicholas, is in ruins; and that of St. Mary, in the parish of Melcombe Regis, rebuilt in 1817, is appropriated to the inhabitants of both towns. Here are places of worship for the Independents, the Baptists, the Quakers, and the Wesleyan Methodists. Two national schools have been established at Weymouth, and one on the Lancasterian plan; besides which, various sums of money have been left by different individuals for the education of poor children. In St. Mary Street an almshouse for decayed mariners was founded by Sir James Thornhill, but there is no endowment belonging to it, and it has been nearly destroyed. Among the charitable institutions also are Dorcas and Samaritan societies and dispensaries. The town is delightfully situated on the south side of the harbour, at the foot of a considerable eminence; the streets chiefly extend along the border of the sea, near which stand the most fashionable residences, including many handsome, and some splendid buildings, especially on the esplanade, which is one of the finest walks in England, being more than half-a-mile in length, and about thirty feet in breadth. The streets are well paved and lighted with gas; and the inhabitants are supplied with water, under the direction of an incorporated company. Here are a theatre, assembly-rooms, and other places of public amusements, together with several well-conducted circulating libraries. There is also an edifice called the Royal Lodge, erected for the residence of George III. and his family during their occasional visits to Weymouth. The harbour is admirably adapted for bathing, the sands, which are very firm and smooth, declining so gradually into the sea, that the water is only knee-deep 300 feet from the shore. A number of bathing-machines are provided for the use of bathers; and on the South Parade are hot salt-water baths, conveniently fitted up, and provided with every desirable accommodation. There are a battery and three smaller forts, which have been constructed for the defence of this harbour. At the south entrance of the haven are two jetties, the higher jetty towards the west, and the lower towards the east. The commerce of Weymouth is now inconsiderable, exclusive of that which arises from the resort of numerous visitors. An extensive traffic was carried on with the Baltic and Mediterranean ports of Newfoundland; and a few vessels are still employed, especially in the Newfoundland fishery, and also some in the coasting trade. Coal, timber, wine, spirits, and rice are imported; and among the exports are pipeclay, Roman cement, bricks, tiles, slates, Portland stone, deals, corn, and flour. Ship-building is carried on here, and likewise rope and sail making. From the returns to Parliament in 1829, it appears that the number of vessels belonging to this port was eighty-five, and their united burden 7175 tons. Three steam-packets start twice a-week for Jersey, Guernsey, and the neighbouring islands; and a cutter for the conveyance of passengers and merchandise, sails weekly. The markets are amply furnished with provisions, and especially fish, and delicate Portland mutton. Races, which were established in 1821, take place in the vicinity of the town annually in the month of August, when a king's plate of 100 guineas is contended for, besides other prizes; and at the same period a grand regatta is celebrated in the bay. Weymouth gives the title of Viscount to the Marquis of Bath.

WHADDON, co. Buckingham.

P. T. Stony Stratford (52) 5 m. S b E. Pop. 900.

A parish in the hundred of Cottesloe; it formerly had a market, which has been long discontinued; living, a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. WHALLEY, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Clitheroe (217) 4 m. S b W.

Pop. of Pa. 84,193. Of To. 1058.

A parish and township in the hundred of Blackburn, pleasantly situated on the river Calder, and surrounded by a tract of great beauty and fertility. This extensive parish contains forty-nine chapeltries and townships, and is about thirty miles long, and fifteen broad, though but little more than half its ancient extent, which included the present parishes of Blackburn, Chipping, Mitton, Ribchester, Rochdale, and Slaidburn, which have been separated from it at different times. Here are manufactures of cotton, rope, and nails. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Chester; valued in K. B. 6*l.* 3*s.* 9*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 115*l.*; patron, the Archbishop of Canterbury. The church, which is dedicated to All Saints, is a spacious structure, in the early Gothic style of architecture, of which the chancel is a very fine specimen; the interior contains eighteen ancient stalls, and some considerable remains of good screenwork, brought from the dissolved abbey. Here is also a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school, founded by Queen Elizabeth, was rebuilt by subscription in 1725; it is open for the classical instruction of all boys of the township, but there are only twelve at present on the foundation: this school, in conjunction with those of Burnley and Middleton, has an interest in thirteen scholarships, founded in Brasenose College, Oxford, by Dr. Nowell, in 1572. A national school was erected by subscription in 1819. Whalley is chiefly celebrated for the ruins of its ancient abbey, which was founded in 1296 by Henry Lacy, Earl of Lincoln, for monks of the Cistercian order; the remains, which are still considerable, present specimens of the early, decorated, and later styles of Gothic architecture.

WHALSAY, shire of Orkney' and Shetland, S.

Pop. with Nesting.

One of the Shetland islands, and formerly an independent parish, but now included in the ministry of Nesting. It lies to the eastward of Moirland, and is about six miles in length, by three in breadth. The surface, though very uneven, is tolerably fertile. A curious phenomenon relating to the magnetic influence of the rocks around the coast, is remarked by Marinus, who discovered a very unusual reeling and agitation of the compass when approaching this island.

WHALTON, co. Northumberland.

P. T. Morpeth (288) 7 m. SW b W.

Pop. of Pa. 534. Of To. 285.

A parish and township in the west division of Castle ward, pleasantly situated on the rivers Blythe and Howburn, is well built, and contains many commodious houses. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Northumberland and diocese of Durham; valued in K. B. 13*l.* 8*s.* 1½*d.*; patrons (1829) the Trustees of — Bates, Esq., deceased. The church, which is an ancient structure, was repaired in 1783, when parapets and pinnacles were added to the tower. Here is an endowed school for the instruction of poor children. On the east side of the parish are the remains of considerable earthworks, supposed to enclose the site of the castle of the ancient barons of Whalton.

It contains some handsome residences, and several respectable lodging-houses. Limestone is quarried to a great extent, and conveyed up the river Tyne into Yorkshire; coal is also obtained, though at a great depth. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Durham; valued in K. B. 39*l.* 19*s.* 4½*d.*; patron, the Bishop of Durham. The church is an ancient Gothic structure, with a tower, surmounted by a short spire. Here is also a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists. Several Roman copper coins have been discovered in this parish.

WHITBURN, shire of Linlithgow, S.

Edinburgh 21 m. SW. Glasgow 23 m. E. Pop. 1900.

A parish and considerable village or post-town, situated on the high road from Edinburgh by Hamilton to Glasgow. It is a well-built, thriving place, inhabited by cotton-manufacturers, and enjoys the benefit of the Union Canal, which passes near. Besides the church, which is a large structure, it contains a burgher and an anti-burgher meeting-house. The parish is six miles in length by three in breadth, and is watered by the rivers Almond and Breich, and by two smaller streams, called the Black and White Burns. It is tolerably level and fertile, excepting towards the western extremity, where the surface exhibits an elevated barren ridge of deep moss, two miles and a half long and one mile broad, under which a valuable seam of coal is known to exist, but is not wrought on account of its vicinity to the collieries in the parish of Shotts. Living in the presbytery of Linlithgow and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale; patron, Sir W. A. Cunynghame, Bart. WHITBY, co. Pal. of Chester.

P. T. Chester (183) 6 m. N. Pop. 250.

A township partly in the parish of Eastham, and partly in that of Stoke and hundred of Wirrall.

WHITBY, N. R. co. York.

London 236 m. N b W. Pop. of Pa. 12,331. Of To. 8697. M. D. Sat. Fairs, Aug. 25, and Martinmas-day.

A seaport, market-town, parish, and township in the liberty of Whitby Strand. It is a place of great antiquity, and owes its origin to an abbey founded here in the seventh century, by Oswy, King of Northumberland; its Saxon name was Streoneshalh, from a watchtower which stood on the cliff. The abbey, with the town, was so completely destroyed by the Danes, in 867, that its very name was lost in its ruins, and it lay desolate till near the time of the Norman Conquest, when, either from the colour of the houses, or from its conspicuous situation, it was called Whitteby, or the White Town, of which its present name is a contraction. The town is situated on the shore of the German Ocean, and is divided into two nearly equal parts by the river Eske, which forms the harbour. It consists of several streets, well paved, and lighted with gas, but narrow and steep; the houses are partly of stone and partly of brick, and several of the modern buildings are spacious and elegant. In 1826 a handsome stone building of three stories was erected by contributions on the north pier: the lower story is occupied by commodious baths, the middle story by the subscription library, established in 1776; and the upper story by the Museum of the Literary and Philosophical Society, which contains an extensive collection of petrifications and fossil organic remains, found in the rocks of the vicinity, particularly the alum rock. A botanic garden was established in 1812, but has been neglected. A handsome news-room was erected by subscription in 1814, in Haggarsgate, and a tradesmen's news-room was also established on the opposite side of the river. The town-hall is a substantial building of the Tuscan order, erected in the market-place, by Nathaniel Cholmeley, Esq., in 1788. A commodious theatre, built by subscription in 1784, was destroyed by fire in 1823, and has not been rebuilt. In the vicinity, which is romantic and beautiful, are many elegant mansions belonging to opulent individuals. For several centuries Whitby was nothing more than a small fishing-town, and the origin of its commercial consequence may be attributed to the discovery of the alum-mines in the latter part of the reign of Elizabeth. Early in the seventeenth century these mines were worked, and two great branches of trade are now opened, one for supplying the alum-works with coal, and the other for the export of the alum to distant parts.

Ship-building was introduced about thirty years after, and great improvements were made in the harbour, by removing rocks and other obstructions. In 1632 the town became of considerable maritime importance, when the stone piers began to be constructed, chiefly through the influence of Sir Hugh Cholmeley, since which time they have been progressively increasing with the extension of commerce, and an effectual barrier has been interposed to protect the town from the fury of the German Ocean. The west pier is 620 yards long, terminating with a circular head, which has been principally rebuilt during the last season, and on which it is contemplated to erect a lighthouse, seventy feet high; the east pier is 215 yards long, likewise terminating with a substantial circular head; there are also two inner piers to break the force of the waves in stormy weather: the Burgess pier, 105, and the Fish pier, sixty-five yards long. Over the river Eske is a drawbridge, so constructed as to admit ships of 600 tons burden to pass into the inner harbour, which is capacious and secure, and adjoining which are spacious dock-yards and commodious dry docks. The depth of water in the harbour in common neap tides is about ten feet, and in spring tides from fifteen to sixteen feet, and sometimes more. The great swell occasioned by tempestuous weather renders the harbour difficult of access, and many disastrous accidents occurred before it attained its present state of security. The number of vessels belonging to the port is about 259, being an aggregate burden of 41,953 tons; 429 vessels entered inwards, and 210 cleared outwards, during the year ending January 5, 1831. During the late war seven large dock-yards were in active operation, and ship-building was the principal trade of the town; at present only four of them are partially employed, and the prosperity of the town, and the amount of its population have consequently decreased. The manufacture of alum, which once constituted a principal branch of trade, has also very much declined, and several of the works have been discontinued. The export trade in alum, to France, Holland, and other parts of the continent, was formerly very considerable, but has long been extinct, and the greater part of the alum now manufactured, is sent coastwise to London, Hull, and other towns. The Greenland and Davis's Straits fisheries, which in 1819, employed twelve large ships, now employ only one. The manufacture of sail-cloth, which is in great repute, though still considerable, is, from the decline of the port much decreased. The foreign exports are inconsiderable; the principal imports are timber, wooden wares, hemp and flax from the Baltic. The principal article sent coastwise is freestone, great quantities of which are procured from the quarries at Aislaby, about three miles from the town; the chief articles brought coastwise are groceries, salt, and coal. Oats, butter, and bacon, were formerly sent to London in great cargoes, but this trade has been much reduced within the last twenty years. The fishery on the coast was very much injured by the late war; the fish generally taken are cod, ling, halibut, and haddocks; salmon trout has been lately taken by a particular method of fishing, and sometimes in considerable quantities. The custom-house is a commodious building; a small office for the governor of the pilots has been erected on the pier; and there are four marine associations for mutual insurance. Whitby is a station for the preventive coast guard. The town is under the superintendence of the magistrates of the North Riding, who meet every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. A court for the recovery of small debts is held every third Monday, and a court-leet annually at Michaelmas. The living is a curacy and a peculiar of Hexham, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 50*l*.; patron, the Archbishop of York. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, stands on the summit and near the verge of a high cliff, and is approached by 190 stone steps. Here are also places of worship for Methodists, the Society of Friends, Presbyterians, Unitarians, Primitive Methodists, and Roman Catholics, and two for Wesleyan Methodists, Lancasterian schools for children of both sexes, a dispensary, a seaman's hospital for forty-two seamen's widows and their children, and numerous small benefactions, for the relief of the poor, besides several societies for administering to their wants, formed by the ladies. Whitby Abbey, after being destroyed by the Danes, was rebuilt about the time of the conquest, and continued to flourish till the dissolution; its remains, which stand a short distance from the church, on a cliff 240 feet above the level of the sea, consist of the choir, the north transept, which is nearly entire, and considerable portions of the north wall of the nave, and of the western wall or front of the structure. A beautiful central tower 104 feet high, fell down on the 25th of June, 1830, occasioned by one of the four massive clustered columns, by which it was supported having given way. The neighbourhood abounds with petrifications and natural curiosities, which have been frequently investigated by scientific men.

A market-town and parish in the Whitchurch division of the hundred of Bradford North. It is situated on an acclivity in a beautiful and picturesque country, and contains some neat streets and well-built houses. In the neighbourhood are three fine lakes, called Osmere, Blackmere, and Brown Moss-water; and several brooks, one of which, called Red Brook, is the boundary between England and Wales; and another separates this county from that of Chester. The inhabitants are principally employed in the malt and hop trade, and in the manufacture of shoes. Near the town are several limekilns and brick ovens, and an establishment for making oak-acid. A branch of the Ellesmere Canal extends to the town. A high steward is appointed by the lord of the manor; he superintends the public business, and presides at courts leet and baron, held in October, at the town-hall, where the rolls and archives of the lordship are deposited. The living is a rectory, with that of Marbury, in the archdeaconry of Salop and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry; valued in K. B. 44*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.*; patrons (1829) the Trustees of the late Earl of Bridgewater. The church, which is dedicated to St. Alkmund, is a handsome structure of the Tuscan order, with a square embattled tower at the west; it was erected in 1722, on the site of a more ancient edifice, and contains several splendid monuments. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, Unitarians, Independent, and Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed by John Talbot, rector of the parish. A charity-school, for children of both sexes, and an almshouse for six decayed housekeepers, were endowed by Mrs. Jane Higginson. A national school, in which 500 boys are instructed, was established in 1827. At the northern extremity of the town is a commodious house of industry. King John assembled his forces here in 1211, prior to attacking the Welsh, on which occasion he penetrated to the foot of Snowdon. During the civil war, the inhabitants raised a regiment in support of their sovereign. The ruins of an ancient castle were standing in 1760, but its foundation and history are unknown. Dr. Bernard, chaplain and biographer of Archbishop Usher and Abraham Wheelock, a celebrated linguist, were natives of this town.

WHITCHURCH, co. Southampton.

London 56 m. WSW. Pop. 1434. M. D. Fri. Fairs, April 23 and June 17, for toys; July 7 and Oct. 9, for cattle, &c. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of Evingar, Kingsclere division, in a low situation, under a range of chalk hills.

near the river Teste, on the banks of which are several corn-mills. The town is small and irregularly built; it has a trifling silk trade. Whitchurch is nominally governed by a mayor and a bailiff, chosen annually at the court-leet held by the lord of the manor, but they do not now exercise any authority. It is a borough by prescription, and has sent members to Parliament since the reign of Queen Elizabeth; the right of election is in the freeholders of lands and tenements not divided since the act of the 7th and 8th of William III. The number of voters is about eighty, and the prevailing influence possessed by Viscount Sydney and Samuel Scott, Esq.; the mayor is the returning officer. The living is a rectory and a peculiar in the diocese of Winchester; valued in K. B. 13*l.* 12*s.* 8½*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 118*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; patron, the Bishop of Winchester. The church, dedicated to All Saints, contains a theological library, bequeathed by the Rev. W. Wood. Here are also places of worship for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists and Baptists. The interest of a bequest by Richard Woollaston, in 1688, amounting to 80*l.*, is applied to the purchase of clothing and bedding for the poor. This parish is within the Cheyney Court, held at Winchester every week, for the recovery of debts.

P. T. Cloyne (159) 5 m. SW. Pop. 477.

A village in the parish of Aghada and barony of Imokilly.

WHITEHAVEN, co. Cumberland.

London 294 m. NW. Pop. 12438. M. D. Tues., Thurs., and Sat. Fair, Aug. 12, for cloth and yarn.

A large seaport and market town in the parish of St. Bees, ward of Allerdale above Darwent. The manor of Whitehaven, which formerly belonged to the priory of St. Bees, and is now the property of the Earl of Lonsdale, is called in ancient records Whyttot-haven, that is White-toft-haven, and hence its modern name. In the reign of Elizabeth this place was only a small fishing-village, containing six houses. For its subsequent improvement and prosperity it was indebted to the Killigrew family, and their successors, the Lowthers. In 1666 Sir John Lowther obtained a grant of such lands as had been held by the monks of St. Bees, and were then vested in the crown; and in 1678 a further grant of lands, consisting of about 150 acres, extending two miles northwards between high and low water-mark. He laid the foundation of the future importance of Whitehaven; and lived to see an obscure village, which, in 1633, had comprised only nine thatched cottages, become a thriving and populous town, the number of the inhabitants, in 1693, amounting to 2222. In the reign of Queen Anne, two acts of parliament were passed conferring great advantages on this port, and in consequence of which the harbour was much improved. Under the act of the 7th of Anne, the government of the town, and superintendence of the port and harbour are vested in twenty-one trustees, fourteen of whom are chosen triennially by the inhabitants carrying on trade and paying harbour dues, six are appointed by the lord of the manor for the time being, who himself makes up the number required by the statute. The constables of the town are nominated by the trustees, and appointed by the magistrates of the vicinity. Courts lect are held annually, and courts baron monthly, under the authority of the Earl of Lonsdale, as lord of the manor; and in the latter suits may be prosecuted for sums less than forty shillings: petty sessions are also held before the magistrates, at the public office, in Lowther Street, Thursdays and Saturdays. Here are three churches or chapels, the livings of which are perpetual curacies in the archdeaconry of Richmond and diocese of Chester. That of St. Nicholas is valued in P. R. 140*l.*; patron, the Earl of Lonsdale; St. James's is valued in P. R. 108*l.* 16*s.*; patron, the same; and that of Trinity is valued in P. R. 92*l.*; the same patron. The church of St. Nicholas is a plain building, with a square tower, erected in 1693; and within it are paintings of Moses and Aaron, and the Last Supper, executed by Matthias Reed, a Dutch artist. St. James's church is a neat edifice, which was rebuilt in 1753; and Trinity church is an unornamented structure, with a high tower. The Roman Catholics have a chapel in the town; and the Baptists, the Society of Friends, the Presbyterians, and the Independent Methodists, have their respective places of worship. Near St. James's church is a marine school, for sixty boys, erected on ground given by the Earl of Lonsdale, at the expense of that nobleman, and endowed with the interest of 2000*l.*, by Matthew Piper. A national school was erected in 1824, in which are educated about 500 children of both sexes; and a building erected in 1817 for a Sunday-school, is occupied during the week as an Infant-school. Among the other charitable institutions are a dispensary and a fever hospital, or house of recovery, originally established in 1783; and in 1830, a spacious building in Howgill Street, was appropriated as an infirmary, which comprehends the preceding establishments: there is also a house of industry. The town, which stands on the border of a haven of the Irish Sea, comprises a number of extensive and handsome streets, crossing each other at right angles; and these are well paved and lighted with gas. The entrance to Whitehaven from the north is under an archway, with an ornamented entablature displaying the arms of the Lowther family. Near the town is the castle belonging to the Earl of Lonsdale, an edifice erected in the form of a quadrangle, with projecting angles, and a central bastion. The public buildings not previously mentioned, are a theatre, built in 1769; a subscription library and news-room, established in 1797, in Catherine Street; the Philosophical Society's room; the harmonic society's concert-room; the apartments for the mechanics' institute and library, in Lowther Street, founded in 1825; the custom-house, erected in 1811; the excise-office, the harbour-master's office; and the market-place, a commodious area, containing a market-house, erected in 1813, from the design of R. Smirke, R. A., appropriated for the sale of poultry and the produce of the dairy; and a structure built at the expense of Lord Lonsdale, in 1809, for a fish-market. In the West Strand are commodious cold, hot, and shower salt-water baths. The harbour, which was formerly dry at low water, was improved in 1824, and now retains nine feet of water at the lowest ebb, and has twenty feet of water at spring tide. It is divided by several piers built of stone, some of them extending forward from the shore, and one towards the north-west (on which is a battery), curved near its termination. On the pier called the Old Quay is a lighthouse, erected in the reign of Charles II.; and on the pier named the New Quay, another lighthouse with revolving lights. The commerce of Whitehaven is very extensive, the exports, consisting of coal, which is the most important article of trade, lime, freestone, alabaster, and grain, together with manufactured goods; and the imports include linen and flax from Ireland, wine from Portugal and Spain, dried fruit from the Levant, and various articles from the Baltic, America, and the West Indies. The chief manufactures carried on here, are those of linen, sail-cloth, checks, ginghams, sheeting, thread, twine, cables, copperas, painters' colours, paper, soap, and candles for exportation, tobacco-pipes, anchors, and nails; and here are iron and brass foundries, and breweries. Ships are also built here for the American, the West India, and the coasting trade, as well as many for the trade with the East Indies. A patent slip was erected in 1821, at the expense of Lord Lonsdale, by means of which vessels of a large size can be drawn out of the water into the yard, for the purpose of undergoing repairs, by the exertions of ten or twelve men. The number of ships belonging to this port, according to the parliamentary returns in 1829, was 496, and the burden of which altogether amounted to 72,967 tons. Steam-boats pass regularly from this port to Liverpool, Carlisle, Dublin, the Isle of Man, and Scotland. The jurisdiction of this port extends from Maryport, on the north, to the river Duddon, on the south, including the lesser ports of Workington, Harrington, Ravenglass, and Millom. The coal-mines in the neighbourhood of Whitehaven are inferior in extent to none in the kingdom except those of Newcastle and Sunderland: some of them have been sunk to the depth of more than 150 fathoms, and the works advanced to a considerable distance beneath the bed of the sea. They have five principal shafts or entrances, called Beermouths, or Bear-mouths, which, opening at the foot of a hill, form a gradual descent, by which horses can pass into the mines. The coal is found in seams or strata, varying from two to eleven feet in thickness. These mines are unfortunately infested with the firedamp, or inflammable gas; the danger arising from which has, however, been greatly obviated by the use of Davy's safety-lamp. Pumps worked by very powerful steam-engines are employed to clear the mines from water. Iron-ore is also procured here, and sent to be smelted at the iron-works in South Wales. The herring-fishery, which was once largely prosecuted here, is now inconsiderable. Races are held occasionally in the vicinity of Whitehaven. Dr. William Brownrigg, an eminent physician and natural philosopher, who died at Ormthwaite in 1800, was long a medical practitioner at this place.

WHITHORN, shire of Wigtown, S.

Edinburgh 116 m. SSW. Wigtown 11 m. S.
Pop. 2361. Memb. of Pt. 1 with Wigtown, &c.

A royal burgh, seaport, market-town, and parish; the former possessing independent jurisdiction. It is pleasantly seated on the western side of the bay of Wigtown, and consists of one principal street, stretching from north to south, intersected at right angles by several alleys, and by a fine stream of water, which is crossed by a neatly-built bridge, and at its junction with the sea forms a safe harbour. In the centre of the place stands the town-hall, a commodious edifice, surmounted by turrets and a spire, with a good peal of bells. This burgh is governed by a provost, two baillies, and fifteen councillors; and in union with those of Wigtown, New Galloway, and Stranraer, sends one member to Parliament. Tanning of leather is extensively carried on, and the manufacture of cotton, introduced here in the beginning of the present century, has been established with success. Whithorn is of high antiquity, having been a considerable Roman station (the Leucophibia, or Candida Casa of Bede), the metropolis of the Novantes, and the seat of one of the four Northumbrian bishops. The cathedral was erected in the fourth century, by St. Ninian, and dedicated to St. Martin, few vestiges, however, now remain. The parish church is a large structure, occupying a part of the site of the richly-endowed Premonstratensian priory, founded here in the reign of David I., by Fergus, lord of Galloway, the prior and monks of which constituted the dean and chapter of the cathedral. The parish, which lies at the southern extremity of the peninsula formed by the bays of Luce and Wigtown, is about eight miles in breadth, and includes also the Isle of Whithorn, upon which there is a considerable village, with a good harbour and quay. At this place is stationed one of the King's revenue-cutters, and regular passage-vessels sail hence to Dublin, Liverpool, Greenock, the Isle of Man, Whitehaven, and other ports in the neighbourhood. The surface is pleasingly diversified with hills, vales, and thriving plantations; it is mostly enclosed, well cultivated, and productive. There are extensive quarries of slate, and of a beautiful variegated marble; undoubted indications of copper and lead also appear in many places. Living, in the presbytery of Wigtown and synod of Galloway; patron the crown. Near the Isle of Whithorn are the ruins of a church, said to be the most ancient in Scotland. At Burgh Head, Carghidown, Castle Feather, and within a mile of the town, are the remains of Roman camps. The principal mansions are Castle Wigg, a venerable edifice, the seat of Hugh Hathorn, Esq., and Tonderghie, the elegant modern-built residence of Hugh Stewart, Esq. Off this coast the French Admiral Thurot was defeated by Admiral Elliot, in 1760.

WHITKIRK, shire of Haddington, S.

P. T. North Berwick (22) 3½ m. SE b S.
Pop. 1043.

A parish and village, to the former of which (anciently called Hamer), is annexed the ancient parishes of Aldham and Tynningham. The united parish is six miles in length, four in breadth, and bounded on the north and east by the German Ocean. It is highly cultivated, the surface being level and the soil favourable for agricultural purposes. There are a number of dangerous rocks along the coast, which have frequently proved fatal to mariners. The living is in the presbytery of Dunbar and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale; patrons, the Crown, and the Earl of Haddington, alternately. The church of Hamer, from its white appearance, was at an early period, termed Whitekirk, which at length became the name of the parish.

WICK, shire of Caithness, S.

Edinburgh 279 m. N. Pop. 6713. M. D.
Fri. Memb. of Pt. 1, with Dingwall, &c.

A royal burgh, seaport, market-town, and parish, the capital of the shire, the seat of the sheriffs' courts, and possessing an independent jurisdiction. The town is situated on the left bank of the river Wick, the estuary of which forms a good harbour, and is crossed, where its channel is 156 feet wide, by a substantial bridge of three arches, leading to the newly-erected and increasing suburb of Pultney, which see. Though but a small place, composed of narrow, irregular streets, Wick contains several handsome buildings, and a tolbooth, which is used as the county gaol. The harbour has also been rendered more convenient, than when in its natural state, through the exertions of the British Fishery Society, at whose expense, and by the aid of a parliamentary grant of 7500*l.*, commodious piers, quays, and docks, have been constructed, to the great benefit of the trade in general, and especially of the fisheries, on the northern coast of Scotland, in which the inhabitants of this neighbourhood participate to a large extent. Wick was erected into a royal burgh in 1589, by charter of James VI., under which, and by rules adopted in 1716, it is governed by a provost and two bailies, who are chosen by the free burgesses from two leets of two and four persons respectively, which must be presented by the old magistrates, for the approval of the superior of the burgh, thirty days before Michaelmas, otherwise the election becomes void; and on being duly installed in office, these three functionaries exercise the privilege of appointing the rest of the officers, viz., seven councillors, a treasurer, and a dean of guild. The revenue of the corporation, arising principally from shore dues on ships, &c., and customs chargeable on all articles sold in the markets, has been on the increase for several years past. This burgh is united with those of Dingwall, Dornoch, Kirkwall, and Tain, in sending one member to Parliament. The parish is of a semicircular figure, twenty miles in length by ten in breadth, and is bounded on the east by the German Ocean, by which its rocky coast is indented with numerous creeks, convenient for the fisherman, and many caverns, the resort of seals. Staxigoe, Broadhaven, and Louisburgh, are the most secure harbours for the fishing busses; and the lofty, rocky, and well-known promontory, termed Noss Head, is sometimes desisted by mariners at an incredible distance. The surface exhibits an open champaign country, intersected throughout its extent by the river Wick, and interspersed with several lakes; and though the greater part of the soil may be cultivated with success, there appear immense tracts lying waste, and producing nothing but heath and peat. Limestone is abundant; and a copper-mine was formerly wrought near the ruins of Oldwick Castle, which occupy a point jutting into the sea, and serve as a guide to mariners. A considerable quantity of kelp is made along the shore; and at Nybster and Sarclett, salt is manufactured. Living, in the presbytery of Caithness and synod of Caithness and Sutherland; patron, Sir B. Dunbar, Bart. The church is a venerable but inconvenient structure, dedicated to St. Fergus. There is an ancient chapel, called St. Teay, in which several of the name of Gun, with other persons, were inhumanly massacred in the fifteenth century, by Keith, Earl Marischal. Near it are the old ruinous castles of Sinclair and Girnigoe; and at a short distance is Aekergill Tower, a fine Gothic building, formerly the seat of the Earls Marischal, but now of Sir Benjamin Dunbar.

The church, which is ded. to All Saints, is a spacious structure, with a large handsome tower; that ded. to St. Andrew has been long demolished; they both stood in the same churchyard.

WICKLOW, County of, Leinster, I.

N to S 40 m. E to W 33 m. No. of acres 500,600. Baronies 7. Boroughs 0. Market-towns 8. Parishes 62. Pop. 110,767. Dioceses of Dublin and Glendalough, Leighlin and Ferns, archdiocese of Dublin.

A mountainous and picturesque district, and one of the twelve counties into which the province of Leinster is divided. It is bounded on the north by the county of Dublin, lies to the eastward of the counties of Carlow and Kildare, is terminated by Wexford on the south, while St. George's Channel laves its eastern front. The great range of granite mountains which commences on the coast of Dublin Bay, and passes in a south-western direction into the county of Killkenny, may be said to culminate in the county of Wicklow, which is altogether a gigantic, mountainous region. The loftiest of the whole range is called Lugnaquilla, which attains an elevation of 3070 feet above the level of the sea. Thonalegee, Kippune, Donce, Comaderry, Sliebh Gadoe, and some others, exceed 2000 feet in height. Much bog is also interspersed, and naked rock protrudes continually, as well as in vast masses. Little of the surface, therefore, is habitable or productive; and if it were not for the intervention of so many fertile and fascinating valleys, with their accompaniment of fountains and wood, the whole county would be a desert. But there cannot be more attractive, more enchanting scenery, than is found every where in the Wicklow glens. The Devil's Glen, Dunran, Glen of the Downs, Dayle, Glenis-boreanc, Seven Churches, and the Meeting of the Waters, are known to the world of taste from the delineation of the artist, and their legends preserved in a most happy form in the beautiful and characteristic ballads of Mr. T. Moore. The romantic scenes of Wicklow are not confined wholly to the dark and wooded defile, the broad lake sometimes claims deservedly a participation in the praise. Lough Tay, or Luggela, is decidedly the most beautiful; Loughs Dan and Bray, the most sublime; while the lakes of Glendalough have some claim to the character both of the pleasing and the grand. The waters that are drawn down upon so many hills at first deposit themselves in the boggy districts, and are drained away thence by the numerous little rivers that constitute the chief ornament of the picturesque glens just mentioned. The river Slaney waters the west of the county, after which, crossing into Carlow, it enters Wexford, and finds an exit on the coast of that county. The Liffy, on whose banks stands the capital of Ireland, also has its source in this county. The Vartrey rises in the north of the county, and flowing by Roundwood, falls down a vast rock into the narrow defile called the Devil's Glen, and meets the ocean near to Wicklow. The Avonbeg and Avonmore contribute by their felicitous union to produce the splendid scene, the theme of the poet, called the "Meeting of the Waters," and assuming afterwards the common name of Avoca, discharge themselves into the sea below Arklow. Many tributaries must here remain unnoticed, all mountainous regions usually giving birth to a greater number of rivulets and pools than could be with propriety enumerated in a sketch so general. The character of the surface is contradictory to the promotion of agriculture; it is only pursued with energy in this district by persons of independent fortunes, whose chief inducement to the improvement of their lands is the romantic beauty of their natural position. Most extraordinary instances could here be mentioned of individual ingenuity and enterprise put forth by landed proprietors in the reclamation of extensive districts in various parts of the county. There is a considerable quantity of bacon made here for the Dublin market, and Wicklow hams are much esteemed by dealers. Large fortunes have been acquired by mining proprietors, although the prospect at present is less promising. Cronebane and Ballymucktagh copper-mines have occasioned the elevation of some families to the highest classes of society attainable by wealth. Glenmalur lead-mines have been wrought for many years, but are now in a languid state. Lead-ore of good quality is raised at a moderate cost on the sea lands, in the vicinity of the Seven Churches. In Croghan Kinshela mountain gold was formerly found, and obtained principally from steam-works; and in the vicinity have been detected silver, copper, iron, lead, zinc, tin, tungsten, manganese, arsenic, and antimony. The civil division comprehends the baronies of Arklow, Ballynacor, Newcastle, Rathdown, Shillelagh, Talbotstown Lower, and Talbotstown Upper. The principal places of note are Wicklow, the shire town; Arklow, a seaport; Tinahely, Newtown, Market Kenedy, Bray, Carnew, Blessington, Donard, Dunlavan, Holywood, and Baltinglass. Fine flannels are manufactured very generally, and much encouragement was given some years ago to the establishment of a permanent and valuable woollen manufactory in this county. Amongst the munificent promoters were the Earl of Aldborough, Sir John Parnel, and the Earl of Fitzwilliam, at whose sole expense the Flannel Hall at Rathcun was erected. The webs resemble those of North Wales, and so also does the quality of the wool, and, if more care were taken in the breeding of the Wicklow sheep, the flannels of this county would quickly be capable of competing with those of Pool and Newtown. Inland navigation would be difficult of formation, and is but little required in a county whose exports are so trifling, and where the sea is adjacent. Roads may be constructed with more advantage. Government have opened a line through the midst of the mountainous district, and erected upon it, in different places spacious barracks; this is called The Military Road. A second, and perhaps more useful line, extends across the county from Glendalough to Holywood; this, it is supposed, was anciently a paved causeway, leading to the ancient city of Glendalough. A third new and improved line passes along the west of the county, and crosses the river Liffey by a beautiful Gothic arch over the cataract of Poul-a-fucha. Two members are returned to Parliament for this county.

WICKLOW, co. Wicklow, Leinster, I.

Dublin 32 m. S. Pop. 2046.

Fair, March 28; Ascension-day; Aug. 12 and Nov. 25.

A town occupying a portion of Ennisboheen parish, in the barony of Arklow, and of Rathmow parish, in the barony of Newcastle. It is situated at the mouth of the river Leitrin, adjacent to the little harbour of Wicklow, and is the shire-town. The streets are devoid of regularity or cheerfulness, nor do the public buildings lay claim to any remarkable notice. Here are the county gaol and court-house, a handsome church, Roman Catholic chapel, infantry barracks, and two good inns and posting-houses. The living is a rectory, vicarage, and part of the corps of a prebend in the cathedral of St. Patrick, in the diocese of Dublin and Glendalough, and archdiocese of Dublin; valued in K. B. at 5*l.* 4*s.* 7½*d.*; and, by estimation, at 1600*l.* annually. The other benefices, constituting the corps of the prebend, are Drumkey, Killpoole, Glanely, Ennisboheen, Killcommon, Rathnew, Killeskey, and Killougher. It possesses three churches, a parsonage, and eighty acres of glebe. The name Wicklow is applied improperly to this union, as there is no such ecclesiastical denomination; patron, the Archbishop. The assizes and petty sessions are held here. Some little trade exists in the import of coals, and other necessities, and an export of timber; Wicklow ale is in much request. Race-meetings are held annually upon a ground called the Murrough. The classical school is a private foundation, endowed by Lord Chesterfield, in the year 1746, with twelve acres of land; Here is also a subscription-school, consisting of seventy boys and as many girls. The harbour is small and shallow, admitting small craft only. On Wicklow Head are erected two lighthouses, exhibiting fixed bright lights; when brought into onc, ships may run between the banks. The walls of a third lighthouse, now disused, are suffered to continue as a landmark. Several curious caves are found in the limestone cliffs of the promontory on which the lighthouses are erected. On an elevated rock hanging over the entrance of the river are the ruins of the Black Castle, erected by William Fitzwilliam, in the year 1376. The family of Howard derive the title of Earl from this town.

Fairs, April 5 and July 2^d for cattle and horses.

A market-town and parish in the upper division of Grumbald's Ash, situated on two small streams, over one of which is a handsome stone bridge. A new road has recently been made hence to Wootton-under-Edge, and other improvements have been effected, but its trade is very trifling; that in clothing, which formerly was prosperous in this part of the country, having greatly declined. The town, by virtue of an ancient charter, is governed by a mayor and several aldermen; and a manorial court is held annually in October. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Gloucester; valued in K. B. 18*l*.; patron (1829) the Rev. Thomas Cork. The church, ded. to the Holy Trinity, is a large edifice, with a fine lofty tower. Here are also places of worship for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists; and a free-school, founded and endowed by Alexander Hosea in 1683. The income is about 100*l*. a-year, and the masters have houses to live in belonging to the school.

WIENS, or WEENS, shire of Perth, S.

P. T. Aberfeldy (77½) 1 m. NW. Pop. 1354.

A very extensive highland parish, but of so irregular a figure that its dimensions have never been precisely ascertained. The surface, which is extremely rugged and mountainous, is watered by the rivers Tay, Lyon, Lochay, and Dochart, and interspersed with lakes, of which Loch Tay, abounding with salmon, trout, char, pike, perch, &c., extends fifteen miles in length by about one in breadth; and two others, in Glen Lyon, are each more than one mile long and half a mile broad. The district of Crannich, on the north side of Loch Tay, includes a part of the celebrated mountain Ben Lawers, which rises in a conical form to the height of 4015 feet above the level of the sea. The living is in the presbytery of Dunkeld and synod of Perth and Stirling; patron, Sir Robert Menzies, Bart., whose seat, Castle Menzies, is a noble structure, occupying a romantic site on the north side of Strath Tay. The church, a small edifice, was erected in 1609. A chapel was built by the Earl of Bredalbane, some years ago at Lawers, on the north bank of Loch Tay; and more recently another was completed by voluntary contributions in Glen Lyon, twenty miles from the mother church. The parochial school has a salary of 300 merks, with a commodious school-house, dwelling-garden, and other advantages. There are three other schools, endowed in 1740 with 6000 merks, by the Rev. Archibald Campbell, minister of the parish. The great military road between Stirling and Inverness passes over Tay bridge, about half a mile from the church.

WIGAN, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

London 200 m. NW b N. Pop. of Pa. 36,818.
Of Bo. 17,716. M. D. Mond. and Frid. Fairs, Oct. 29, Wednes. before Holy Thursd. for horses, horned cattle, and cloth; June 27, for horses and horned cattle. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish having separate jurisdiction, but locally situated in the hundred of West Derby, originally called Wibiggin. The vicinity is said to have been the scene of several battles between the Britons and Saxons; the former being under the conduct of King Arthur; and, during the reigns of the Charleses, many battles were fought here. The town, standing on the banks of the river Douglas, consists chiefly of old houses arranged in narrow streets, but there are many now of modern erection also; they are well paved, and lighted with gas. A mechanics' institute, a library, and a savings' bank have been successfully established here. At the north end of the town is a monumental pillar, erected in 1679, to the memory of Sir Thomas Tildesley, who fell in a battle fought here in 1651, between the king's forces, under the Earl of Derby, and those of Col. Lilburne. Extensive manufactories are carried on in cotton and linen goods, and hardwares; on the banks of the river are several corn-mills. Cannel coal abounds in the neighbourhood, and the Leeds and Liverpool Canal passing here, affords every facility for its export as well as that of the manufactured goods to various parts of the kingdom. The town is governed by virtue of a charter granted in the reign of Charles II., (although the first was obtained as early as the reign of Edward III.) by a mayor, a justice, two bailiffs, and other officers, elected annually. The first mentioned is justice of the peace during his mayoralty and the following year; the corporation have the power of trying civil actions, and all offences not capital; and petty sessions for the hundred are holden here. The town-hall, a neat substantial building, was erected in 1720, by the Earl of Barrymore and Sir Roger Bradshaigh, then members for the borough. Wigan first sent members to Parliament in the reign of Edward I.; after which the privilege was neglected, and not renewed until the time of Edward VI. The right of election is vested in the free burgesses; the mayor and bailiffs are the returning officers. The livings are a rectory with the curacy of Up-Holland, and a perpetual curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Chester; the former valued in K. B. 80*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; church ded. to All Saints; patron (1829) the Earl of Bradford and others; the latter not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 36*l.*; chapel ded. to St. George; patron, the Rector. Here are also places of worship for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, and Roman Catholics; a free-school, founded in the reign of James I., by whom is not known; a blue-coat and national school united, and a school of industry; besides a number of Sunday-schools. The first mentioned is managed by fifteen governors, who appoint a master, with a salary of 130*l.* a-year; the number of scholars must not exceed eighty; but the master has the privilege of taking boarders. The poor have also the benefit of a dispensary, a clothing society, and a bible association. A sulphurous well here was formerly much resorted to, but it has of late years fallen into disrepute, from a deterioration in its medicinal qualities.

WIGBOROUGH, GREAT, co. Essex.

P. T. Colchester (51) 6½ m. SSW. Pop. 410. A parish in the hundred of Winstree, bounded on the south by a creek of the Blackwater, called Verley; living, a rectory, with that of Salcott, in the archdeaconry of Colchester and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 18*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.*; church ded. to St. Stephen; patron (1829) Henry Bowes, Esq. Here were formerly salt-works, and the place was, at a distant period, of some consequence. Roman coins and other antiquities have been discovered here.

An island in the English Channel, separated from the opposite coast of Hampshire by a strait, formerly styled the Solent Sea, and more recently the Sound or the West Channel; it is about seven miles in breadth at the east end, and also in other parts, except at the western extremity, where it is scarcely more than a mile across. This island is called Vecta or Vectis, in the writings of the Roman historians, who inform us that it was conquered by Vespasian, in the reign of the Emperor Claudius. The only remains of Roman antiquity which the island has afforded consist of a few coins, whence it may be concluded that they did not form here any permanent establishments. In the beginning of the fifth century the island was conquered by the Saxons, under their chiefs, Stuf and Withgar; the latter of whom gave his name to the fortress of Carisbrooke, formerly called Withgarisbrook, of which he was probably the founder. The Isle of Wight afterwards was annexed to the kingdom of Wessex; but in 787 it was captured by the Danes, who made a descent here again in the reign of Alfred the Great, when they ravaged the country; and in 1001 the same marauders obtained possession of the island, which they held for several years. King John retired hither to make preparations for renewing the war with his barons, after they had compelled him to sign the Magna Charta. The island was invaded by the French in 1377, and again in the reign of Henry VIII., when they were repulsed by Sir Richard Worsley, captain of the island; and forts for defence were afterwards erected on the coasts. During the civil war in the reign of Charles I., the Isle of Wight was held by the parliament; and in 1647 the king, after his flight from Hampton Court, was for some time a prisoner in Carisbrooke Castle. The lordship of this island belonged in the reign of Henry VI. to Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester: though that monarch in 1445 gave the title of King of the Isle of Wight to Henry de Beauchamp, premier Earl of England, and afterwards Duke of Warwick, on whose death the superiority of the island reverted to the crown. Edward IV. bestowed the title of Lord of the Isle of Wight on Richard, Lord Widvile; and, in the beginning of the reign of Henry VII., it was vested in Sir Edward Widvile; but, on his death without issue, it again became the property of the crown, and has remained so ever since. The government of the island is now intrusted to a governor and lieutenant-governor, appointed by the king, the former of whom is commander of all the military places stationed here. It is divided into the liberties of East Medina and West Medina; so called from the principal river Medina, which runs across the island from south to north, separating it into two nearly equal portions, and falls into the sea at Cowes. Besides this, there are small rivers called the Yar, the Wootton, and the Ear. The surface of the country is agreeably diversified, and the soil is very fruitful: it produces wheat, barley, oats, peas, and beans. The meadow-land is extremely rich and fertile, affording from one to three tons of fine hay from an acre. The downs, extending across the island from east to west, through the centre, afford good pasturage for sheep; and cows for the dairy are kept in the lower grounds, chiefly of the Devonshire and Alderney breeds, the latter of which are found extremely profitable. The cliffs on the western coast are the resort of a multitude of sea-fowl, as gulls, puffins, eormorants, razor-bills, and Cornish choughs; and also of wild pigeons and starlings. Much eider is made here of an excellent quality, but principally by the farmers for domestic use. Various kinds of timber-trees are found throughout the island, though the woods have been greatly thinned for the supply of the royal dock-yards, Portsmouth. A considerable part of the sub-soil consists of chalk, forming a portion of the chalk basin of the Isle of Wight. Among the mineral productions, besides chalk, are limestone, freestone, pipeclay, fuller's-earth, white sand, yellow and red ochre, and coal, which last is found but in small quantities. On the coast are the harbours of Cowes, Rithc, South Yarmouth, and Brading; and these and other places are much resorted to in the summer for sea-bathing. At the west end of the island are those remarkable rocks, called from their shape, the Needles. Fish of various kinds are caught in the surrounding seas, and especially crabs, lobsters, shrimps, and prawns, which are large, and of an excellent quality. Samphire grows in abundance on the cliffs and rocks, and is collected by the inhabitants for sale.

WIGMORE, co. Hereford.

P. T. Ludlow (142) 7½ m. SW b W. Pop. 429. Fairs, May 6, and Aug. 5, for cattle, sheep, &c.

A parish in the hundred of the same name, romantically situated on the slope of an immense mountain of bare rock: it abounds with limestone, and is supposed to contain some coal. A court-leet is held occasionally. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Hereford; valued in K. B. 8*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 80*l.*; church ded. to St. James; patron, the Bishop of Hereford. The interesting ruins of Wigmore Castle, which are beautifully mantled with ivy, are situated on a commanding eminence, irregularly intersected by ravines, covered with underwood, and surrounded by an amphitheatre of mountains: the massive fragments of the Reep occupy the summit of a lofty artificial mound, and present a very grand and picturesque appearance, but the outer works are the most perfect; when this structure was founded is unknown; but it is certainly of very early origin, having been repaired by Edward the Elder. Here was formerly an abbey of Augustine canons, founded about the year 1179, by Hugh Mortimer.

WIGSTON MAGNA, co. Leicester.

P. T. Leicester (96) 3½ m. SSE. Pop. 2089.

A parish in the hundred of Guthlaxton, pleasantly situated on the high-road between Welford and Leicester, and crossed by the Leicester Canal. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of stockings. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Leicester and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 9*l.* 8*s.* 9*d.*; church ded. to All Saints; patrons, the Haberdashers' Company and Christ's Hospital, alternately. Here is a place of worship for Independents. This place was formerly called Wigston Two Steeples, from its having two churches, one of which being in a very dilapidated state, is now used as a school-room, where poor children are taught to read and write at the expense of the parishioners. Here are also a lunatic asylum, and an almshouse for six poor widows, and the same number of widowers. At a place called the Gaol Close, a temporary prison was erected during the civil wars, to which the prisoners were removed from the county gaol at Leicester.

WIGTON, co. Cumberland.

London 303 m. NNW. Pop. of Pa. 5456. Of To. 4056. M. D. Tues. and Fri., the former for corn only, great quantities of which are pitched in the market-place. Fairs, Feb. 20, a very large horse-fair; April 5, for horned cattle; and Dec. 21, for cattle, butcher's meat, apples, and honey; also statute fairs at Whitsuntide and Martimas.

A market-town, parish, and township in Cumberland ward. It stands in a pleasant and healthy situation, is a commodious and well-built town, consisting principally of one spacious street, with a narrower one extending transversely at one end of it, and contains a public subscription and a circulating library. The manufacture of checks, fustians, muslins, and gingham, is extensively carried on; a large establishment for calico-printing and dyeing; and several breweries, tanneries, &c. form the chief employment of the inhabitants. The town is supplied with coal and lime from Bolton, about four miles distant, and copper-ore is found within five miles. The petty sessions are held here once a month; and a court-leet and baron annually in September, when constables are appointed. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Carlisle; valued in K. B. 17*l.* 19*s.* 0½*d.*; patron, the Bishop of Carlisle. The church, which is ded. to St. Mary, is a spacious structure, erected in 1788, on the site of the ancient edifice, said to have been built by Odoard, the first baron of Wigton, with materials brought from the neighbouring Roman station called Old Carlisle. Here are also places of worship for the Society of Friends and Independent Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics. The free grammar-school was founded in 1730, by certain of the inhabitants, who agreed to subscribe for its erection 1*l.*, for every penny for which their houses were assessed to the purvey, on condition of having the privilege of sending their children; it subsequently received several endowments, and its present income is upwards of 70*l.* per annum: there are at present fifteen boys who study the classics, and twenty who are instructed in writing, arithmetic, and the mathematics. Near the town is a school for sixty boys, founded in 1825 by the Society of Friends. The Sunday-school, erected in 1830, is capable of receiving 500 children; there are also several others, supported by Dissenters. An hospital, for six widows of Protestant clergymen, was founded and endowed in 1725, by the Rev. John Tomlinson. Ewan Clarke, the well-known Cumberland poet; R. Smirke, R. A., the celebrated historical painter; and Mr. George Barnes, professor of mathematics, were natives of this town.

WIGTOWN, shire of, S.

NW to SE, greatest length, 30 m., NE to SW, breadth, about 12 m. No. of Scottish acres 238,721. Pop. 33,210. Parishes 17. Royal burghs 3. Memb. of Pt. 1.

A maritime county, sometimes called Upper or West Galloway, of which ancient district it forms a part. It is bounded on the east by the stewartry of Kirkcudbright and Wigtown Bay, on the west by an arm of the sea called Loch Ryan, and by the North Channel, which separates it from Ireland; on the north by the shire of Ayr, and on the south by Luce Bay and the Irish Sea. The coast, which is bold and rocky, is deeply indented by Loch Ryan and the bay of Luce, which, approximating from opposite directions, form a peninsula, termed the Rhyns of Galloway, whose southernmost promontory, now known as the Point of Mull, is celebrated as the Norantum Chersonesus of the ancients, and is the most south-westerly land of Scotland, its latitude being fifty-four degrees thirty-nine minutes; longitude, one degree forty-five minutes, west from Edinburgh. It projects many miles into the sea, and is perforated with caverns, producing with a flowing tide sounds like loud claps of thunder; but it is exceedingly dangerous of approach on account of the numerous rocks by which it is environed. There are, however, on each side of it, several good harbours, such as Maryport, Curgie, Port Nessoek, Kilstay, and others, and samphire grows in abundance among its precipices. Most of the land near the shore is tolerably fertile, yet agriculture, in any thing like an improved shape, is neglected. The interior and northern extremity of the shire, where the surface is more elevated, is comparatively barren, and fit only for the pasturage of cattle and sheep, but these, especially the latter, which are of the celebrated Galloway breed, are highly esteemed for the delicate flavour of their flesh. The principal rivers are the Cree, which forms the eastern boundary; the Luce, which falls into the bay so called, and the Bladenoch, falling into Wigtown Bay. The most considerable towns are the three royal burghs, Wigtown, Whithorn, and Stranraer; Port Patrick, one of the Irish mail and packet stations, and Newton Stewart, on the river Cree, where the great roads from London and Edinburgh to Port Patrick unite. The latter place is noted for its flourishing carpet and cotton manufactures, and its extensive tanneries. Cairn, Garliestown, Glencuce, and Isle Whithorn, are populous villages; and the most elegant mansions are Castle Kennedy, Castle Stewart, Culhorn, Dunskey, Galloway House, Glasserton, Lochmaw Castle, Merton Castle, Park, and Physgill. The real rental of this shire is estimated at 100,000*l.* per annum. Wheat and pulse were lately measured by the auchlet of nine pints thirteen gills, sixteen of which made a bole, equal to one bole, three firlots, seventeen pints, one choppin, 2 gills, standard measure, or one English quarter. Oats, barley, and malt were measured by the auchlet, heaped to one-eighth more. An ell of green linen is thirty-eight inches, and of raw woollen forty. Butter, cheese, and wool are usually sold by the stone of twenty-six pounds and a quarter, avoirdupoise, but butcher's meat and groceries by the bole of sixteen stone, each stone being only twenty-six pounds in Whithorn.

WIGTOWN, shire of Wigtown, S.

Edinburgh 105 m. SW. Port Patrick 34 m. S b E. Pop. 2042. Fairs, 1st Fri. O. S. Feb.; 1st Mon. O. S. Apr.; June 17 O. S.; last Fri. O. S. Aug. and Oct. Memb. of Pt. 1 with Whithorn, &c.

A royal burgh, seaport, market-town, and parish, the capital of the shire, the seat of the sheriff's courts, and possessing a separate jurisdiction. The town, which is a small place, bearing marks of considerable antiquity, occupies the declivity of a hill, on the western side of a large bay of the same name, which here receives the river Bladenoch, and forms a good harbour, though the sands are partially dry at ebb-tides. The air is considered to be remarkably healthful, many instances of longevity having occurred among its inhabitants. This is a port of the custom-house, whose jurisdiction comprehends every creek from the mouth of the river Cree, around the coast of Wigtownshire, to the Mull of Galloway. A considerable quantity of grain is annually exported, and coals are imported from Liverpool and Whitehaven. There is a salmon-fishery in the river. Wigtown, it is supposed, was erected into a royal burgh by Robert Bruce, in whose reign it seems to have been of some importance. It is governed by a provost, two baillies, and fifteen councillors, and unites with Whithorn, Stranraer, and New Galloway in sending one member to Parliament. There is a grammar-school conducted by an able rector, whose salary, 60*l.* sterling, is paid by the corporation and the principal heritors. The parish forms an irregular oblong figure, five miles and a half in length, by four miles in breadth, and contains about 5500 acres, of which about four-fifths are barren; the remainder, which is watered by the Bladenoch, exhibits a diversity of surface and soil, and the north-east part, which is now covered with moss, was apparently, at one period, an inlet of the sea. The land is mostly enclosed, and improvements in agriculture are rapidly advancing to maturity. Living, in the presbytery of Wigtown and synod of Galloway. "The Standing Stones of Torhouse," in the western part of the parish, are ascribed to the Druids. A convent of Dominicans was founded at Wigtown in 1267, by Dervogilla, the daughter of Alan, Lord Galloway, and mother of John Baliol, King of Scotland. Wigtown gave the title of Earl to the family of Fleming, dormant in 1760.

WILLIAM, FORT, shire of Inverness, S.

Edinburgh 127 m. NW. Fort Augustus 29½ m. SW. Strontian 17 m. E. Fairs, 2 annually for sheep and wool. 56. 49. 42. N. Long. 5. 6. 30. from Greenwich.

A fortress and seaport in the parish of Kilmallie, adjoining the populous village of Maryburgh, and situated on the south side of a harbour formed by an inlet of that arm of the sea termed Lochiel, which here receives the rivers Lochy and Nevis. It occupies the extremity of a plain, nearly level with the sea, and upon the same level with a more extensive plain on the opposite side of the water. These plains are terminated on every side by lofty mountains, whence spring the numerous rivulets that irrigate the soil and heighten the beauty of the scenery. The fort was originally constructed of earth, by the celebrated Monk, in the time of Cromwell, when it usually accommodated 2000 soldiers, termed the garrison of Inverlochy, from its vicinity to the ancient castle of that name; but in the reign of William and Mary it was rebuilt, of strong masonry, on a reduced scale, in its present triangular form, with two bastions mounting fifteen pieces of ordnance, and received the name of Fort William, while the adjoining village took that of Mary-burgh, in honour of the queen. It has a garrison, consisting of a governor, lieutenant-governor, fort-major, and a company of invalids; though it is not a place of much strength, the river Nevis having undermined and swept away considerable portions of the walls, which have long been going to decay. It, however, withstood a siege of five weeks, in 1745, against the rebels under the brave Captain Scott. A general post-office is established at this place; there are also a gaol and a freemason's lodge. The markets and fairs are well attended, and the port is much frequented by coasting-vessels. A missionary, appointed by the commissioners of the royal bounty, is resident here; and there is a school, with a salary, perquisites, &c., amounting to 100*l.* sterling, in which the languages and mathematics are taught.

A borough (formerly a market-town) and parish in the hundred of Branch and Dole, but having separate jurisdiction. The town, which consists principally of one street, partially paved, is situated near the confluence of the rivers Nadder and Wily, from the latter of which it derives its name. It is a town of great antiquity, and is supposed to have been the Caer-Guilon, or chief seat of the British prince, Caroilus, and subsequently the capital of the West Saxon dominions. It was a place of considerable consequence for some centuries prior to the Norman conquest; it contained several eminent religious establishments, and a mint, and gave name to the county in which it is situated. In 871 a most sanguinary battle was fought here between King Alfred and the Danes, in which the former was successful, obliging the latter to sue for peace. In the year 1003 this town was burnt by Sweyn, King of Denmark, who laid waste all the western counties of England, in revenge for Ethelred's inhuman massacre of the Danes, about two years previous. It soon, however, recovered its pre-eminence among the West Saxon towns, and continued to flourish till the year 1143, when King Stephen took possession of it, intending to convert the nunnery into a place of defence, but, being surprised by the forces of the Empress Matilda, under the command of the Earl of Gloucester, the king was obliged to flee, leaving behind him his troops and baggage, and the town was again given up to pillage, and set fire to by the conquerors. Wilton recovered from this calamity, but began to decline in the succeeding reign, in consequence of the foundation of New Sarum, and the change in the direction of the great western road which soon after followed. In 1579 this town was visited by Queen Elizabeth, and in 1603 the court resided here for a short time. Wilton has been very considerable for the manufacture of carpets, which was introduced by a former Earl of Pembroke, who brought over workmen from France for that purpose, and was the first place in England where this manufacture commenced; though not carried on to the same extent as formerly, it has latterly been increasing, and there are at present two manufactories, containing about eighty looms, and employing about 350 persons; flannels and fancy woollens once formed a considerable branch of manufacture, but has greatly declined. Wilton is a borough, by prescription and charter, and is governed by a mayor, recorder, high steward, five aldermen, and an unlimited number of burgesses, with a town-clerk, two sergeants-at-mace, and other officers. The mayor is chosen by the corporation at large, on the first Thursday after Michaelmas-day, from three persons previously nominated by such members of the corporation as have served the office of mayor, and is sworn into office, with the other officers who are then appointed, on the 13th of October, at the court-leet of the lord of the manor, held at the town-hall, an ancient building, recently repaired and improved by the corporation. The mayor and recorder are justices of the peace, with exclusive jurisdiction. This borough has returned members to Parliament ever since the 23d of Edward I.; the right of election is vested in the members of the corporation, whose number is between forty and fifty: the mayor is the returning officer, and the influence of the Earl of Pembroke is predominant. Early in the tenth century this town became the seat of the diocese of Wilts, and continued so during the lives of seven successive bishops, the last of whom, Hermanus, having been also appointed to the see of Sherborne, united the two bishoprics, and removed to Old Sarum, where he founded a cathedral, which continued the seat of the see until its transfer in 1217, to Salisbury. The living is a rectory with that of Ditchampton, and the vicarage of Bulbridge, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Salisbury; valued in K. B. 12*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*; church ded. to St. Mary; patron (1829) the Earl of Pembroke. Here are also places of worship for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists. At the freeschool, founded in 1706, twenty boys are educated and clothed, and an apprentice fee of 8*l.* 10*l.* given with each. Mr. Robert Sumpton, who was a great benefactor to this school, also bequeathed the interest of 1000*l.* to be given annually as a marriage portion to four young women, and 2000*l.* for the benefit of five poor men and as many women, who receive 6*l.* per annum each. Notwithstanding the great decay of Wilton as above related, it continued for many centuries after the conquest famous for its monastic institutions, particularly its abbey, which was commenced so early as the year 800, by Wulstan, Earl of Wiltshire, and continued to flourish till the dissolution, when it was granted to Sir William Herbert, afterwards Earl of Pembroke; its religious inmates were of the Benedictine order; and its buildings, no part of which is now standing, were of considerable extent and grandeur. The other monastic institutions were a house of black friars; an hospital, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen; a collegiate church; and an hospital, dedicated to St. John, which last is still in existence, and supports a master, or prior, who is a clergyman, nominated by the Dean of Salisbury, and two poor men and two women, chosen by the master, who receive an annuity of 4*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* and a suit of clothes. On the site of the celebrated nunnery, Sir William Herbert commenced the erection of that extensive pile, now the residence of his descendants, the Earls of Pembroke; it was designed by Hans Holbein and Inigo Jones, and is the most magnificent mansion in the county. At the beginning of the present century Mr. James Wyatt was employed to enlarge the building and adapt it for the better display of its rich stores of ancient sculpture and paintings, those, which united a more extensive and magnificent collection is scarcely to be met with in the possession of any individual. In this house Sir Philip Sidney composed his "Arcadia;" his sister Mary, the celebrated Countess of Pembroke, being the wife of the Earl.

An inland county, bounded on the north by Gloucestershire; on the east by Berkshire and Hampshire; on the south by Dorsetshire; and on the west by Somersetshire and Gloucestershire. Its boundaries are almost every where artificial, and its outline forms an oblong figure, with some windings on the borders. When the Romans invaded Britain, this part of the island appears to have been inhabited by the Belgæ, a powerful people, who had emigrated from the continent at a later period than most of the other British tribes; and having extirpated or reduced to subjection the earlier settlers, they made themselves masters of the country, at least as far north as the barrier called Wansdike. Under the Romans this county was included in the province of Britannia Prima. Within its boundaries were some important stations of that people; it was intersected by some of their great roads; and many remains of antiquity, as tessellated pavements, inscribed stones, urns, and coins, have been discovered in various places. Among the ancient roads may be mentioned the Fosseway, which enters the county on the north, near Cirencester, and passes in a south-west direction, by Malmsbury, to Bath; Julia Strata, which crosses the northern part of the county from east to west, and on the line of this road were the stations of Verlucio (Highfield, near Hedington), and Cunetio (Folly Farm, eastward of Marlborough); and across the southern part of the county extended a branch of the Ridgeway, passing from Tidworth to the important station of Sorbiodunum (Old Sarum), and thence by Stratford into Dorsetshire. Tessellated pavements, of Roman design, have been discovered at Littlecote, on the confines of Berkshire, on the banks of the Willey, near Warminster, and elsewhere. During the Saxon heptarchy this county was included in the kingdom of Wessex, and within its limits several battles were fought between the ancient British inhabitants and the Saxon invaders. In 554 Cynric, King of Wessex, defeated the Britons, and captured Sorbiodunum; in 558 that prince gained another victory at Barbury, northward of Marlborough; and in the latter part of the same century Ceaulin, a successor of Cynric, was defeated at Wanborough, on the Wansdike, by an army of Britons and Saxons, headed by his nephew Ceolric, who thus gained possession of the west Saxon kingdom. During the intestine disputes of the Anglo-Saxons among themselves, Wiltshire again became the seat of warfare. In the seventh century a contest for power occurred between the kings of Wessex and Mercia, and a sanguinary engagement took place at Great Bedwin. Hostilities were continued till the reign of Ina, who, in 715, fought a battle with the Mercians, who had invaded his dominions, and he appears to have gained some advantage over them, though there was great slaughter on both sides. In 823 Egbert, King of Wessex, gained a victory over the Mercians at Wilton, which contributed to his subsequent superiority over all the kingdoms of the heptarchy. In the course of the invasions of South Britain by the Danes, several engagements took place in Wiltshire. King Alfred was defeated, after a severely contested battle, by the Danes, at Wilton, in 871; and his famous victory over these invaders in 878 is stated, by ancient historians, to have been achieved at Ethandune, the situation of which place has been the subject of various conjectures, and different antiquaries have supposed it to have been Edington, north-east of Westbury, Hedington, near Bromham, or Yatton Keynell, near Chippenham, though others have assigned its site to Berkshire; and some reasons have been advanced, in a preceding article, for concluding that this great battle was fought in Gloucestershire. (See Minchinhampton.) In 1003 Sweyn, King of Denmark, ravaged the southern part of this county, and plundered and destroyed the towns of Wilton and Sarum; in 1006 the men of Wiltshire were defeated by the Danes, on the banks of the river Kennet; and in 1017 Edmund Ironside vanquished the Danes on the south-western borders of the county, and subsequently defeated their king, Canute, at Sherston, westward of Salisbury. In the reign of Stephen several military transactions occurred in Wiltshire; in 1139 the king, after a contest with the partisans of Roger, Bishop of Sarum, gained possession of the castles of Sarum, Devizes, and Salisbury, which fortresses were subsequently garrisoned for the king, and became the objects of contest in his wars with the Empress Matilda and her son, Henry; the latter of whom, in 1152, having landed in England to assert his claim to the crown, besieged and took the town and castle of Salisbury. During the civil war under Charles II., Wardour Castle, near Hindon, which had been garrisoned by the royalists, was taken by the parliamentarians, in May, 1643; and in the same year Sir William Waller made himself master of another royal garrison at Salisbury. At Lansdowne, near Bath, the royalists were also defeated, but they subsequently gained a complete victory at Roundaway Hill, near Devizes. The latter town was captured by Oliver Cromwell in 1645; and Salisbury was taken a second time by the parliamentary forces, under Colonel Massie. The latest military event of any importance connected with this county was the abortive insurrection of the royalists at Salisbury, in 1655, under Wyndham and Penruddock, which proved so fatal to the projectors.

This county consists of two grand divisions, from their relative position designated North Wiltshire and South Wiltshire, which are separated by the Kennet and the Lower Avon, and the canal which unites those rivers. North Wiltshire consists principally of a fertile district, with an undulating surface, extending from the base of the Cotswold Hills on the north, to the border of Salisbury Plain. This tract, formerly covered with forests, and at present sprinkled with woods, affords abundance of rich pasture for cattle, kept chiefly for the dairy. The soil here is various; towards the north-western border it consists of an irregular mass of loose gravel, sand, and limestone, provincially called corngrate, with a subsoil, termed stonebrash, composed of a reddish calcareous loam, intermingled with flat stones. The soil becomes deeper and more fertile towards the south; and from Melksham to Cricklade extends a stratum of gravel, covered with deep rich loam, forming a soil of extraordinary fertility, some of the grass-land on the banks of the Lower Avon, at Somerford and Danntsey, rivalling in produce the famous meadow at Orcheston St. Mary, northward of Salisbury. There is a small tract between Salisbury and Cricklade, called Bradon forest, which, unlike the surrounding country, is remarkably unproductive, the soil being a cold iron-clay. Though a great part of the land in North Wiltshire is appropriated to the dairy, and feeding cattle for the table, much also is under tillage. The chief crops are wheat, peas, and beans, turnips and vetches; potatoes are also extensively cultivated. The dairies are famous for the produce of cheese, which was for many years sold in the London market under the name of Gloucestershire cheese, which it resembles in quality, but its excellence having become generally acknowledged, it is now regularly sold under the designation of North Wiltshire cheese. The greater part of South Wiltshire is included in the district called Salisbury Plain, the general character and productions of which have been noticed in a separate article. The elevation of the country relatively to the surrounding parts of the kingdom appears from the fact that it gives rise to several considerable rivers. Near the northern border rise some of the streams which unite to form the Thames. In the same district are the sources of the Lower Avon, which, after their junction at Salisbury, pass southward by Chippenham and Melksham to near Bradford, then turning westward, the river leaving this county, goes on to Bath and Bristol. The Kennet, from different sources on Marlborough Downs, runs eastward by Marlborough, Ramsbury, and Chilton, into Berkshire. The Upper Avon has its source among the hills eastward of Devizes, and it takes its course to the south, by Uphaven and Amesbury to Salisbury, where it receives the united stream of the Wily and the Nadder, and afterwards the Bourne; after which, it passes onward by Downton into Hampshire. The Wily rises at the base of Clay Hill, near Warminster, and passes by Heytesbury and Wilton, to its confluence with the Nadder. This county anciently contained the royal forests of Bradon, Blackmore or Melksham, Pewsham or Chippenham, Savernake, Pannshill, and Melshett; all which have been disafforested or alienated from the crown. The only forest remaining in the state of woodland is that of Lavernake, south-east of Marlborough, about sixteen miles in circuit, now the property of the Earl of Aylesbury. The ancient forest of Pannshill or Clarendon, near Salisbury, in which was formerly a royal palace, is now known as Clarendon Park, the seat of Sir F. H. Bathurst. Cranbourn Chase, on the southern border of the county, was formerly appropriated as a forest, under a ranger appointed by Lord Rivers, as lord of the chase; but his lordship has recently commuted his feudal privileges for pecuniary rents. Vernditch Chase, the property of the Earl of Pembroke, adjoining the preceding, is now chiefly in a state of cultivation. Grovely Wood or Forest, situated north-west of Wilton, likewise belongs to Lord Pembroke. There are no mineral productions in this county deserving of particular notice, except freestone, of which a fine variety, used for building, is found in immense masses at Chilmark, eastward of Hindon, at Box, near Bath, and in other places. Fossil shells and other supposed antediluvian remains have been found embedded in blue clay, in the neighbourhood of Wootton-Basset, Malmsbury, and Grittleton. Wiltshire was formerly one of the principal seats of the woollen-manufacture in its various branches. Trowbridge was the centre of the district, in which vast quantities were made of superfine broad cloth and kerseymeres, but these fabrics have been rivalled in Yorkshire, and the trade here has consequently declined. The flannel and fancy woollen goods, for which Salisbury was once famed, are now made, but in small quantities; but the city is still noted for its cutlery. At Wilton the manufactures of kerseymeres, linsey-woolsey, and especially carpets, are carried on to a great extent. At Mere and in the neighbourhood are made dowlas, bed-ticking, and other linen goods; and at Aldbourne cotton articles are manufactured. This county is famous for its malt liquor, provincially termed "strong beer," considerable quantities of which are sold in London under the name of Kennet or Devizes ale. The hundreds in this county are those of Malmsbury, Chippenham, Bradford, Melksham, Calne, Potterne and Cannings, Highworth, Crielade and Staple, Kingsbridge, Elstub, and Everley, North Damerham, Ramsbury, Selkley, Kinwardstone, Whorwelsdown, Westbury, Swanborough, South Damerham, Warminster, Heytesbury, Amesbury, Mere, Downton, Chalk, Dunworth, Branch and Dole, Cawden and Cadworth, Underditch, Alderbury, and Frustfield. This county contains the city of Salisbury; the boroughs of Great Bedwin, Calne, Chippenham, Crielade, Devizes, Downton, Heytesbury, Hindon, Ludgershall, Malmsbury, Marlborough, Old Sarum, Westbury, Wilton, the county-town, and Wootton-Basset, all which are likewise market-towns, except Downton, Heytesbury, Ludgershall, and Old Sarum; and the other market-towns are Amesbury, Bradford, Highworth, Market Lavington, Melksham, Mere, Swindon, Trowbridge, and Warminster. Two members are returned to Parliament for the county, two for the city of Salisbury, and two for each of the fifteen boroughs. This county gives the title of Earl to the Marquis of Winchester.

WIMBUSH, co. Essex.

P. T. Saffron Walden (42) 4 m. ESE.
Pop. with Thunderley 809.

A parish in the hundred of Uttlesford; living, a rectory and vicarage with that of Thunderley, in the archdeaconry of Middlesex and diocese of Lincoln; the former a sinecure, valued in K. B. 12*l.*, the latter 8*l.*; church ded. to All Saints; patron (1829) the Rev. John Dolingnon. Here is a small endowment for the benefit of the poor children.

WIMBLEDON, co. Surrey.

London 9 m. SW. Pop. 2195. Fairs, Easter-Mond. and two following days.

A parish in the hundred of Brixton; living, a rectory, and a peculiar of the Dean and Chapter of Worcester; valued in K. B. 35*l.* 2*s.* 11*d.*; ann. val. 150*l.*; patrons the Dean and chapter of Worcester. The church, ded. to St. Mary, was rebuilt in 1787; in one of the windows are the arms, in painted glass, of the Dorset, Leeds, and Salisbury families. Here are also places of worship for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists, and a national school, supported by contributions; the school-house and land adjoining were given by John, Earl Spencer, in 1773. The poor children have, besides the advantage of a rent-charge of more than 20*l.*, left, in 1650, by Dorothy Ceel, daughter of Edward, Lord Wimbledon. Many of the inhabitants are employed in calico-printing and japan-works, the mills of the English Copper Company, &c. In this parish is Wimbledon Park, comprising 1200 acres, and on Wimbledon Common are many handsome residences. The battle between Ceawlin, King of the West Saxons and Ethelbert, King of Kent, in 568, was fought here. A circular encampment is very evident. In the immediate vicinity is a well, the water of which has never been known to freeze. In this parish for many years resided the celebrated John Horne Tooke, author of "The Diversions of Purley;" here also he died March 19, 1811, in his seventy-seventh year.

WIMBLINGTON, co. Cambridge.

P. T. March (83) 4 m. S. Pop. 859.

A hamlet in the parish of Doddington, and hundred of Witchford, Isle of Ely. Here are a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists, and an endowed school for forty children.

B. 12l. 13s. 4d.; church ded. to St. Mary; patron (1829) the Earl of Shaftesbury, who has a seat here. Here are almshouses for eleven people, founded and endowed in 1624, by Sir Anthony Ashley, Bart.

WIMBORNE MINSTER, co Dorset.

London 100 m. SW b W. Pop. 3563. M. D. Frid. Fairs, Frid. bef. Good Frid.; Sept. 14, and every other Mond. for bullocks and cheese.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Bradbury, Shaston division; situated near the confluence of the rivers Stour and Allen; the latter branches off into two streams, over each of which is a bridge. It is a place of great antiquity, and was formerly in much ecclesiastical repute; it was possessed by the Romans, and by them called Vindogladia, signifying a place near two rivers, and afterwards called Vinburnan by the Saxons, from which the present name is obviously derived; the distinguishing appellation of Minster is obtained from the monastery which long existed here. The living is a rectory, and a royal peculiar; patron (1829) the Earl of Shaftesbury. The church was ded. to St. Cuthburga, from the foundress of the ancient monastery, who was buried here, and who was the sister of Ina, King of the West Saxons; she was divorced from her husband, Egfrid, in order to give up herself to religious duties; it was formerly a collegiate, and until within the last few years, had the cathedral service performed on Saturday, and all holydays; the style of architecture is the Saxon of an early date; it is built in the form of a cross, and consists of a chancel, nave, choir, a cross, and side aisles, transept, three porches, and two quadrangular towers; one at the west end, the other at the intersection of the cross; the latter is said to have been surmounted by a spire as high as that of Salisbury cathedral; it was struck down by lightning at the commencement of the seventeenth century. King Ethelred, the Duke and Duchess of Somerset, the grandfather and mother to Henry VII., and branches of many other ancient families, were interred within this edifice; of the tomb of the first-mentioned the brass plate, with inscription, is all that remains. The duties of the church are now performed by three ministers, who attend in turn, elected by the corporation. The Independent and Wesleyan Methodists, and Baptists, have also places of worship in this town. A free grammar-school, originally founded by the Countess of Richmond, mother of Henry VII., in 1497, was in 1563 refounded by Elizabeth, and called by her name; it is open to all who apply without distinction, and under the management of twelve governors. Here are two small hospitals founded, for poor aged persons; that called Courtenay's, by the Marchioness of Exeter, in the middle of the fifteenth century; the other, called St. Margaret's, is very ancient, but its founder is unknown; the governor and inmates of the former are incorporated, and have a common seal. A visitation court, annually, and the petty sessions for the Wimborne division of the hundred are holden here. Roman coins, and other antiquities have been discovered here. Wimborne Minster is said to be the birth-place of Matthew Prior, the poet and statesman, who was educated in the grammar-school.

WIMBOTSHAM, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Downham Market (84) 1½ m. NNE. Pop. 413.

A parish in the hundred of Clackclose; living, a dis. rectory with the vicarage of Stow Bardolph, in the archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 5l. 6s. 8d.; church ded. to St. Mary; patron (1829) Mrs. Moor.

WIMESWOULD, co. Leicester.

P. T. Loughborough (109) 5 m. NE b E. Pop. 1061.

A parish in the hundred of East Goscote; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Leicester and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 9l.; church ded. to St. Mary; patron, Trinity College, Cambridge. Here is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists; also an endowed school, in which ten boys are instructed.

WIMPOLE, co. Cambridge.

P. T. Caxton (49) $4\frac{1}{2}$ m. SE b E. Pop. 493.

A parish in the hundred of Wetherly; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Ely; valued in K. B. 18*l.*; patron (1829) the Earl of Hardwicke, who has a noble mansion here. The church, which is dedicated to St. Andrew, contains many handsome monuments. Here is a charity-school for thirty children.

WINCANTON, or WINCAUNTON, co. Somerset.

London 103 m. W b S. Pop. 2143. M. D. Wed. Fairs, Easter-Tues. and Sept. 29.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Norton Ferris. It is a place of great antiquity, and was anciently called Wyndcaleton. The town is delightfully situated on the western declivity of a hill, which is well cultivated and shaded with wood; it is watered by the river Cale, from which it derived its original name; it consists principally of four regular streets, and contains some well-built houses. At the west end of the town, on the road to Castle Cary, is a handsome stone bridge over the Cale, built and supported at the expense of the county. In 1747 Wincanton suffered severely from an accidental fire, to which calamity its regular and uniform appearance may be attributed. The environs, which contain several gentlemen's seats, abound with interesting scenery; and on the south is an extensive and uninterrupted view of the fine Vale of Blackmore. The inhabitants are engaged in the manufacture of linen and bed-ticking, which was formerly carried on to a considerable extent, but has greatly declined of late years; a branch of the silk trade has recently been introduced. The market is well supplied with corn, cattle, butter, and cheese; great quantities of the latter are brought to the neighbouring villages, and sold to dealers in London. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, and is divided into two parts, called the borough and the tithing; two constables for the former, and a tithing-man for the latter, are annually chosen at the manorial court; a court-leet for the hundred is also held annually. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Wells and diocese of Bath and Wells; certified value 30*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 76*l.* to 78*l.*; patrons (1829) U. and G. Messiter, Esqrs. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a spacious structure, consisting of a nave, aisles, and chancel, with a square embattled tower at the west end. Here is a place of worship for Independents; also various charitable bequests for the benefit of the poor. This town is rendered remarkable for being the place where the first blood was shed during the revolution in 1688; the Prince of Orange, shortly after his landing at Torbay, having here attacked a party of the king's dragoons, and put many of them to the sword. An urn, containing several Roman coins and many other relics of antiquity, have been discovered here.

WINCEBY, co. Lincoln.

P. T. Horncastle (136) 4 m. E b S. Pop. 78.

A parish in the hundred of Hill, parts of Lindsey; living, a dis. rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 6*l.* 0*s.* 2*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 129*l.* 9*s.*; church ded. to St. Margaret; patron, the Lord Chancellor. During the civil wars a battle was fought here, in which the king's troops were defeated.

WINCH, EAST, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Lynn (96) 6 m. SE b E. Pop. 376.

A parish in Lynn division of the hundred of Freebridge; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 8*l.*; church ded. to All Saints; patron (1829) Edmund Kent, sen., Esq.

WINCH, WEST, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Lynn (96) 3 m. S. Pop. 315.

A parish in Lynn division of the hundred of Freebridge; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 9*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; church ded. to St. Mary; patron, the Lord Chancellor.

WINCHAM, or WINSHAM, co. Pal. of Chester.

P. T. Northwich (173) 2 m. NE b E. Pop. 491.

A township in the parish of Great Budworth and east division of the hundred of Bucklow.

WINCHCOMBE, or WINCHELCOMBE, co. Gloucester.

London 99 m. WNW. Pop. 2240. M. D. Sat. Fairs, last Sat. in March; May 6; and July 28; for horses, sheep, and horned cattle.

A market-town and parish in the lower division of the hundred of Kiftsgate. It is situated in a beautiful vale at the base of the Cotswold Hills, by which it is nearly surrounded, leaving the little river Isbourne flowing near it on the south and east. The town consists principally of three streets, extending in a line from east to west, with others branching from them; the houses are in general low, and of stone. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of paper and silk, for the former of which there are two large mills, and one for the latter; there is also a tan-yard on a moderate scale; cotton stockings and pins are also manufactured; and the parochial poor are employed in agricultural operations and the spinning of linen and woollen. Until the reign of Charles I. this place was noted for the cultivation of tobacco, which is said to have been first planted here after its introduction into the kingdom, in 1583. This town, which is of great antiquity, was anciently surrounded by a wall, and previously to the time of Canute was, with a small surrounding district, a county of itself; but in the reign of that monarch Edric, who governed under him as viceroy, divested it of its independence, and annexed it to the county of Gloucester. In the reign of Edward the Confessor the town was made a borough, and the government was vested in two bailiffs and twelve burgesses; the former have till lately been annually chosen by the lord of the manor, but exercise no jurisdiction, the charter having for many years ceased to be acted upon. The living is a dis. vicarage with the curacies of Greet and Gretton, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Gloucester; certified value 18*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 61*l.* 11*s.* 10*d.*; patron (1829) Lord Rivers. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter, is a spacious and handsome Gothic structure, consisting of a nave, aisles, and chancel, with a lofty square embattled tower, crowned with pinnacles; the nave is separated from the aisles by octagonal pillars and compressed arches, and from the chancel by an ancient carved oak screen. Here are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school, which was founded and endowed by Henry VIII., in 1522, has been incorporated with a grammar-school, subsequently founded by Lady Frances Chandos; and about thirty-four boys are educated. Here are also an endowed school for teaching children to read, and almshouses for six poor families, besides various charitable bequests for the distribution of bread, clothing, and money to the poor. A mitred abbey, for 300 monks of the Benedictine order, was founded in 1798, by Cenulph, King of Mercia, who is said to have had a palace here; the spot chosen for the abbey had been previously occupied by a nunnery, founded by King Offa, in 787. The abbey, with all its buildings, which are said to have been extremely magnificent, were totally destroyed very soon after the dissolution. Near the church, on a spot now called Ivy Castle, was an ancient castle or fortress, but when or by whom it was erected is unknown. About half a mile from the town are the beautiful remains of the magnificent Castle of Sudeley, formerly belonging to the Botelers, lords of Sudeley. Winchcombe gave birth to Dr. Christopher Mercet, an eminent naturalist and philosopher, who was born in 1614.

WINCHELSEA, co. Sussex.

London 61 m. SE. Pop. 817. M. D. Sat., nearly disused. Fair, May 14, for cattle and pedlery. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of Guestling, rape of Hastings, but having separate jurisdiction. The ancient town of this name, situated near the Camber point, was a place of considerable importance in the time of the Romans, but was entirely swallowed up by the sea about the close of the thirteenth century. The present town, which is situated at the distance of a mile and a half from the sea, was built upon an eminence in order to prevent a similar accident, by Edward I., by whose munificence it was surrounded by walls and defended by three strong gates, which formed the principal entrances, and are still in good preservation. The town occupies a space nearly two miles in circumference, divided into squares by streets intersecting each other at right angles. In the reign of Henry III. Winchelsea and Rye were annexed to the cinque-ports, but more as appendages than equal ports, being members of the port of Hastings. The new town was invested with the same privileges as the old, and enjoying all the benefits of the cinque-ports, soon rose to considerable commercial consequence. In the reign of Edward III. a great part of it was burnt by the French, and it was afterwards plundered by the Spaniards in the reign of Richard II. It subsequently fell to decay from a circumstance the very reverse to that which had occasioned the destruction of the old town, the sea deserted its neighbourhood and left in its place a dreary marsh, by which its harbour was destroyed and its commercial importance annihilated. No trade or particular branch of manufacture is now carried on, and the market has nearly fallen into disuse. The government of the town is vested in a mayor and twelve jurats, who are justices of the peace within the ancient town and its liberties. This borough has sent members to Parliament ever since the forty-second of Edward III.; the right of election is vested in the freemen, about eleven in number; the mayor is the returning officer, and the influence of the Earl of Thanet is predominant. The living is a dis. rectory in the archdeaconry of Lewes and diocese of Chichester; valued in K. B. 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 130*l.*; patron (1829) Sir W. Ashburnham. The church, which is dedicated to St. Thomas the Apostle, is the only remaining portion of a very spacious and beautiful cruciform structure, the whole of which, except the chancel, is gone to decay; it contains several splendid monuments, one of which is hardly excelled by any in the kingdom; and three are remarkable as being the monuments of Knights Templars, cross-legged and in armour. Anciently there were two other churches, dedicated to St. Leonard and St. Giles. Here is a place of worship for Wesleyan Methodists. The remains of antiquity still in existence are, the ruins of Camber Castle, erected by Henry VIII., a circular fortress with a round tower which was the keep, the ancient gates of the town, and the interesting ruins of a monastery of gray friars, founded by Edward II. Winchelsea gives title of Earl to the Finch family.

WINCHESTER, co. Southampton.

London 62 m. SW b W. Pop. 7739. M. D. Wed. and Sat., the latter for corn. Fairs, 1st Mon. in Lent, for bacon, cheese, leather, and horses; Aug. 2 and Sept. 12, for cheese; and Oct. 24, for leather, horses, bullocks, and sheep. Memb. of Pt. 2.

An ancient city, having a separate jurisdiction, but situated in the hundred of Buddlegate, division of Fawley. It occupies the eastern declivity of an eminence, at the base of which flows the river Itchen, which is navigable for barges to the sea. It appears to have been founded at a period of remote antiquity, and was called by the Britons Caer Gwent, or the White City, from its being built on a chalky soil, and the Romans adopting the appellation, with a distinguishing epithet, styled it Venta Belgarum; the Saxons gave it the name of Wintanceastre, now altered to Winchester. The erection of this place may reasonably be ascribed to the Celtic Britons, though the alleged date of its foundation, 892 B. C., is manifestly unworthy of attention. In the course of the first century, previous to the Christian era, this part of the island was invaded, and its original inhabitants were extirpated or reduced to slavery, by a powerful tribe of emigrants from Belgic Gaul, who made this place their metropolis, and extended their dominion over nearly the whole territory southward of the Thames, which they held till they were in turn conquered by the Romans, in the reign of the Emperor Claudius. It became one of the principal Roman stations, and fortifications were raised here about A. D. 50, by the proprietor, Ostorius Scapula, traces of which still remain in various places. Two Roman temples are said to have existed here, one dedicated to Apollo, or the Sun, and the other to the Goddess of Concord, near the site of the present cathedral church. Near the city have been discovered sepulchral urns, coins, and other Roman antiquities. It seems probable that after the greater part of South Britain was subjected to the Romans, they still suffered some of the native chiefs to exercise a delegated authority and enjoy the regal title. Among these petty princes one of the most noted was Lucius, who lived in the second century, and is supposed by some antiquaries to have been the third in descent from the celebrated Caradoc, or Caractacus, and to have reigned at Winchester. He is said not only to have introduced Christianity into Britain, but likewise to have founded an episcopal see, and to have erected a cathedral church in this city, which was destroyed during the time of the Dioclesian persecution. The imperial usurpers Carausius and Alectus, are said to have made this place the seat of their government, and here considerable quantities of their coins have been discovered. At a subsequent period the British prince Vortigern also made Winchester his metropolis; and after the conquest of this part of the island by Cerdric and his successors, it became the capital of the kingdom of the West Saxons, which pre-eminence it probably retained till the reign of Athelstan, in the tenth century. And though London has long since superseded it as the metropolis of the kingdom, a memorial of its ancient superiority remains in the national denomination of measures of quantity, as Winchester ells and Winchester quarts, the use of which has but recently been replaced by imperial measures. During the invasions of England by the Danes, Winchester was repeatedly the scene of their ravages; the place was plundered and burnt by them in the reign of Ethelbald in 862; and here is said to have commenced the horrible and disgraceful massacre of the Danes, by order of the dastardly Ethelred II. in 1002. After the Norman conquest, Winchester was frequently the residence of the sovereign, hence were issued several of the laws and ordinances of William I., and here took place the coronation of William Rufus. Soon after this period this city appears to have attained the highest importance: it had a royal mint, treasury, and public record-office, and likewise a grand palace, and a strong castle erected by William I., besides another belonging to the bishop. In the reign of Stephen it was the scene of hostilities between his partisans and those of the Empress Matilda, in the cause of which the city suffered greatly, and nearly half its buildings are said to have been destroyed. King John held a parliament or great council at Winchester, in 1203, and in 1206 he kept his court here at Christmas; and this was the birthplace of Henry his son, hence called Henry of Winchester, afterwards Henry III. Parliaments were held here in 1371, 1392, and 1449, and in the castle of Winchester Henry the VII. and his queen resided at the period of the birth of their son prince Arthur. In 1522 Henry VIII. entertained at Winchester his imperial guest, Charles V., when the famous Round Table, commemorating King Arthur and his knights, was newly painted, and an inscription was placed on it, commemorating the king's festival, which tablet is still preserved in the assize-hall. At the beginning of the civil war under Charles I., the parliamentary general, Sir William Waller, took possession of the castle, but towards the end of 1643 it was recaptured, and garrisoned by the royalists, who held it till after the battle of Naseby, when it was taken after a week's siege, and the fortress was demolished, as likewise were the bishop's castle of Wolvesey, and several churches and public buildings. On the site of the old castle the erection of a royal palace was commenced by Sir Christopher Wren, in 1683, and the principal floor consists of a noble range of apartments, but the death of Charles II. prevented the completion of the building, which during the long war with France, was occupied with military prisoners on parole, and has since been converted into barracks. This city was devastated by the plague in the years 941, 1348, and finally in 1668; and in the western suburbs has been erected an obelisk, with an inscription, recording those calamitous visitations. A charter of privileges was granted to the city by Henry II., in 1184, under which the heads of the corporation claim, by the tenure of grand sergentry, the superintendence of the royal kitchen and laundry, at the coronation of our sovereigns. Subsequent grants or conformations of charters were obtained at different periods previously to that of Queen Elizabeth, under which the government of the city is vested in a corporation, consisting of a mayor, a recorder, two bailiffs, six aldermen, and twenty-four common-councilmen, with a town-clerk, two coroners, and other officers. The mayor is elected annually in September, by the corporation at large, from a list of three persons prepared by the alderman and ex-mayors, the last mayor exercising the right of striking off from the list the name of one of the candidates previously to the election. The bailiffs are also chosen by the corporation. The mayor, the recorder, and the alderman, act as justices of the peace within the city and its liberties, and hold courts of session quarterly, for the trial of all except capital offences; and also a court of record twice a-week, for the recovery of debts of unlimited amount. Here is likewise an ancient court called the Cheyney court, for the decision of pleas of any extent, held weekly in the Cathedral Close, before a judge appointed by the Bishop of Winchester; and its jurisdiction extends throughout 100 parishes, tithings, and hamlets, in the county of Hants. Members have been returned to Parliament from this city ever since the reign of Edward I.; the right of election is vested in the mayor, recorder, aldermen, bailiffs, and corporation, thirty-four in number, and the mayor is the returning officer; the predominating influence belongs to the Duke of Buckingham and the Mildmay family. The election of members for the county takes place at Winchester, and here also are held the county assizes and quarter sessions. Winchester is the seat of a bishopric, which includes Hampshire and Surrey. Its original foundation has been dated in 636, after the conversion of the West Saxons to Christianity, by St. Birinus, who became the first bishop. In the reign of Ina, King of Wessex, this diocese was divided into two, Winchester remaining the seat of one of them, whilst the other was established at Sherborne. The cathedral establishment here was overturned by the Danes, and on its restoration it became an episcopal college of secular clerks; but Bishop Ethelwold, in 963, replaced them by a body of Benedictine monks. The monastic establishment was suppressed at the reformation, when its revenues amounted to 1507*l.* 17*s.* 2*d.*; but the chapter was refounded on a new model by Henry VIII. The bishopric is valued in K. B. at 2873*l.* 18*s.* 1*d.* The ecclesiastical officers, exclusive of the bishop, are a dean, twelve prebendaries, two archdeacons, a chancellor, the master of the hospital of St. Cross, the precentor of St. Mary Southampton, and the registrar, all whose benefices are in the patronage of the Bishop, except the deanery, which is in the patronage of the King; and there are six minor canonries in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter. The deanery is not in charge; the archdeaconry of Surrey is valued in K. B. at 91*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*, and the archdeaconry of Winchester at 67*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* The cathedral church, which is situated in an area near the middle of the city, was anciently dedicated to St. Peter, St. Paul, and St. Swithin, but in the reign of Henry VIII. it was re-dedicated to the Holy and Undivided Trinity. It is a cruciform edifice, of great extent and of massive architecture, in which the Norman style prevails, with a low square tower in the centre, the upper part of which is richly ornamented. The erection of this church was commenced by Walkelyn, the first Norman bishop, in 1079, though portions of the lower walls and foundations doubtless belonged to an anterior structure; it was afterwards enlarged by Bishop Edington, and was partly rebuilt by that distinguished prelate William of Wykeham, towards the close of the fourteenth century. As might be expected from the erection of different parts of this building at distant periods, it exhibits considerable diversities of style, but its magnitude and grandeur prevent the ill-effect which such incongruities of design might produce in a building of smaller dimensions. The transepts chiefly display the characteristics of Norman architecture, as also does the tower; the west front is a beautiful example of the decorated Gothic style, having a finely ornamented triple doorway; and in the interior of the nave the centre is divided from the aisles by ranges of clustered pillars, from which spring pointed arches, and the groined roof is embellished with rich tracery, exhibiting armorial bearings and devices: the choir, which in style resembles the nave, includes the lower area of the central tower, and it has a finely-groined ceiling. Here are the episcopal throne, the prebendal stalls, and the pulpit, which are handsomely adorned with tabernacle work. Over the altar is a fine painting of the Resurrection of Lazarus, and the floor in front of it displays a beautiful tessellated pavement. Behind the altar is a stone screen, with ornamented niches, in which were statues, destroyed during the civil war. The noble east window now displays only the relics of the stained glass with which it was anciently ornamented. In the south aisle of the choir is the sepulchral chapel of Bishop Richard Fox, richly and elaborately ornamented in the latest pointed style; and in the north aisle is Bishop Gardner's chapel, the design of which exhibits an incongruous mixture of the Grecian and Gothic styles. The Lady chapel, which was erected by Bishop Godfrey de Luey, who died in 1204, has a fine groined roof, and an eastern window ornamented with stained glass. Among the tombs and monuments may be mentioned the beautiful chapels of Cardinal Beaufort and Bishop Waynfleet, the tomb of William Rufus, in the centre of the choir, that of Bishop Peter Mews, and that of the Lord Treasurer of Weston, Earl of Portland, who died in the reign of Charles I. The ancient font of black marble is ornamented with sculpture descriptive of scenes in the life of St. Nicholas. The entire length of the cathedral from east to west is 545 feet, that of the Lady chapel being fifty-four feet; the breadth of the nave and aisles is eighty-seven feet, that of the choir forty feet, the length of the transept from north to south is 186 feet, the height of the nave is seventy-six feet, and that of the central tower 138 feet. The prior's hall, and other portions of the conventual buildings, now form the deanery, and the refectory and two kitchens are still remaining. The city and soke of Winchester comprehend the parishes of St. Bartholomew, St. Laurence, St. Mary Calendre, St. Maurice, St. Peter Colebrook, St. Thomas, St. Faith, St. John, St. Michael, St. Peter Chishill, and St. Swithin, all in the arch-deaconry and diocese of Winchester. The living of St. Bartholomew is a vicarage; valued in K. B. 10*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 70*l.*, and in the patronage of the crown; that of St. Laurence is a rectory, valued in K. B. 6*l.* 5*s.*; ann. val. P. R. 28*l.* 9*s.* 2*d.*, and in the patronage of the Crown; that of St. Maurice is a rectory, valued in K. B. 6*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*, and united with those of St. Mary Calendre, valued in K. B. 7*l.*; St. Peter Colebrook, valued in K. B. 3*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*; St. George, valued in K. B. 3*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.*; and St. Mary Wood, valued in K. B. 2*l.*; the ann. val. of the united benefice in P. R. being 104*l.*; and in the patronage of the Bishop; the living of St. Thomas is a rectory, with that of St. Clement; valued in K. B. 13*l.* 17*s.* 8½*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 110*l.*; and in the patronage of the Bishop: that of St. Faith is a sinecure rectory, annexed to the mastership of St. Cross; that of St. John is a parochial chapelry, valued in P. R. 55*l.*; and in the patronage of the Crown: that of St. Michael is a rectory, valued in K. B. 5*l.* 17*s.* 11*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 135*l.*; and in the patronage of the Bishop: that of St. Peter Chishill is a rectory, valued in K. B. 14*l.* 9*s.* 9½*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 75*l.*; and in the patronage of the Crown: that of St. Swithin is a vicarage, valued in K. B. 6*l.* 6*s.* 10½*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 30*l.*; and in the patronage of the Crown. The church of St. Maurice is an ancient structure, with a low massive tower, and was anciently the chapel of a priory; that of St. Michael is a handsome modern edifice in the later pointed style, with an ancient tower; and that of St. Swithin, which belonged to the old priory of St. Swithin, is situated over a postern gate called the King's Gate. There are places of worship in this city for the Independents, the Baptists, and the Wesleyan Methodists; and likewise a Roman Catholic chapel, the latter of which was erected in 1792, in the pointed style of architecture, from the design of Mr. Carter; it is richly ornamented with painted glass, and paintings on the walls in chiaro-seuro, and the altar-piece is a copy of the Transfiguration, from Raphael. Among the institutions of this city the most distinguished is the college founded by William of Wykeham. A grammar-school appears to have existed here at an early period, and on the site of it, in 1387, Wykeham erected the present noble college, and endowed it for a warden, ten secular priests, who are perpetual fellows, three priest chaplains, three clerks, sixteen choristers, a first and second master, and seventy scholars. The founder, who drew up a code of statutes for the government of this seminary, designed it as an appendage to New College, Oxford, which was also his foundation. The buildings comprise two large quadrangles, the entrance to which is under a noble gateway, ornamented with turrets and statues, and on the side of the first quadrangle, opposite to the entrance, is a second gateway, surmounted by a tower, and this leads to the inner quadrangle, in which are the schools and a long cloister, and enclosures for the diversions of the scholars: over the door of the schools is a statue of the founder; between the two courts or quadrangles is the chapel, which has a fine groined roof, and windows adorned with beautiful tracery and painted glass. There are a number of scholarships and exhibitions for those who do not obtain fellowships in the college, and there is also a superannuated fund, established by Dr. Cobden. Adjoining the college on the west is a spacious quadrangular building, forming a detached school for commoners, or young gentlemen not on the foundation, where they live in a collegiate manner under the immediate superintendence of the head master. Christ's Hospital was founded in 1586, by Peter Symonds, Esq., for the support of six single men and the education and support of four poor boys, with an endowment, at present, amounting to about 420*l.* a-year. There is also a charity-school for thirty boys, and another for fifty girls, supported by subscription; besides which there is a national school, for children of both sexes. St. John's House or Hospital, in the High Street, is said to have been originally founded by a bishop of Winchester, in the tenth century; it subsequently belonged to the Knights Templars, and after the suppression of their order in the reign of Edward II. it was refounded for the temporary support of sick and lame soldiers, and other necessitous persons, and it was placed under the superintendence of the corporation, who, after the dissolution of religious houses, obtained entire possession of it, and subsequently made use of the great hall for their public meetings. The old chapel of the hospital has been converted into a school-room, for the instruction of twenty-four boys, by a master who receives 22*l.* a-year, from property left in 1701, by William Over; and in another part of the hospital are almshouses for six poor widows, founded by Ralph Lamb in 1558. Near the cathedral is a college or almshouse, founded by Bishop Morley in 1672, for the residence and support of ten clergymen's widows. The county hospital or public infirmary, in Parchment Street, was founded in 1736, for the relief of sick and maimed persons belonging to the county. It is an extensive building, consisting of a centre and wings, and it has been recently enlarged, and is conveniently adapted for its intended purpose. The city consists of a spacious street, extending about half a mile from north to south, intersected at right angles by several smaller streets, of nearly an equal length. The buildings chiefly occupy the area within the ancient walls, which were built of flint, and strengthened by small towers, placed at short distances from each other. There were anciently four gates, but the west gate alone is now remaining, the others having been taken down, in consequence of an act of parliament for the improvement of the city, passed in 1770. A handsome stone bridge has been erected over the river Itchen, and some of the branches into which the stream is divided pass beneath the High Street. In the middle of the city is a beautiful cross, ornamented with tabernacle work and crocketed pinnacles, in the later pointed style of architecture, arranged in three stages, in the whole forty-three feet in height. It was built by the guild or fraternity of the Holy Cross, founded by Henry VI. Among the public buildings not already noticed, may be mentioned the theatre, in Gaol Street, a neat edifice, which is opened occasionally. The town-hall is a handsome building, erected in 1713, on the site of one of ancient date. In Gaol Street is the county gaol, and in High Street is the city bridewell. A subscription library has been established in this city; and there are cold, warm, and vapour baths, for the accommodation of the public. Races are held every year in July, about four miles northward from the city, when contests take place for a king's plate of 100 guineas, and other prizes. The trade of this city is quite inconsiderable, and the manufactures are almost all of a local description. Coal and other heavy articles are brought hither by a canal from Woodmill, about two miles above the Itchin ferry, near Southampton. Among the ancient religious institutions in this city and its vicinity, one of the most important is the hospital of

St. Cross, founded in 1132, by Henry de Blois, Bishop of Winchester, and brother to King Stephen, who bestowed on it a considerable endowment, which was afterwards much augmented by Cardinal Beaufort. At the reformation, its revenue amounted to 184*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*, and it having escaped the destruction in which religious houses in general were then involved, it still exists, as an establishment for the support of a master, a chaplain, a steward, and thirteen brethren. The buildings comprised two quadrangles, but the south side of one of them has been taken down. The church or chapel of St. Cross, in the inner court, is a cruciform building, exhibiting a mixture of the Norman and Gothic styles, and its most ancient portion is peculiarly interesting, from the traces it affords of some of the characteristic features of pointed architecture. Hyde Abbey was originally founded by Alfred the Great, as a monastery for canons regular, who being replaced by Benedictine monks, the latter removed their station to a spot without the north wall of the city; and the abbey, having been destroyed in the civil war between King Stephen and the Empress Matilda, was rebuilt with great magnificence in the reign of Henry II. The abbot was one of the mitred peers of parliament; and the revenues belonging to it, at its dissolution, amounted to 865*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* A new bridewell has been erected on the site of this monastery, and in digging the foundations, were discovered the tomb of Alfred the Great, and other sepulchral relics, the monks having removed the body of their founder from the original site of the abbey. The nunnery of St. Mary was founded by Alswitha, the wife of King Alfred, and at its dissolution its revenues were 179*l.* 7*s.* 2*d.*: no part of it is now standing. There were also before the reformation, colleges of canons or clerks, and convents of friars of the Franciscan, Dominican, Carmelite, and Augustin orders. Winchester gives the title of Marquis to the family of Paulet.

P. T. Kendal (262) 9 m. WNW. Pop. 1441.

A parish in Kendal ward, derives its name from the beautiful lake, anciently called Wynandermere, which is twelve miles long, about one broad, and forty fathoms deep. It is studded with many picturesque islands, the principal of which, called Bello, the property of Mr. Curwen, is richly wooded, and adorned with a beautiful circular mansion. In the centre of another, bearing the name of the lake, stood Holme House, which was besieged for the parliament by Colonel Briggs, who, on the siege of Carlisle being raised, was obliged to abandon it. On a smaller one, called Lady Holme, formerly stood a chapel, dedicated to the Virgin Mary. This beautiful and expansive lake is well stocked with a variety of fish, of which char are the most esteemed, and are taken in nets between the months of October and May, when they are potted and sent to different parts of the kingdom. On its margin are several good inns for the accommodation of visitors, at two of which, Low Wood and Ferry inns, grand regattas are held annually, about the beginning of September; these public spectacles are attended by most of the families of distinction, and terminate with balls, exhibitions of fireworks, &c. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Richmond and diocese of Chester; valued in K. B. 24*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*; patron (1829) the Rev. Sir R. Fleming, Bart. The church, which is dedicated to St. Martin, stands in the village of Bowness; it is an ancient edifice, with a square tower and a large and curiously-painted east window, which formerly belonged to Furness Abbey, and was placed here at the expense of the parishioners.

A market and borough town and parish, having a separate jurisdiction, but locally within the hundred of Ripplesmere. It was anciently called Windlesore, from the winding course of the river Thames, on the bank or shore of which it is situated. This place owes its importance and probably its origin to the royal castle or palace which has been the favourite residence of some of our most distinguished sovereigns, and the scene of grand tournaments during the ages of chivalry, and of various other festivities and national assemblies. When Domesday-book was compiled, the castle, then recently erected by William the Conqueror, belonged to the manor of Clewer, and it was probably within that parish of which Windsor was formerly a chapelry: it subsequently became the seat of an extensive honour. The Norman Conqueror kept the festival of Whitsuntide here in 1071; and the following year a synod was held at Windsor, in which the province of York was made subject to Canterbury. Henry I. enlarged Windsor Castle considerably, and built a chapel, where, in 1122, he celebrated his marriage with his second queen Adelais, of Lorrain. A parliament was held in this fortress under Henry II. in 1170, at which William the Lion, King of Scotland and his brother David attended as feudal barons of the realm. Additions were made to the fortifications by Henry III.; and during the war between that king and his nobles, in 1263, Prince Edward garrisoned the castle with foreign troops, who nearly destroyed the town, and ravaged the neighbouring country; but the same year the fortress was surrendered to the insurgent nobility. A grand tournament was held at Windsor Park July 9, in the sixth year of Edward I.; and that monarch and his son Edward II., frequently resided in the castle, which was the birth-place of several of their children, among whom the most celebrated was King Edward III.: hence called by historians Edward of Windsor. This prince showed his regard for the place of his nativity by the improvements he made in both the town and the castle, but especially the latter, which, with the exception of three towers at the west end of the lower ward, he caused to be rebuilt. Royal commissions were issued for appointing surveyors and impressing workmen for the execution of this great undertaking; and in 1356, William of Wykeham, then one of the king's chaplains, and afterwards Bishop of Winchester, was appointed clerk of the works, with ample powers, and a fee of one shilling a-day whilst at Windsor, and two shillings when he went elsewhere on business: his clerk had a salary of three shillings a-week. In 1359 the powers of the architect were augmented, and he was appointed keeper of the manors of Old and New Windsor. The following year 360 workmen were impressed for this service, some of whom having quitted their situations for others where they obtained higher wages, an ordinance was issued forbidding persons from employing them on pain of forfeiting all their goods and chattels, and directing that the fugitive workmen should be apprehended and sent to Newgate. Fresh orders were sent in 1362 to the sheriffs of several counties, to procure 302 masons and diggers of stone for the king's works; and in 1363, orders were given to impress glaziers. About 1373 the buildings appear to have been completed, comprising the king's palace, the great hall of St. George, the lodgings on the east and south sides of the upper ward, the round tower, the chapel of St. George, the canons' houses in the lower ward, and the whole circumference of the walls with the towers and gates. The castle continued to be the frequent residence of the successors of Edward III.; several of whom from time to time made various alterations in the buildings, and especially Henry VII.; and by order of Elizabeth was constructed the terrace-walk on the north side of the castle. On the occurrence of the civil war between Charles I. and the parliament, Windsor Castle was garrisoned by the troops of the latter; and Colonel Venn, subsequently one of the judges of the high court of justice, was appointed governor. Prince Rupert made an ineffectual attack on the castle in the autumn of 1642; but it remained in the possession of the parliament during the war, and in 1648 it became the prison of the misguided monarch. Charles II., on his restoration, finding that the castle had suffered much from violence and neglect, caused it to be well repaired and richly furnished; and he afterwards made it his usual summer residence. George III. frequented Windsor more than his immediate predecessors, and under his direction, and in great part from his privy purse, St. George's chapel was completely repaired, and the north front of the upper ward was partially restored to its original appearance. The long illness of the king interrupted the progress of the works of improvement, which were resumed and prosecuted on an extensive scale after the accession of George IV. In 1823 the alterations were commenced by pulling down two buildings, called Augusta Lodge, and Queen's Lodge, the latter of which had been erected by Sir William Chambers. In the spring of 1824 a parliamentary grant of 300,000*l.* was voted for the general improvement of the castle, and the execution of the undertaking was intrusted to Sir Geoffrey Wyatville. Subsequent grants have raised the sum appropriated for the buildings alone to 771,000*l.* The castle in its present state consists of two courts or wards, between which is the keep or round tower; the whole occupying about twelve acres of ground, and having batteries and bastions for defence. The upper ward consists of a spacious quadrangle, bounded on the west by the round tower, on the north by the royal apartments, St. George's hall, and the chapel; and on the east and south by the chambers appropriated for the officers of state. In the area of this ward is a bronze statue of Charles II. on horseback, executed by Steda, at the expense of Tobias Rustat, Esq., in 1680; the pedestal of which is ornamented with carving in basso-relievo by Grinling Gibbons. The keep, or central tower, is the lodging of the constable or governor of the fortress; and it is built in an amphitheatrical form, with an ascent by a flight of stone steps. Here is the guard-room, or armory, over the chimney of which are sculptured the star and garter, encompassed with daggers and pistols, symmetrically arranged. The lower ward, which is more extensive than the upper, is separated into two parts by St. George's chapel, which occupies its centre. The original foundation of this chapel may be ascribed to Henry I., but it was rebuilt by Henry III., and again by Edward III., and the present truly interesting and splendid pile was commenced by order of Edward IV. under the direction of Richard Beauchamp, Bishop of Salisbury; it was continued by Sir Reginald Bray, supposed to have been the architect of Henry the Seventh's chapel at Westminster, and was completed in the reign of Henry VIII., the beautiful roof of the choir having been executed in 1508; and the rood-loft and lantern were erected in 1516. This chapel was founded for a collegiate establishment, belonging to which are a dean, twelve canons, seven minor canons, and thirteen clerks, with various officers. It is an elegant cruciform structure, displaying the latest and most highly ornamental style of pointed architecture. The windows are decorated with stained glass, the great east window exhibiting a fine painting, designed by West, and executed by Jarvis and Forest; and over the altar is a representation of the Last Supper, painted by West, and reckoned among his finest productions. At the east end of the chapel is the royal tomb-house, a distinct building, commenced by Henry VII., carried on by Cardinal Wolsey, who designed it for his own sepulchre; and after it had been furnished as a Catholic chapel by order of James II. it was disused till 1800, when it was repaired and fitted up as a mausoleum for the royal family; and in it are interred George III. and George IV., besides several of their descendants. On the north side of the lower ward are the houses and apartments of the dean and canons of Windsor, and on the west side the houses of the poor knights of Windsor. The royal apartments are on the north side of the court, called the star building, from its exterior embellishment of the star and garter. The entrance is from the upper ward through a handsome vestibule, in which great alterations have been made by Sir

Jeffrey Wyatville. The principal rooms of this magnificent suite are the queen's guard-chamber, the queen's presence-chamber, the queen's audience-chamber, the ball-room, the queen's drawing-room, the queen's bed-chamber, the room of beauties, the queen's dressing-room, Queen Elizabeth's, or the picture-gallery, the king's bed-chamber, the king's drawing-room, the king's public dining-room, the king's audience-chamber, the king's presence-chamber, and the king's guard-room. The castle is situated on a high hill, commanding the Thames; and around it is a terrace, the declivity leading to which is faced with a rampart of free-stone, extending 1870 feet. Opposite the Long Walk is the entrance gateway, on the east side of which is the York Tower, and on the west side the Lancaster Tower, which was built in 1824, by Sir Jeffrey Wyatville. Immediately fronting this gateway is the principal entrance to the state apartments. Windsor was made a free borough by Edward I. in 1276, and from that period till 1314 it was also the county-town. The inhabitants obtained a charter from James I., and another from Charles II., which was surrendered in the following reign, but restored after the revolution in 1688. Under this last charter the corporation consists of a mayor, a high steward, two bailiffs, and twenty-eight burgesses, with a town-clerk and other officers. Thirteen of the burgesses are styled benchers, ten of whom have also the title of aldermen; and from these last the mayor is elected annually. The mayor and one of the aldermen are empowered to act as justices of the peace; and the former is coroner and clerk of the market. Courts of session are held quarterly, for the trial of all except capital offences; and there is a court for the recovery of debts under forty shillings. Members were first returned to Parliament for this borough the 30th of Edward I., but returns have been regularly made only since the 25th of Henry VI.; the elective franchise is vested in the inhabitants paying scot and lot, who have resided within the borough at least six months; and the mayor is the returning officer. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Salisbury; valued in K. B. 15l. 13s. 4d., and in P. R. 130l.; in the patronage of the Lord Chancellor. The church, which is dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a handsome edifice, in the later pointed style, with a lofty square tower at the west end, ornamented with battlements and turrets, with spires at the angles. The interior is elegantly fitted up, and adorned with carved woodwork; over the altar is an ancient painting of the Last Supper; and there are closets for the royal family. This building was erected in 1822, on the site of a former church, at the cost of 14,040l. Here are also places of worship for the Independents and Wesleyan Methodists. Near the church is a charity-school, for thirty-six boys and twenty-four girls, founded in 1705, and supported partly by permanent funds, and partly by subscription; besides a ladies' charity-school for girls, established in 1784; a national school, and an endowed Sunday-school. Among the charitable institutions also may be mentioned, Brotherton's hospital, for eight poor men and women, founded in 1503; Reeve's almshouses, founded in 1676; an hospital for invalid soldiers, erected through the patronage of George III. in 1784; the charity for lying-in women, established in 1801; and the royal general dispensary, in 1818. The town is pleasantly situated on rising ground, and it consists of six principal streets, and several of less importance, well paved, and lighted with gas. A handsome iron bridge of three arches, supported by granite piers, forms a communication across the Thames, between Windsor and Eton. Among the public buildings are the guildhall, a spacious edifice, erected in 1686; a neat theatre, built in 1815; and barracks for cavalry and infantry. Great improvements have taken place within a few years past, and a number of good buildings have been erected. The trade and manufactures are almost wholly such as are dependent on the wants of the inhabitants and the occasional residents; but Windsor is famous for its ale, much of which is sent for sale to the metropolis and other places. This town gives the title of Earl to the Marquis of Bute. Windsor Forest, situated to the south and west of the town, was formerly 120 miles in circumference, but at present its bounds are reduced to about fifty-six miles. The Great Park contains 3800 acres; and the Little Park, on the north and east sides of the castle, 500 acres.

WIRKSWORTH, co. Derby.

London 140 m. NW b N. Pop. 7315. M. D. Tues. Fairs, Shrove-Tues.; Easter-Tues.; May 12; July 8; Sep. 8; and third Tues. in Nov.; for horned cattle.

A market-town and parish in the wapentake of Wirksworth. It is a place of very great antiquity and is supposed to derive its name from the valuable lead-works in the neighbourhood, which appear to have been worked so early as the time of the Emperor Adrian, and subsequently by the Saxons on a very extensive scale. The town is situated in a low valley, nearly surrounded by hills at the southern extremity of the mining district. The inhabitants derive their chief support from the working of the lead-mines, but some of them are also employed in the manufacture of cotton; and in the immediate vicinity are three establishments in which common gingham are made, and others for the production of hosiery, hats, tape, silk, and for wool-combing. The mines and miners are governed by ancient customs; and all disputes and offences are determined at the Barmote courts, held twice a-year before the steward, in the moot-hall, a handsome stone building, erected in 1814 by the Hon. Charles Bathurst, late chancellor of the duchy. In this hall is deposited the ancient brass dish, the standard from which those used for measuring the ore are made, which must be brought to be corrected by it, at least twice a-year, by all the miners. The laws and regulations, by which these courts are governed, are very similar to those in force in the mining districts of the duchy of Cornwall; one remarkable custom is, that each person has the privilege of digging and searching for lead-ore in any part of the king's field, which, with a few exceptions, comprehends the whole wapentake: when a miner has discovered a new vein of ore, he has a right to work it and erect buildings necessary for that purpose, without making any compensation to the owner of the land. The town is governed by a constable and headborough, and a petty session is held weekly on Tuesday, by the county magistrates. Two courts-baron at Easter and Michaelmas, and a court-leet at Easter are held annually for the king's manor, by the lessee of the crown; and a court is also held for the rectorial manor, under the Dean of Lincoln, as impropiator. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Derby and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry; valued in K. B. 42*l.* 7*s.* 8½*d.*; patron, the Dean of Lincoln. The church, which is ded. to St. Mary, is a handsome Gothic structure, containing several ancient monuments; it consists of a nave, side aisles, transepts, and a chancel with a square tower, supported by four large pillars in the centre. The vicar is entitled by custom, to every fortieth dish (of fourteen pints) of lead-ore raised in the parish; but the quantity of late years has been very small. Here are places of worship for Baptists, and Independent and Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed by Anthony Gell, Esq., of Hopton, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth; and in common with those of Ashbourn and Chesterfield, is entitled, next after the founder's relatives, to two fellowships and two scholarships at St. John's college, Cambridge, founded by the Rev. James Beresford, vicar of this parish, who died in 1520. Almshouses for six poor men were also founded and endowed by A. Gell, Esq. In 1797 Elizabeth Bagshaw bequeathed 2000*l.* three per cent. consols for the benefit of the poor, the dividends of which are distributed in sums of 1*l.* each ; there are many other small bequests, producing together a considerable sum, which is annually given to the poor, for whose use a library has been recently established, which is supported by subscription. In the neighbourhood of the town a great number of Roman coins and other relics of antiquity have been discovered.

A market and seaport town of great antiquity, comprising the parishes of St. Mary and St. Peter, in the hundred of the same name, Isle of Ely. Its name is supposed to have been derived from Wise, the ancient name of the river Ouse, and bec the Saxon, signifying a situation near the confluence of two rivers. William the Conqueror erected a castle here, which in 1236 was destroyed by an inundation. Another structure was built on the same site some years after by Bishop Morton, and it became the episcopal palace of the bishops of Ely. In the reign of Elizabeth it was used for the confinement of state prisoners, and in the time of the Commonwealth was purchased by Thurloc, Oliver Cromwell's secretary. The town, consisting of several well-built streets, and a handsome circus erected in 1816, on the site of the ancient castle, is situated on the river Nene, which is crossed by a bridge. Here are also a theatre, assembly-room, a literary society, and two extensive libraries, besides every convenience for salt-water bathing. The trade of the port is very extensive, particularly in corn and butter, besides coals, timber, and wine ; and a considerable number of vessels, both British and foreign, are annually cleared from hence ; in connexion with the commerce of Wisbeach is a custom-house, a part of which is also used as a town-hall, a corn exchange, and a convenient quay, to which vessels come close alongside ; it has likewise the advantage of a canal communication with the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, and a vessel sails twice a-week for Peterborough and back. The town is governed by ten burgesses, chosen annually, according to a charter of incorporation, granted in the reign of Edward VI., for the management of property which belonged to a guild established in 1379. The charter was renewed by James I., and confirmed by Charles II. The burgesses do not exercise magisterial authority, but, from the isle being a royal franchise, assizes are held here annually, and quarter-sessions in this town and Ely, alternately, besides petty sessions, and a court of requests for the recovery of small debts. The livings are St. Peter's, a vicarage, valued in K. B. 26*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* ; and St. Mary's, a perpetual curacy subordinate to the former, not in charge ; both in the archdeaconry and diocese of Ely, and patronage of the Bishop of Ely. St. Peter's church is a large handsome structure, with a tower detached from the body, a portion bears the date 1586, but some parts of it of much greater antiquity ; the other church, in which there is nothing particularly remarkable, is situated two miles from the town. A chapel of ease has recently been erected, and endowed with property worth about 200*l.* a-year, by Dr. Jobson. Here are places of worship for Baptists, the Society of Friends, Presbyterians, Unitarians, and Independent and Wesleyan Methodists. The grammar-school, which is of very ancient foundation, is open to all who apply, residents in the town, and who receive a classical education. In 1628 Thomas Parke left a bequest of four fellowships, and four scholarships of 10*l.* each, at Peter House, Cambridge, and two scholarships at Magdalen College, at present of about 70*l.* a-year each. The poor of this parish have the further advantage of a school for girls, with an endowment, and a national school supported by voluntary contributions. A number of almshouses have been erected for the aged poor, at different periods, and in 1652 John Crane left a sum of money for lending to the poor without interest ; it has subsequently received an addition of 300*l.* Archbishop Herring was educated at Wisbeach grammar-school.

London 38 m. NE b E. Pop. 2578. M. D. 1
Tues. Fairs, Mond. before Whitsuntide;
Sept. 14; and Nov. 8; for toys.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Witham. It is said to have been built by Edward the Elder, or at least that part of it situated on Cheping Hill, round the church, which stands about half-a-mile north-west of the other part of the town. It was subsequently in the possession of the Knights Templars, who had a preceptory at Cressing, about three miles distant. The town is pleasantly situated near the confluence of a small stream called the Braine, with the river Blackwater, on the high-road to Colchester, and consists principally of one long street partly paved and lighted. The inhabitants derive their chief support from travellers. Petty sessions for the division are holden here by the county magistrates every Tuesday; and manorial courts are held occasionally, at which constables and other officers are appointed. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Colchester and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 22*l.* 0*s.* 7½*d.*; patron, the Bishop of London. The church, dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a neat edifice, containing many ancient monuments, and a large tomb to the memory of Judge Southcote and his lady. Here are places of worship for Baptists, Independents, the Society of Friends, and Roman Catholics. In 1719 Dr. Wharley, vicar of the parish, amongst other benefactions, bequeathed 100*l.* in support of an orthodox school for poor children. A national school for eighty-two boys and fifty-five girls, is partly supported by subscription, aided by a bequest. Here are also sixteen almshouses for twenty-four poor widows, founded at different periods. In the vicinity of the town are the remains of a circular camp, defended by a double vallum; from Roman coins, bricks, and other antiquities discovered here, this town is supposed by some to have been the Roman station Canonium of Antoninus.

WITNEY, co. Oxford.

London 65 m. WNW. Pop. 4784. M. D. Thurs. Fairs, Thurs. in Easter-week, for cattle; Thurs. aft. July 9 and 24; Thurs. following the 1st Sun. aft. Sept 8; Thurs. bef. Oct. 10; and Thurs. aft. Dec. 1, for cattle and cheese.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Bampton, pleasantly situated on the river Windrush, over which is a good stone bridge, erected in 1822. The town consists chiefly of two streets, the houses of which are of a neat and uniform character. The chief manufacture of Witney is in blankets, for the excellent quality of which it has long been distinguished. The manufacturers of this town and the district for twenty miles round were incorporated in the reign of Queen Anne. At that period they kept 150 looms at work, employed about 3000 persons, and used a thousand packs of wool weekly. The charter, however, no longer exists. Other woollen goods are made here, besides gloves, paper, malt, &c. For the convenience of the blanket-manufacturers, a hall was erected in 1721; and in the market-place is the town-hall, the lower part of which is used for the market. The government of the town is vested in two bailiffs, who, with two constables, are chosen at the annual court-leet; a court-baron is also held twice a-year by the Duke of Marlborough. It was formerly a borough, having been so constituted as early as the reign of Edward II, but was released from sending members to Parliament, in compliance with a petition from the inhabitants, in that of Edward III. The living is a rectory and vicarage, united in the reign of Charles I., in the archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford; valued in K. B. at 47*l.* 9*s.* 4½*d.*; 9*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*; patron, the Bishop of Winchester. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a handsome cruciform structure, from the centre of which rises a square tower, surmounted by a fine spire, and ornamented at each corner with a minaret; within are several old monuments, and a chastely sculptured piscina. Here are likewise places of worship for the Society of Friends and Independent and Wesleyan Methodists; a free grammar-school, founded and endowed in 1663, by Henry Box, for thirty scholars, who must be natives; a freeschool, founded and liberally endowed in 1723, by John Holloway, for clothing and apprenticing sons of journeymen-weavers of Witney and Hailey; a school, with a small endowment left by William Blake in 1693; and a national school, supported by subscription. The poor have also the advantage of almshouses for six blanket-weavers' widows, likewise founded and endowed by J. Holloway; the like number by Mr. Townsend, of London, erected in 1828, and the rent of six other houses, originally founded as almshouses, but since rebuilt and let, thus turning the charity to greater advantage. The manor of Witney was one of those given to the monastery of St. Swithin, Winchester, in the reign of Edward the Confessor, by Bishop Ailwyn, in gratitude for the deliverance of Queen Emma from the fiery ordeal.

WIVELISCOMBE, co. Somerset.

London 153 m. W b S. Pop. 2791. M. D. Tues. and Sat. Fairs, May 12, for oxen and other cattle; and Sept. 25, for sheep.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Kingsbury West. It is a place of considerable antiquity, but its origin and etymology cannot be traced with certainty; the latter is supposed to be derived from the Saxon willi, or vili, signifying many, and combe, a deep ravine. The town is situated on a gentle eminence, in an extensive valley, surrounded by lofty hills, which suddenly break into deep ravines; the houses are in general well built. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in a considerable woollen manufacture; the articles made consist chiefly of slave-clothing for the West India markets, swan-skins for the Newfoundland fishery, and blankets for the home trade. The town is under the superintendence of a bailiff and portreeve, with ale-tasters, and other officers, all of whom are annually appointed at a court-leet. The living is a vicarage and a peculiar in the diocese of Bath and Wells; valued in K. B. 27*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*; patron, the Prebendary of Wiveliscombe, in Wells cathedral. The church, which is dedicated to St. Andrew, is a very handsome structure, recently erected, at an expense of 6000*l.* Here is also a place of worship for Independent Methodists, and an infirmary, established in 1804. About a mile from the town are the remains of an ancient encampment, called the castle, it occupies an eminence, is of a circular form, and very perfect. Many Roman and Saxon coins and other antiquities have been discovered.

WIVELSFIELD, co. Sussex.

P. T. Cuckfield (37) 4 m. SE. Pop. 537.

A parish in the hundred of Street, rape of Lewes; living, a perpetual curacy in the archdeaconry of Lewes and diocese of Chichester; certified value 20*l.*; ann. val. P. P. T. Alcester (103) 2 m. S. Pop. 110.

A parish in the Stratford division of the hundred of Barlichway; living, a curacy subordinate to the rectory of Exhall, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Worcester, not in charge; chapel ded. to St. Milburgh; patronage with Exhall rectory.

WOBURN, or OLD WOBURN, co. Bedford.

London 41 m. NW b N. Pop. 1656. M. D. Frid. Fairs, Jan. 1, for horses, cattle, sheep, and hogs; March 23; July 13; and Sept. 25, for cattle.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Manshead, situated on the high-road from London to Leeds; the town consists of several broad and well-built streets, the houses in which are chiefly of a modern character, in consequence of two dreadful fires which destroyed the greater part of the dwellings in 1594 and 1724. The market-house, a convenient edifice, was built in 1787, by Francis, the fifth Duke of Bedford, but has been altered and greatly improved by his present Grace. Some of the inhabitants are employed in straw-plaiting and lace-making. A sheep-shearing feast is held annually, when prizes are distributed to those who produce the finest fleeces. Manorial courts are held occasionally, at which constables are appointed, and petty sessions for the hundred one day in every month by the county magistrates. The living is a perpetual curacy subordinate to the vicarage of Birchwood, exempt from visitation, in the diocese of Lincoln, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 135*l.* 5*s.*; patron (1829) The Duke of Bedford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, erected by Robert Hobbs, the last abbot of Woburn, is nearly covered with ivy; and detached from the building, is a quadrangular tower, about fifty feet high. Within is a curious monument to Sir Francis Stanton and family, comprising twelve figures in the attitude of prayer. The pulpit is very ancient, supposed to be coeval with the abbey, and richly ornamented with niches, pillars, and tracery. Here are also places of worship for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists, and a freeschool, founded by Francis, the fifth Duke of Bedford, in 1782, for an unlimited number of children of both sexes; the present number is about 150; the institution is supported by 50*l.* given annually by the Duke of Bedford and other voluntary contributions. In 1672 twelve almshouses were founded by John, Duke of Bedford, for twenty-four poor widows. This place is chiefly remarkable for having the seat of the Duke of Bedford in the neighbourhood, called Woburn Abbey; it was built in the middle of the last century, on the site of a Cistercian abbey, which was originally founded in 1145, and granted to the Russel family in the reign of Edward VI. On the removal of some of the old buildings, several stone coffins were discovered; and a body, with the flesh not decomposed, although it was supposed to have lain there for between two and three centuries. The building is quadrangular, containing some very splendid apartments, and a rare collection of portraits, and situated in a fine park, ten miles in circumference, well stocked with deer and game. Queen Elizabeth paid a visit here in 1572; and Charles I. slept at the abbey in 1645, although its occupant was at the time in the service of the parliament. At a short distance from the town is a small spring of a petrifying quality.

WOBURN, WEST, or BISHOPS, co. Buckingham.

P. T. Beaconsfield (23) 3 m. WSW.
Pop. 1831. Fairs, May 4 and Nov. 12, for horses, cattle, and sheep.

A parish (formerly a market-town) in the hundred of Desborough, pleasantly situated in a valley, through which runs the little river Wycombe, giving motion in its course through the vicinity to several corn and paper mills. A small manufacture of lace is carried on here. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 12*l.*; patron (1829) James Dupré, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Paul, is a large ancient building, with a nave, two aisles, and a substantial tower; it contains a curiously-carved font, and several monuments to branches of the Bertie and Wharton families. Here are also places of worship for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists, and a school on the Lancasterian system, supported by contributions. Woburn House, occupied by the lord of the manor, is built on the site of a mansion, for some time during the sixteenth century the residence of the Bishops of Lincoln. In an apartment adjoining the ancient structure, Thomas Chace, of Amesham, was in 1506 imprisoned by one of the bishops on account of his religious principles, and was at length strangled. In order to conceal the transaction, he was represented to have hanged himself, and was buried in a cross-road, in Norland Wood, between Woburn and Little Marlow.

WOKEFIELD, co. Berks.

P. T. Reading (38) 7 m. SW b S. Pop. 105.

A tithing in the parish of Stratfield Mortimer and hundred of Theale.

WOKING, co. Surrey.

P. T. Ripley (24) 2½ m. W b N. Pop. 1810.
Fair, Whit-Tues., for toys.

A parish in the hundred of the same name, situated on the river Wey, and formerly had a market, which is now discontinued. The Basingstoke Canal passes through the parish; and courts leet and baron are occasionally held here. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Surrey and diocese of Winchester; valued in K. B.

11*l.* 20*s.* 5*d.*; patron (1829) Earl Onslow. The church, which is ded. to St. Peter, contains some ancient brasses and monuments, and the windows exhibit fragments of stained glass. At the time of the Domesday survey the lordship, which is extensive, belonged to the royal demesne. The mansion was the occasional residence of Edward IV., Henry VII., and Henry VIII.; great part of the foundations are still to be seen, but no part of the superstructure is left, except the walls of the guard-room. On the west side of the river stands Sutton House, a fine specimen of the style of building which prevailed in the sixteenth century; it was built by Sir Richard Weston, about the year 1530, and was of a quadrangular form, enclosing an area eighty feet square, with a noble gateway, having lofty hexagonal turrets at the angles. A great portion of this magnificent structure was destroyed by fire, during a visit of Queen Elizabeth, and the remainder continued in a ruinous state till 1721, when it was repaired and beautified by the late John Weston, Esq.

WOKINGHAM, or OAKINGHAM, co. Berks and Wilts.

London 31 m. WSW. Pop. of Pa. 2310.
Of To. 1542. M. D. Taes. Fairs, April 23; June 11; Oct. 11; and Nov. 2; for horses and cattle.

A market town and parish partly in the hundred of Sonning, county of Berks, and partly in that of Amesbury, county of Wilts, but having separate jurisdiction. The town, which is situated within the limits of Windsor Forest, is of a triangular form, and consists of several streets meeting in a spacious central area, where stands the market-house, an ancient building, with a town-hall above. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of silk, gauze, and shoes, and in the malting and flour trades. The corporation consists of an alderman, seven burgesses, a high steward, recorder, and town-clerk. The alderman is annually elected from among the burgesses, on Wednesday in Easter-week, and becomes the chief magistrate for the year ensuing; the alderman, high steward, and recorder are justices of the peace with exclusive jurisdiction. The corporation holds half-yearly courts of session for minor offences; petty sessions for the division take place on the first and third Tuesdays in the month; and this being the only town in the forest, the forest courts were formerly held here, but are now discontinued. The living is a curacy and a peculiar of the Dean of Salisbury; of the certified value of 40*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 130*l.*; patron, the Dean of Salisbury. The church, which is ded. to All Saints, is an ancient and handsome structure. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, and Wesleyan Methodists. Thirty-four boys and twelve girls are instructed in the free-school. The Sunday-school, in which two hundred children of both sexes are taught, is conducted on the national system. Eight almshouses for sixteen poor men and women were founded and endowed by John West-end in 1451. About a mile from the town is an hospital, founded in 1665, by Henry Lucas, Esq., for sixteen poor pensioners and a master, under the direction of the Drapers Company; attached to the hospital is a chapel, with a residence for the minister, who is the perpetual curate of the parish. Archbishop Land bequeathed 60*l.* a-year for apprenticing boys two years successively, and the third for poor maidens. Dr. Thomas Godwin, Bishop of Bath and Wells, was born in this town in 1517, and received the elements of his education in the freeschool.

WOLD, NEWTON, E. R. co. York.

P. T. Great Driffield (196) 11½ m. N b E.
Pop. with Forden 225.

WOLSINGHAM, co. Pal. of Durham.

London 256 m. NNW. Pop. 2197. M. D. Tues. Fairs, May 12 and Oct. 2, for cattle and all sorts of merchandise.

A market-town and parish in the north-west division of Darlington ward. The town, which is irregularly built, is situated on the north bank of the river Wear. In 1824 a new town-hall was erected, but for want of sufficient funds is still in an unfinished state. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of linen, woollen cloth, edge tools, and agricultural implements; also in the neighbouring coal, lead, and limestone works. A petty session is held by the county magistrates every Wednesday; and a court leet and baron, by the lord of the manor, twice a-year, at which debts under forty shillings are recoverable; its jurisdiction extends to Stanhope, Bishopley, North and South Bedurn, Lynsack, and Seftley. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Durham; valued in K. B. 31*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*; patron, the Bishop of Durham. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary and St. Stephen, is an ancient structure, and contains a beautiful font of Weardale marble, variegated with shells and other petrifications. Here are also places of worship for Baptists and Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists. The grammar-school was founded in 1813; twenty-four boys are educated. In another school forty girls are instructed; and about 160 children attend the Sunday-schools. Near a field, called the Chapel-garth, are the remains of an extensive building, surrounded by a moat, supposed to be those of the manor-house of the Bishop of Durham, attached to Wolsingham Park.

P. T. Oxford (51) 3 m. NNW. Pop. 493.

A parish in the hundred of Wootton, situated near the river Isis; living, a perpetual curacy subordinate to the vicarage of St. Peter in the East, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford; certified value 22*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 40*l.*; church ded. to St. Peter; patron, Merton College, Oxford. Here is a school, in which upwards of 100 boys and girls are instructed on the national system; it is supported by annual subscriptions, added to a small endowment. A Benedictine abbey was founded in 1138, to which Henry II. was a great benefactor: within its walls were deposited the remains of Fair Rosamond.

WOLVERHAMPTON, co. Stafford.

London 123 m. NW. Pop. 18,380. M. D. Wed. Fair, July 10, for cattle, and two following days, for all sorts of goods.

A market-town and parish in the north division of the hundred of Seisdon. It is a place of considerable antiquity, situated in a district abounding with mines of coal, iron, and limestone. The town, which stands on an eminence, consists of several streets, diverging from the market-place, in the centre of which is a cast-iron pillar, forty-five feet high, supporting a gas lantern; it is irregularly paved, but well lighted with gas; and the houses are in general substantial and well built. It contains a neat theatre, and a public subscription library, over which is a suite of rooms in which assemblies and concerts take place. Races are held annually in August, and are well attended. In the year 1590 the greater part of the town was destroyed by a fire, which continued burning during five days. This town has been long celebrated for the manufacture of locks, which is carried on to a great extent, together with files, nails, screws, gun-locks, hinges, steel-mills, machinery, and furnishing ironmongery, with every branch of the iron trade; and brass, tin, Pont-y-Pool and japanned wares, in great variety: it has also a large chemical laboratory. The Staffordshire and Worcestershire, the Birmingham, and the Essington and Wyrley Canals, pass close to the town, and form a union about a mile towards the north, by means of which a communication is opened with every part of the kingdom: fly-boats proceed daily for London, Liverpool, and Chester; and twice a-week for Derby, Nottingham, and Hull. The town is within the jurisdiction of the county magistrates, who hold petty sessions for the north and south divisions. A court of requests for the recovery of debts not exceeding 5*l.*, is held every fourth Friday, the jurisdiction of which extends over Wednesfield and Wolverhampton, and the parishes of Brewood, Busbury, Pattingham, and Penn. A manorial court-leet is held annually, at which two constables, one of them chosen by the dean, and other officers are appointed. The livings are two curacies in the archdeaconry of Stafford and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry; that of St. Peter, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 130*l.*; patron, the Dean of Windsor: that of St. John, not in charge; ann. val. P. R. 69*l.*; patron (1829) the Earl of Stamford. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary and St. Peter, was formerly collegiate; it is a spacious cruciform structure, consisting of a lofty nave, two aisles, and a chancel, with a handsome square embattled tower, rising from the centre; the pulpit is of one entire stone, richly decorated with sculpture. A curious octagonal font, of great antiquity, is supported in a shaft, the faces of which are embellished with bas-relief figures of St. Anthony, St. Paul, and St. Peter; and is beautifully ornamented with bosses, flowers, and foliage. In the chancel are several ancient monuments and brasses; and in the churchyard is a column, twenty feet high, divided into compartments, displaying a vast profusion of rude sculpture-work, supposed to be either of Saxon or Danish origin. The church, which is dedicated to St. John, is an elegant modern edifice, in the Grecian style of architecture, with a handsome tower, surmounted by a lofty and well-proportioned spire. The altar is ornamented with a good painting of the Descent from the Cross, by Barney, a native of this town. A new church, under the late acts of parliament, is in progress of erection, and will be dedicated to St. George. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, the Society of Friends, Unitarians, Wesleyan, Independent, and New Connexion Methodists, and Roman Catholics. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed in the reign of Henry VIII., by Sir Stephen Jenyns, Knight, a native of this town, and Lord Mayor of London in 1508: it is open to all boys of the town, and there are at present about 150 on the foundation. Sir William Congreve, John Abernethy, Esq., and John Pearson, Esq., Advocate-General of India, were educated at this school. The blue-coat charity-school, for thirty-six boys and thirty girls, of whom six of each are also clothed and maintained, is an ancient establishment of unknown origin. Here are likewise Sunday-schools, in connexion with the established church, and the various dissenting congregations. A dispensary was instituted in 1821, and a handsome and commodious building erected by subscription in 1826. The Union Mill, erected in 1813, at an expense of 14,000*l.*, raised in shares, was established for the purpose of grinding corn for the poor on easy terms, and supplying them with cheap flour and bread. A monastery was founded here in 996, by Wulfrana, sister of King Edgar, and widow of Aldhelm, Duke of Northampton, in honour of whom this town, previously called Hamton, received the appellation of Wulfranis Hamton, of which its present name is a corruption: the monastery continued till the year 1200, when it was surrendered to Hubert, Archbishop of Canterbury; and was subsequently annexed by Edward IV. to the deanery of Windsor.

WOODBIDGE, co. Suffolk.

London 77 m. NE b E. Pop. 4060. M. D.
Wed. Fairs, April 5 and Oct. 31, for cattle.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Loes. It is a place of considerable antiquity, pleasantly situated on the north side of the river Deben, on the slope of a hill, which commands a fine view down the river to its influx into the sea. The town consists of two principal streets, a spacious square called Market Hill, and several narrow streets and lanes, well paved and lighted: in the centre of Market Hill stands the sessions-house, a handsome and lofty brick edifice, under which is the corn-market. A small theatre was built in 1813, and a concert is held annually. In 1666 Woodbridge was visited by the plague, which carried off upwards of 300 of the inhabitants. During the war, barracks were erected about half-a-mile north-west of the town, with accommodation for 750 cavalry and 4165 infantry; but on the restoration of peace, the latter was taken down. The river near its mouth is called Woodbridge Haven, and is navigable for vessels of 120 tons burden up to the town, which carries on a considerable traffic with London, Hull, Newcastle, and the continent, and has several docks for building vessels, with commodious wharfs and quays. The principal exports are corn, flour, and malt; and the imports coal, timber, foreign wine, spirits, grocery, drapery, and ironmongery. The shipping is greatly on the increase, and consists at present of about thirty-eight vessels, of an aggregate burden of 2659 tons. The government of the town is vested, according to an act of parliament called Gilbert's Act, in a visiter and two guardians, chosen by the parishioners, not rated under 5*l.* a-year, whose duty it is to determine and superintend the collection and application of the parochial rates; in other respects the churchwardens exercise local authority. The quarter-sessions for the liberty of St. Ethelred, and the hundreds of Carlford, Colneis, Loes, Plomesgate, Thredling, and Welford, are holden here; and petty sessions take place every Wednesday. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Suffolk and diocese of Norwich, of the certified value of 45*l.*: patron (1829) the Rev. J. Carthew. The church, which is ded. to St. Mary, is a spacious and handsome structure, erected in the reign of Edward III.; it consists of a nave and two aisles, the roofs of which are supported by ten beautiful Gothic pillars, and four demi ones: the tower, which is very magnificent, was built in the reign of Henry VI., is 180 feet high, and forms a conspicuous object at sea; it is composed, like the church, of black flint, intermixed with freestone, and towards the upper part, formed into elegant devices; the summit is embattled, having finials at the angles, which are surmounted by vanes and decorated in the intervals with badges of the four evangelists. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, the Society of Friends, and Independent Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed in 1662; and about ten boys receive a classical education. A national school, in which are 350 children of both sexes, is partly supported by subscription. About 100 children are instructed in the Lancasterian school; and there is a Sunday school, twenty-four of the girls in which are also clothed. Almshouses were founded and endowed by Thomas Seckford, Esq., in the reign of Elizabeth, for thirteen poor unmarried men, with another house for three poor women to attend them as nurses ; the principal of these poor men receives 27*l.* per annum, and each of the other twelve 20*l.* ; with various extra allowances ; the men wear a silver badge, with the arms of the founder. Various benefactions, amounting to about 150*l.* a year, are distributed among the poor. This place gave birth to Christopher Saxton, the publisher of the first county maps, in 1579, dedicated to Queen Elizabeth.

WOODBURY, co. Devon.

P. T. Thrapston (73) 3 m. ESE. Pop. 1491.

A parish in the hundred of East Budleigh, bounded on the west by the river Exe ; living, a donative and a peculiar of the Vicars Choral of Exeter, not in charge ; ann. val. P. R. 74*l.* ; church ded. to St. Swithin ; patrons, the Dean and Canons of Exeter. Here is a charity-school, endowed with various amounts, producing about 50*l.* a-year. The petty sessions for the hundred are holden in this parish.

WOODCHESTER, co. Gloucester.

P. T. Stroud (101) 2½ m. SW. Pop. 929.

A parish in the hundred of Longtree, pleasantly situated on an eminence, forming part of a range of hills, which bound a beautiful and fertile valley, and are clothed with fine beech-wood. The inhabitants are employed in an extensive manufacture of woollen cloth ; and eight mills are constantly employed in the neighbourhood. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Gloucester ; valued in K. B. 10*l.* ; patron (1829) Lord Ducie. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, consists of a nave, chancel, and south aisle, with a low embattled tower at the west end, and contains a handsome altar-monument to the memory of Sir R. Huntley and his lady, who are represented lying beneath a canopy, surrounded by figures of their ten children. Here are a place of worship for Baptists, and a bequest, now producing 50*l.* a-year, for teaching, clothing, and apprenticing poor boys ; but St. Loe's school, at Minchinhampton, being open to boys of this parish, this charity is only appropriated to clothing and apprenticing them with premiums of 15*l.* each. Woodchester, which was a Roman station of considerable importance, is remarkable for the numerous and splendid Roman antiquities that have been discovered at different periods, among which is a noble tessellated pavement, superior to any thing of the kind, yet found in the kingdom ; the design is a circular area, twenty-five feet in diameter, enclosed within a square frame of forty-eight feet ten inches, divided into twenty-four compartments, and enriched with a great variety of architectural ornaments, figures of beasts, &c. Ruins of buildings, fragments of statues, glass, and pottery, and many other relics, with numerous coins, have also been found on the spot, from which it is supposed to have been the residence of the Roman proprietor, and occasionally perhaps of the Emperor Adrian himself.

WOODFORD, co. Essex.

London 7 m. NE b N. Pop. 2699.

A parish in the hundred of Becontree, situated on the confines of Epping Forest, on the road to Newmarket, and deriving its name from the ford in the wood or forest, where Woodford bridge now stands; the houses are in general detached, and many of them are handsome residences, commanding beautiful views over the surrounding country, and occupied by wealthy merchants of the metropolis. The custom of borough English prevails in this manor, by which the youngest son inherits. The living is a rectory in the archdeaconry of Essex and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 11*l*. 12*s*. 1*d*.; patron (1829) the Hon. W. T. L. P. Wellesley. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, was erected on the site of the ancient structure in 1817, and is an elegant Gothic edifice, with a square embattled tower; the aisles are separated from the nave by six pointed arches, carried up to the roof, which is of open wood-work, supported on eight pillars, and surmounted in the centre by an octangular lantern-tower: the east window is of stained glass, and divided into three compartments, containing figures of our Saviour, the four Evangelists, St. Peter, and St. Paul. In the churchyard is a splendid Corinthian marble column, about forty feet high, erected to the memory of the family of Godfrey, which flourished many years in Kent; also a tomb, with a column entirely covered with ivy, and a remarkably fine old yew-tree. Here are also places of worship for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists. A national school is supported by subscription; about 130 children of both sexes are instructed, fifty of whom are also clothed. This parish is entitled to send two boys to each of the schools founded by Dr. Samuel Harsnett, Archbishop of York, at Chigwell, and has also the perpetual right of presenting two boys to Christ's Hospital, London, granted by Thomas Foulks, in 1686. A parochial library was established here in 1828. At Woodford Wells is a mineral spring, formerly in great repute.

London 62 m. WNW. Pop. 1455. M. D. Tues. Fairs, Feb. 6 and April 5, for cheese, cattle, and sheep; Tues. in Whitsun-week, for pleasure, hardware, horses, &c.; Aug. 2, for cherries, &c.; Oct. 2, a great fair for cheese; Tues. after Nov. 1, for cattle, sheep, and cheese; Dec. 17, for fat hogs, and other cattle; Tuesd. after Candlemas-day, a very large market for cattle. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of Wootton, but having separate jurisdiction. It is pleasantly situated on an eminence, on the east bank of the river Glyme, an expansion of which forms the lake in Blenheim Park, and, afterwards uniting with the Evenlode, both fall into the Isis. The town consists of several streets, which are spacious and well paved; and the houses, which are mostly of stone, are large and handsome. The town-hall is a handsome stone building, with a piazza beneath, used as a market-place; it was erected, about the year 1766, by the Duke of Marlborough, after a design by Sir William Chambers. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the manufacture of gloves, which is carried on to a considerable extent, upwards of 500 dozens pairs being made weekly. The town was formerly noted for its manufacture of polished steel articles, which has very much declined, in consequence of the cheapness of the Birmingham and Sheffield wares. The first charter of incorporation was granted by Henry VI. in 1453, which was confirmed and enlarged by succeeding monarchs, the last of whom was Charles II., who granted that under which the corporation now acts: a restrictive charter was forced upon it by James II., but soon after set aside by proclamation. The corporation consists of five aldermen, one of whom is annually chosen mayor, a high steward, recorder, seventeen common-councilmen, and a town-clerk; two of the common-councilmen act as chamberlains in rotation. A court-leet is held annually; and a court for the recovery of debts under 15*l.* within the borough every month, but only pro forma for many years past. Woodstock was a borough by prescription long before it was incorporated, though the right has only been exercised without interruption since the 13th of Elizabeth. The mayor, aldermen, and freemen are the electors, whose number is about 150; the mayor is the returning officer. The living is a curacy, subordinate to the rectory of Bladon, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Oxford, of the certified value of 5*l.* 5*s.*; patronage with Bladon rectory. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, was chiefly rebuilt in 1785, on the site of a chantry founded by King John. In the south side, which is part of the ancient structure, is a round-headed Norman doorway, composed of red stone, and ornamented with chevron work, and the interior contains three massy columns, supporting pointed arches, their capital having various grotesque sculptures of the human countenance; the north side, or more modern part of the edifice, has been built in a style no way corresponding with the ancient part, but it has a tower of good proportions. Here are places of worship for particular Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists. The free grammar-school was founded and endowed, in 1585, by Richard Cornwall, a native of this town. The almshouses for six poor widows were erected, in 1793, by the late Duchess of Marlborough. Various charitable bequests are distributed amongst the poor in money, clothing, &c. Woodstock gives title of Viscount to Bentinck, Duke of Portland. Adjoining the town is Blenheim Park, the magnificent seat of the Duke of Marlborough. See Blenheim.

A market-town and parish in the east division of Glendale ward, situated on the eastern declivity of the Cheviot Hills, immediately above a trout-stream which falls into the river Till. It is a place of considerable antiquity, but was nearly destroyed by fire in 1722. From the salubrity of the air, the town was at one period greatly resorted to by invalids, who came to drink the milk of goats. It consists of several streets branching from the market-place, which forms the centre. Here are a public library, a mechanics' institute, and a dispensary. Courts leet and baron are holden by the lord of the manor three weeks after Easter. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Northumberland and diocese of Durham; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 8*s.* 1½*d.*; patron, the Bishop of Durham. The church, ded. to St. Mary, is a neat structure, situated on an eminence commanding a very fine prospect. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, Burghers, and Presbyterians, a Scotch church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. In the grammar-school, originally founded and endowed by the Earl of Tankerville, which has had a subsequent endowment, in order to increase the number of scholars, nine boys are educated, and a considerable number receive instruction at different Sunday-schools. In the vicinity are several intrenchments, and the remains of a tower supposed to be of Norman origin. At Humbleton, a short distance hence, is a stone pillar, erected in commemoration of the victory gained by Percy, Earl of Northumberland, in the reign of Henry IV., over 10,000 Scots.

TOPOG. DICT.—VOL. III,

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Blackheath and lathe of Sutton-at-Hone, noted for its royal dock-yard and naval arsenal. This place is situated on the southern bank of the Thames, which is here about three-quarters of a mile in breadth. It owes its present importance to a dock constructed in the reign of Henry VIII.; said to be the most ancient establishment of the kind in England, though a large ship had been built here in the preceding reign. Under Elizabeth the dock-yard was much improved, and many advantageous alterations and additions have since been made at different periods. In the reign of George I. a foundry for cannon was erected on Woolwich Warren, from which circumstance originated the foundation of the arsenal; and the institution of the Royal Military Academy, and other establishments connected with the army and navy, have raised the town to a state of great prosperity, and given it a superiority, as a naval and military depôt, over all other places. The parish of Woolwich includes a tract of land on the north bank of the river; and hence it may with truth be affirmed, that a larger portion of the commercial wealth of the British empire passes through it than through any other; for it includes a part of the channel of the Thames, along which all the merchandise is conveyed which is brought to London by sea. Petty sessions are holden in the town, before the county magistrates, Mondays and Fridays regularly; and a court of requests is held here every other Friday, which takes cognizance of debts not exceeding 5*l.* The living is a rectory, in the archdeaconry and diocese of Rochester; valued in K. B. 7*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, and in the patronage of the Bishop of Rochester. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is a plain brick structure, with a square tower; rebuilt about a century ago, at the expense of nearly 7000*l.* On the road to Plumstead is the Ordnance chapel, and in the barracks is another chapel belonging to the establishment, the appointments of the clergy for both being vested in the Board of Ordnance. Here are also places of worship for Baptists, and Independent Methodists, the Arminian Bible Christians, the members of the Scottish Kirk, and the Roman Catholics. An endowed school for girls, in which thirty poor girls are instructed in reading and needlework, was founded, through the bequest of Mrs. Withers, in 1750. A school was established, under the will of Mrs. Mary Wiseman, in 1758, for the education, clothing, and apprenticing of six orphan boys, the sons of shipwrights; and the funds of this charity having been augmented, ten boys are now educated. A national school has been established here for children of both sexes; and there is a school under the patronage of the British and Foreign School Society. An almshouse for five poor widows exists here, which was founded and endowed in 1562 by Sir Martin Bowes, an alderman of London.

The town consists of one principal street, extending for about a mile, parallel with the course of the Thames, and there are many other streets diverging from it in various directions. Part of the town is within the parish of Plumstead. There are many old houses, and the arrangement of the streets is irregular, and often inconvenient; but in the higher part of the town, where the buildings are of a more recent date, they are handsomely constructed, and their situation is airy and pleasant. The streets are partly paved, and they are lighted with gas, under the direction of a company established by act of parliament. The Royal Dock-yard is nearly a mile in length, stretching from near the village of Charlton, on the west, along the bank of the river, and varying in breadth from one to two furlongs, the whole being surrounded by a high wall. There are within this space two dry-docks, several slips, a mast pond, a boat-pond, a smithery for constructing anchors, storehouses, sheds, dwellings for the officers, and a variety of other accommodations. Several fine first and second rate ships have been built here. The establishment, which is under the control of the Navy Board, includes a master-attendant, a storekeeper, a master-shipwright with assistants, a master-smith and a master-painter, with their assistants, a surgeon, and an assistant-surgeon. The rope-yard, situated in the eastern part of the town, is a building in the form of a parallelogram, three stories in height, and about 1200 feet in length, in which cables are made for the navy of the largest size, some of them being 27 inches in circumference, and 130 fathoms long. Eastward of this is the Royal Arsenal, which comprises, within the walls, more than 100 acres, or, with the canal, 142 acres, partly in the parish of Plumstead. The entrance to this great national depôt of naval and military ordnance, is through a wide and lofty gateway, appropriately decorated; and it contains furnaces and machines for casting and boring cannon, together with workshops for the various descriptions of artificers, and storehouses and other buildings, including a laboratory, where the matrosses are employed in making cartridges, and charging bombs, carcasses, and grenades for the public service. Along the bank of the Thames extends an excellent quay, accessible by vessels of great burden; and here is a handsome range of storehouses, and other buildings conveniently constructed for warehouses. On the south-east side of the arsenal is a canal, 35 feet in breadth, on the banks of which are buildings appropriated for the manufacture of Congreve rockets. On the road to Woolwich Common are barracks for sappers and miners, and adjoining them the grand depôt of field train artillery, near which is the ordnance hospital, a handsome structure. The barracks for the royal artillery, horse and foot, form a noble edifice, the principal front of which, facing the common, extends 340 yards in length. The entrance is through a handsome portal, ornamented with Doric columns and military trophies; and in front of the buildings within are colonnades, exhibiting the characteristics of the Doric order of architecture. These barracks will afford accommodation for 3000 or 4000 men. In front of the barracks is the parade, about 60 yards in breadth, for the exercise of the foot artillery, and on it are planted several pieces of cannon. Besides these there are model-rooms, containing many curious and interesting objects; and on the south-west part of the common is a veterinary hospital for the horse-artillery. The Royal Military Academy, established in 1741, is situated at the south-eastern extremity of the common; it was originally destined for the instruction of officers and men belonging to the ordnance department of the army; but it is now appropriated for gentlemen cadets only, the number of whom is about 130. The buildings, which are extensive, consist of a centre and wings, chiefly exhibiting what has been called the Elizabethan style of architecture. This establishment is under the control of the Master-General of the Ordnance, as governor, a lieutenant-governor, and an inspector, with a professor of mathematics, and various masters. The trade and manufactures of Woolwich are wholly dependent on the demands of the resident population, and the persons stationed there engaged in the public service. A great and constant intercourse is carried on with London, both by land and water. Hulks are moored in the river, off the town, for the reception of convicts, sentenced to hard labour, who are employed in the government works. Woolwich is encompassed by chalk-hills, except near the river; and great quantities of chalk are raised for the purpose of making lime, or manuring the clay-lands of Essex.

WOOTTON BASSETT, co. Wilts.

London 90 m. W. Pop. 1701. M. D. Tues. Fair, Mond. next after the feasts of Pentecost and St. Bartholomew. Memb. Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish in the hundred of Kingsbridge. It was anciently of much greater importance than at present, and at the time of the conquest was called Wodeton, from wode, a wood, and tun, a town: about a century afterwards it became the property of the noble family of Bassett, from whom it received its adjunct name. The town, which consists principally of one street, about half a mile in length, is pleasantly situated on an eminence, commanding extensive and beautiful prospects over the surrounding country, which is extremely fertile, and in a high state of cultivation. The inhabitants formerly carried on a considerable trade in broad cloths, but there is now no staple manufacture of any kind. The corporation consists of a mayor, two aldermen, and twelve capital burgesses, with a town-clerk, and other officers. The mayor is annually chosen by the corporation, who also elect the town-clerk; and the subordinate officers are appointed by the mayor. This borough has sent members to Parliament ever since the 25th of Henry VI. The right of election is vested in the inhabitant householders, paying scot and lot; whose number exceeds two hundred; the mayor is the returning officer. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Wilts and diocese of Salisbury; valued in K. B. 12*l.*; (patron 1829) the Earl of Clarendon. The church, which is ded. to All Saints, is an ancient structure. Here is a place of worship for Independents. The freeschool was founded and endowed by Richard Jones, in 1688; eighteen poor children are taught to read and write; here are also a charity-school for girls, and a Sunday-school. An ancient hospital, dedicated to St. John, formerly existed here, which, in the reign of Henry IV., was granted and united to the priory of Bradenstoke, in this county. The old manor-house, which stands on the summit of a considerable eminence, is now converted into a farm-house.

The church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a handsome structure in the English style of architecture, and has a very fine tower rising from the centre. In the north aisle is a desk, to which are fastened with chains several old books, containing expositions on the four gospels. Here was formerly a priory for nuns of the Benedictine order.

WORCESTER, County of.

N to S about 34 m. NE to SW, greatest extent, 41 m. E to W, mean breadth, 20 m. No. of statute acres 431,360. Pop. 184,424. Hundreds 5. City 1. Boroughs 3. Market-towns 12. Memb. of Pt. 9. Oxford Circuit. Dioceses of Worcester and Hereford. Province of Canterbury

An inland county, bounded on the north by Shropshire and Staffordshire, on the east by Warwickshire, on the south by the county of Gloucester, and on the west by that of Hereford. Its figure is very irregular, and several tracts of lands belonging to it are enclosed by neighbouring counties, partly, perhaps in consequence of its having no natural boundaries. Before the invasion of Britain by the Romans, this part of the country appears to have been principally inhabited by the Dobuni, and at a subsequent period it was included with the province of Flavia Cæsariensis. In this county was an ancient British town, which became the Roman station called Salinæ, now Droitwich, famous for its salt springs, and from this place was an ancient road called the Upper Saltway, extending to the sea-coast in Lincolnshire. A second saltway extended from Salinæ, or Droitwich to the coast of Hampshire. There are also vestiges of an ancient road skirting the western side of the island, in the same manner as the Ermin Street did the eastern, a part of which appears to have passed through this county by the Roman station of Branogenium, supposed to be at or near Lintwardine, on the river Teme. The Icknield Street likewise passed through the south-eastern part of this county, by Sedgebarrow, into Gloucestershire. Under the Saxon Heptarchy, Worcestershire was comprehended in the kingdom of Mercia. But few military events are recorded as having happened within its limits, though some of these are of considerable importance. In 1016, the Saxon king, Edmund Ironside gained a complete victory over the Danes, near Blockley. On the 4th of August, 1265, took place the famous battle of Evesham, in which Prince Edward, afterwards Edward I. completely defeated Montfort, Earl of Leicester, who fell in the field, and thus was terminated the confederacy of the barons against Henry III. The battle of Worcester, in which Oliver Cromwell vanquished the royalists, in 1655 proved decisive of their ruin, and confirmed his own ascendancy. The soil of this county, though various, is generally rich and fertile. The inequalities of the surface are but inconsiderable. The Vale of the Severn, extending through it from north to south, comprises about 10,000 acres; and on the south-eastern part of the county is the Vale of Evesham, extending into Gloucestershire. These valleys, which lie extremely low, are bordered by gentle declivities, seldom rising to the height of 200 feet. North-east of Bromsgrove is a ridge of hills called the Lickey, some points of which are about 900 feet high, and in the north-western part of the county are the Abberley Hills of nearly a similar elevation, as also are Whitley Hill, southward of the last-mentioned, and Brendon Hill, on the confines of Gloucestershire. But the most elevated part of the surface is that portion of the ridge of the Malvern Hills, which divides Worcestershire from

Herefordshire, the summit of which is 1313 feet above the level of the Severn. The soil between Worcester and the Vale of Evesham consists partly of red marl, and partly of strong clay loam; that of the valley of Evesham is composed of deep rich earth, containing much calcareous matter. On the borders, and in various parts of the hills limestone predominates, especially towards the heights, while the lower grounds are covered with rich loam. Westward of Worcester the surface is formed of clay and gravel, a deep clay occurring in some places, and in others a loose stony soil. The quantity of arable land in this county has been estimated at 360,000 acres, chiefly devoted to the cultivation of wheat, barley, oats, beans, peas, vetches, turnips, and hops. Cabbages are sometimes grown as a field crop; the sands of Wolverley are noted for the produce of carrots, and potatoes are raised in great plenty in the vicinity of Bromsgrove. Worcestershire has long been distinguished for the growth of hops, of which three varieties are here cultivated, the red, the green, and the white. The orchards and plantations of fruit-trees, which are frequently placed in the hedgerows, form a considerable source of profit, from the production of cider and perry, for the excellence of which the county is much noted. Worcestershire formerly contained the royal forests of Wyre and Feckenham, and the Chase of Malvern, which have long since been disafforested; though the forest of Wyre, extending from the north-western part of the county into Shropshire, still contains much timber, and the underwood is largely used for hop-poles. The principal rivers in this county are the Severn, the Avon, the Teme, and the Stour. The Severn enters Worcestershire, a little to the north of Bewdley; and passing southward by Worcester and Upton, receives the Avon just below Tewkesbury, where it enters Gloucestershire. The Avon passes into this county from Warwickshire, and after a winding course by Evesham and Pershore, it proceeds to its confluence with the Severn. The Teme has its source in Shropshire, and entering this county westward of Tenbury, takes a serpentine course to its junction with the Severn below Worcester. The Stour rises in Shropshire, and flows southward through some part of this county to join the Severn at Stourport. The climate of Worcestershire is mild, temperate, and salubrious, and the atmosphere is generally clear, there being no lakes of any magnitude, and but little extent of marsh or moorland. The only mineral productions of this county which require notice are the salt-rocks of Droitwich, and coal-mines in the north-western district. In the neighbourhood of Dudley is found, imbedded in limestone, an extraneous fossil, called the Dudley Locust. The principal manufactures of this county are those of gloves, china-ware, and cabinet-work, extensively carried on at Worcester; the glass and iron-works at Dudley and Stourbridge; the manufacture of carpets and bombasins, especially of the former, for which Kidderminster has long been famous; and nails, needles, and fish-hooks, made at Redditch and Bromsgrove; besides cider, perry, and salt, already mentioned. The mineral springs are numerous, and are found at Worcester, Kidderminster, Bromsgrove, Churchill, Abberton, and Malvern, the last of which are by far the most celebrated. The five hundreds are those of Dodding-tree, Halfshire, Oswaldslow, Pershore, and Blackenhurst, four of which have each upper and lower divisions; and Oswaldslow is divided into three portions. This county contains the city of Worcester, which is its capital; the borough and market-towns of Droitwich, Evesham, and Bewdley; and the market-towns of Bromsgrove, Dudley, Kidderminster, Pershore, Shipston, Stourbridge, Stourport, Tenbury, and Upton-upon-Severn. Two members are returned to Parliament for the county, two for the city of Worcester, and each of the boroughs, except Bewdley, which has only one representative.

A city, having a separate jurisdiction, as forming a county of itself, but situated within the hundred of Oswaldslow. Its origin has by some antiquaries been ascribed to the Britons or Romans, but though its foundation was probably connected with the existence of the neighbouring Roman station of Branogenium, it may be more probably attributed to the Mercian Angles; Osric, the viceroy of Penda, King of Mercia, having erected here a frontier fortress against the Britons in the seventh century. Saxulph, Bishop of Mercia, is said to have founded here the first Christian church within his diocese, which, in the reign of the Mercian king Ethelred, became the cathedral church of the newly-founded bishopric of Wigornaccastre, now Worcester. This place was destroyed during the early invasion of the country by the Danes, and in 894, it was rebuilt by Ethelred, Ealdorman of Mercia, the son-in-law of Alfred the Great. In the reign of Hardiknute an insurrection took place here in consequence of the tyrannical conduct of that prince, whose army plundered and burnt the city, but its inhabitants having made peace with the king, soon rebuilt or repaired their habitations. A royal castle was erected here shortly after the Norman conquest, which was the scene of conspiracy against William I., in 1074, and in 1088, the city was besieged by the barons who had confederated against William Rufus, but the assailants were repulsed.

Hostilities repeatedly took place here during the civil war between Stephen and the Empress Matilda, and the city also suffered in the contests which occurred in the reigns of John, Henry III., Henry IV., and on other occasions. In the civil war under Charles I. it was garrisoned by the royalists, but was shortly afterwards captured by the Earl of Essex, after the departure of whose army the adherents of the king again gained the ascendancy, and in March, 1646, it was besieged by the parliamentarians, and at length the garrison surrendered to Colonel Whalley on the 23d of July. Worcester was again the scene of warfare after the execution of Charles I., when the ill-concerted expedition of Charles II. was terminated by the victory gained over his forces by Oliver Cromwell, August 22, 1651. A charter of privileges was granted to the inhabitants by Henry I., which was renewed or confirmed by Henry II., and several successive sovereigns. The government was vested in two bailiffs, two aldermen, two chamberlains, twenty-four common councilmen, and forty-eight assistants, previously to a new charter granted by James I. in 1621, when Worcester was erected into a distinct county, called the city and county of the city of Worcester, under the government of a mayor, a recorder, a sheriff, six aldermen, twenty-four common-councilmen, and forty-eight capital citizens, with a town-clerk, two chamberlains, two coroners, a sword-bearer, and other officers. The mayor is elected annually on the Monday after St. Bartholomew's-day; the aldermen are chosen from the common-councilmen, and the latter from the forty-eight citizens. The mayor, the recorder, and the aldermen, are justices of the peace for the city and the county of the city. Courts of session are held quarterly, for the trial of all except capital offences committed within the jurisdiction of the corporation; and a court of record for the recovery of debts to any amount is held weekly. The assizes, quarter-sessions, and elections of members of parliament for the county, are likewise held here. This city has returned representatives to Parliament ever since the reign of Edward I. The right of election, by decision of the House of Commons, in 1747, is declared to belong to the citizens or freemen not receiving alms, who have acquired their freedom by birth, by servitude, or by purchase, the number of whom is about 2000; and the sheriff is the returning officer. The episcopal establishment, the foundation of which took place in 679, consists at present, besides the bishop, of a dean, an archdeacon, a chancellor, a registrar, ten prebendaries, the same number of minor canons, lay-clerks, and choristers, two schoolmasters, forty king's scholars, and other members. The deanery is in the patronage of the King; the archdeaconry, valued in K. B. 58*l.* 10*s.*, is in the patronage of the Bishop of Worcester, as also are the chancellorship and the registrar's office. The jurisdiction of the see includes, besides the county of Worcester, about one-third of that of Warwick, the parishes of Brome and Clent, in Staffordshire, and that of Hales Owen, in Shropshire. The present cathedral was originally founded in 1084, by Bishop Wulfstan, and was altered and enlarged by several succeeding prelates. It is a spacious structure, built in the form of a double cross, with a noble square tower rising from the intersection of the western transept, with the nave and choir. It chiefly displays the early pointed style, but there are portions of both earlier and later architecture. The nave, which appears to be the oldest part, though altered since its first erection, is divided from the aisles by clustered columns and pointed arches, and has a groined roof, decorated with flowers, heads, and other figures. The choir, which is of the early pointed style, has a handsome groined roof, an altar-screen of carved stone, and likewise a stone pulpit, richly embellished with sculpture; the bishop's throne and prebendal stalls are ornamented with tabernacle-work. The Lady Chapel corresponds much in date and style with the choir; in the transepts are sepulchral chapels, that on the southern side of the east transept containing the fine monument of Prince Arthur, the eldest son of Henry VII. In the centre of the choir is the tomb of King John, which was opened in 1797 by order of the dean and chapter, when the body of that prince was found entire, contained in a stone coffin, but it was speedily destroyed by exposure to the air. On the south side of the cathedral are the cloisters, forming a quadrangular area, south of which is the ancient monastic refectory; and on the eastern side is the chapter-house, in which is preserved the cathedral library. This city contains the parishes of All Saints, St. Alban, St. Andrew, St. Clement, St. Helen, St. John Bedwardine, St. Martin, St. Michael Bedwardine, St. Nicholas, St. Peter the Great, and St. Swithin. The living of All Saints is a rectory, valued in K. B. 13*l.* 12*s.* 4½*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 138*l.*, and in the patronage of the Crown; St. Alban's is a perpetual curacy, valued in P. R. 60*l.* 14*s.*, and in the patronage of the Bishop of Worcester; St. Andrew's is a vicarage, valued in K. B. 10*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*, ann. val. P. R. 120*l.*, and in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter. The church, which has undergone extensive modern repairs, has a tower, surmounted by a lofty octangular spire, which forms one of the most conspicuous ornaments of the city; St. Clement's is a rectory, valued in K. B. 5*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.*, ann. val. P. R. 100*l.*, and in the same patronage with the preceding. The church, which was rebuilt in the Norman style of architecture in 1823, at the expense of about 6000*l.*, stands a little without the city, on the road to Henlip; St. Helen's is a rectory, valued in K. B. 11*l.*, ann. val. P. R. 103*l.* 11*s.*, and in the patronage of the Bishop; St. John's Bedwardine is a discharged vicarage, valued in K. B. 13*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, and in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter; St. Martin's is a rectory, valued in K. B. 15*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*, and in the same patronage with the preceding; St. Michael's Bedwardine is a rectory, valued in K. B. 7*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.*, ann. val. P. R. 75*l.*, and in the patronage of the Crown; St. Nicholas's is a rectory, valued in K. B. 16*l.* 10*s.* 7½*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 127*l.* 9*s.* 5*d.*, and in the patronage of the Bishop; St. Peter's the Great is a vicarage, valued in K. B. 12*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*, with the curacy of Whittington, ann. val. P. R. 131*l.* 6*s.* 5*d.*, and in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter; St. Swithin's is a discharged rectory, valued in K. B. 15*l.* 15*s.*, and in the same patronage with the preceding. All these benefices are in the archdeaconry and diocese of Worcester. Here are places of worship for the Baptists, the Independents, the Quakers, and the Calvinistic and Wesleyan Methodists, besides which there is a Roman Catholic chapel. A royal grammar-school, in connexion with the cathedral, was founded when the chapter underwent revision in the reign of Henry VIII. It is under the patronage of the Dean, and the number of scholars on the foundation is forty, who are eligible to two exhibitions at Balliol College, Oxford. A free grammar-school for twelve boys was founded by Queen Elizabeth, in 1561, and the pupils have a contingent interest in six scholarships at Worcester college, and others at Magdalen Hall, Oxford, besides seven exhibitions of 30*l.* a-year each at either university, the gift of Joseph Worfield, in 1642. Another free-school was founded and endowed by Thomas Wilde, who also founded the Trinity almshouses for a master and twenty-nine poor persons in 1558. Schools, for children of both sexes, were founded by Bishop Lloyd, in 1713; and there is a school on Dr. Bell's plan, supported by subscription. St. Oswald's Hospital, originally established in 1268, was refounded by royal charter the 15th of Charles II., when ten almshouses and a chapel were built, and six more were added in 1681. Almshouses for six aged men were founded and endowed by Mr. Inglethorpe, in 1619, besides which there are several similar establishments of a later date. Among the remaining charitable institutions are the city and county infirmary, erected, in 1770, at the expense of 6085*l.*; an institution for the relief of lying-in women; a house of industry, built by act of parliament, procured in 1792; a female penitentiary, and a dispensary. This city is agreeably situated, on rising ground, on the eastern bank of the Severn, over which there is a stone bridge of five arches, erected in 1780, which leads to the suburb of St. John Bedwardine. It consists of several handsome streets, which are well paved and lighted with gas. The Foregate Street is a long and spacious avenue of well-built houses, terminated at one end by the church of St. Nicholas. Among the public buildings not already mentioned, are the theatre, a neat structure, erected in 1780;

the town-hall, a handsome brick building, the front of which is ornamented in the centre with columns and statues, and the interior contains appropriate arrangements for the sessions of courts of law and meetings of the corporation; it is, however, in contemplation to build a new town-hall, on an enlarged scale: the city gaol and bride-well, erected in 1824, at the expense of 12,500*l.*, containing wards, day-rooms, and yards for the prisoners, with a chapel, and in one of the yards a tread-wheel for raising water; the county gaol and house of correction, a spacious edifice on the north-west side of the city, built in 1809, at the cost of 19,000*l.*; the public library and news-room, forming a handsome building, recently erected on the eastern side of Foregate Street; and the market-place, in the High Street, a spacious area, with an ornamental arched entrance, the buildings of which were erected in 1804. There are two medical societies, one founded in 1796, and the other in 1815; and in 1818 was established a society for the encouragement of native artists by the exhibition of paintings. A music meeting is held here once in three years, alternately by the choirs of Worcester, Hereford, and Gloucester, and the surplus produce of those festivals is applied for the relief of distressed widows and orphans of the clergy of those dioceses. Races take place in Pitchcroft meadow, on the border of the Severn, in the months of August and November. Worcester was formerly distinguished for the manufacture of woollen goods, now extinct. At present it is much noted for porcelain or china ware, and gloves, especially the former. The manufacture of porcelain was introduced here about 1751, and there are three considerable establishments, the produce of which is alike valuable for the fineness and transparency of its fabric, the elegance of the model, and the beauty of the painting with which it is decorated. The glove manufacture has been carried on here to a great extent, furnishing employment for not less than 8000 persons in the city and its vicinity; but it has here, as well as elsewhere, experienced an extraordinary depression, in consequence apparently of the introduction of cheaper articles from the continent; among the other manufactures may be mentioned those of lace, iron, distilled spirits, nails, tanned leather, and turnery ware. A considerable trade is carried on from this place by means of the Worcester and Birmingham Canal, on the banks of which are several extensive quays and warehouses. In the markets take place large sales of corn and hops, the corn-market being held at the east end of Silver Street, and the hop-market in an area at the south end of Foregate Street, where warehouses and offices have been erected. Among the ancient conventual foundations were an hospital, erected in honour of St. Wulfstan, of which there are some remains; a convent of Franciscan friars, founded about 1268; a convent of Dominicans, a Benedictine munery, and the guild or brotherhood of the Holy Trinity, founded by Henry IV., and converted into an hospital by Queen Elizabeth. At Worcester was born, in 1555, Edward Kelley, the associate of John Dee, the famous mathematician and astrologer; and this was also the birthplace of John Lord Somers, the celebrated statesman and lawyer, who was born in 1650, and died April 26, 1716. This city gives the title of Marquis to the Duke of Beaufort.

Of To. 6439. M. D. Wed. and Sat.; the former for corn, extensive. Fairs, May 18 and Oct. 18, nearly disused.

A market and seaport town and parish in Allerdale ward, above Darwent, situated on the south bank of the river Derwent, near the sea. The town contains a small theatre, and assembly and news rooms; the streets are mostly narrow and inconveniently arranged, but there are likewise many handsome houses of modern erection. A stone bridge of three arches, built at the expense of the county in 1763, crosses the river at the entrance to the town from Maryport. The harbour here is the safest on the coast, being secured by a breakwater, and lighted with gas. The quays, on which is a custom-house, subordinate to that at Whitehaven, are very commodious, and vessels are hence cleared out. Extensive collieries are worked here, and the trade consists chiefly in the export of their produce to Ireland and other parts of the kingdom. About 100 vessels are continually sailing backwards and forwards; a large number of people are also employed in ship-building, and the manufacture of articles in connexion with the same; besides about 400 in a straw-hat manufactory, for making imitation Leghorns. Salmon is taken along the coast. Manorial courts are holden occasionally, and petty sessions weekly, by the county magistrates. The livings are a rectory and a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Carlisle; the former valued in K. B. 23*l.* 5*s.*; patron (1829) J. P. Curwen, Esq.: the latter not in charge; patron, the Rector. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, and the chapel of ease, to St. John, are both handsome structures; the former was built in the Gothic style on the site of the old one in 1770, and has a fine altar-piece of Christ being taken down from the Cross; the latter was built by the commissioners for the erection of new churches in 1823, in the Tuscan style of architecture, and has a handsome portico, supported by massive pillars. Here are also places of worship for Primitive, Independent, and Wesleyan Methodists, Presbyterians, and Roman Catholics; a school, founded by Mr. Curwen in 1808, in which 200 boys and sixty girls are instructed, on paying a small sum weekly; a school of industry, for thirty girls, established in 1806, and a dispensary; besides several institutions for the benefit of the poor, supported by contributions. In 1664 Sir Philip Curwen founded and endowed a free grammar-school, but in consequence of a discovery having been made that the property was only in the power of the founder during his life, it no longer exists. Races take place here annually in August. Workington Hall, the seat of the Curwen family, is a castellated quadrangular edifice, situated amidst fine and extensive grounds and plantations: in 1561 Mary, Queen of Scots, landed here, and was entertained by Sir Henry Curwen, until her removal to Cockermouth and Carlisle; the chamber in which she slept is still called the Queen's Room. On an eminence in the vicinity is an ancient building, supposed to have been used as a watchtower; it commands very extensive views into Scotland.

Wed. Fairs, March 31 and June 21, for cattle and sheep; Oct. 14, for horses and cattle; and about three weeks after the last a statute fair.

A market-town and parish in the Hatfield division of the wapentake of Bassetlaw, pleasantly situated in a valley, near the source of the river Ryton, towards the northern extremity of Sherwood Forest. It consists of two well-built streets, which are paved and lighted. The Chesterfield Canal passes the north side of the town; and at a short distance hence crosses the river by an aqueduct. It is a great advantage to the trade of the place, which consists chiefly in malt, sent in considerable quantities to Manchester and several other large towns.
The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry of Nottingham and diocese of York; valued in K. B. 12*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*; patron (1829) the Duke of Norfolk. The church, dedicated to St. Mary and St. Cuthbert, is a fine old structure, forming part of the priory, founded for monks of the Augustine order, in the reign of Henry I.; it is of the Norman style of architecture, and has two very handsome towers. Within are some ancient monuments, chiefly to the Furnival and Lovetot families, who possessed the manor previously to the reign of Henry VIII.
Here are also places of worship for Independent and Wesleyan Methodists and Roman Catholics. Upwards of 200 children of both sexes are educated on the national system, and a proportion of them are also clothed. There are likewise some small bequests, the interest of which is distributed to the poor. On a hill, to the west of the town, are slight remains of a castle, which belonged to the Lovetot family. In this parish are the shire oaks, so called from one of great dimensions spreading its branches over parts of three counties, namely, Nottingham, Derby, and York. In 1460 a battle took place here between the forces of the Duke of York and those of the Duke of Somerset, which ended in the defeat of the latter. Gilbert, the first Earl of Shrewsbury, who distinguished himself in the French wars, in the reign of Henry V., built the mansion-house, afterwards the ducal residence and the place of confinement of Mary, Queen of Scots, in the sixteenth year of her imprisonment. Her son, James I., stopped here in April, 1603, when on his way to London to assume the crown of England. In 1761 this mansion was destroyed by fire, but was shortly afterwards splendidly rebuilt by the Duke of Norfolk;
it stands in a park of eight miles circumference, and is a very beautiful seat; about two miles distant is also Clumber Park, the magnificent residence of the Duke of Newcastle; and not far hence are Welbeck Abbey, the Portland, and Thoresby, the Manvers estates. In the immediate vicinity of the town many Roman coins and other antiquities have been discovered.

WOTTON-UNDER-EDGE, co. Gloucester.

London 108 m. W b N. Pop. 5004. M. D.

Fri. Fair, Sept. 25, for cattle and cheese.

A market-town and parish in the upper division of the hundred of Berkeley, situated on a sloping ground, at the top of which are some finely-wooded hills; the old name, Wotton-under-Ridge, is indicative of its situation. The town was destroyed by fire in the reign of King John, and was not rebuilt on the exact site it previously occupied; a place called the Brands is supposed to be this spot: it at present consists of two well-built streets, running in parallel lines. A small stream runs through the town and neighbourhood, giving motion to several clothing-mills, which, when that trade was in a flourishing state, gave employment to a large number of people residing here and in the surrounding villages. At an annual court-leet a mayor is elected, but he does not exercise any magisterial authority: petty sessions are also holden for the upper division of the hundred. Its municipal privileges were granted by Henry III., as likewise the market and fair. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of Gloucester; valued in K. B. 13*l.* 10*s.*; ann. val. P. R. 130*l.*; patron, Christ Church, Oxford. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a large and handsome structure, in which are some curious old monuments. Here are places of worship for Baptists and Independent and Wesleyan Methodists. A grammar-school was founded and endowed by Lady Catherine Berkeley, in the reign of Richard II., the annual income of which is near 400*l.*, the master and scholars forming a body corporate; the boys have an allowance for books, &c. About forty children are educated in a blue-coat school, the greater number of which are clothed and apprenticed. The poor have also the advantage of a general hospital, and an hospital for twelve aged persons, founded by Hugh Perry, of London, in 1630; and an almshouse for six inmates, by Thomas Dawes, in 1712, and the interest of 1000*l.*, left by Sir Jonathan Dawes, Sheriff of London. A short distance from the town are the remains of a square camp, called Becketsbury.

WREXHAM, co. Denbigh, N. W.

London 179 m. NW. Pop. of Pa. 11,081.
Of Wrexham Abbot 1704. Of Wrexham
Regis 309. Fairs, March 23; Holy Thursday; June 6; and Sept. 19. M. D. Mon. and Thurs.

A large, populous, and prosperous town in North Wales, in the parish of Wrexham and hundred of Bromfield. It was anciently called Wrightesham, by the Saxons, to whom its foundation is attributed, and from whom the inhabitants are supposed to derive their customs and language. The town consists of some good avenues, the High Street, in front of the Wynnstay Arms, and terminated by a spacious town-hall, is the most respectable, and presents at all times a scene of trade, bustle, and animation. The church, the architectural boast of Wales, was erected in the reign of Henry VII. and is an exquisite specimen of the florid Gothic which began to prevail at that period. The tower attains a height of 140 feet, having three of its fronts adorned with whole-length figures occupying niches. The interior is by no means in keeping with the richness and decoration of the tower and sculptures of the outside of the chancel, but contains an ancient monument, inscribed with Saxon characters, and a noble design and work by Roubilliac, to the memory of Mary, daughter of Sir Richard Myddleton of Chirk Castle. It represents the resurrection of the body in its last sad clothing, and the grave resigning its dead at the citation of the angel on the Day of Judgment. This bold design has since been repeatedly imitated. Here are also two chapels of ease, five belonging to Dissenters of various denominations and one for Roman Catholics; a detachment of military is frequently stationed here, and there are three respectable inns for the accommodation of the public. The living is a vicarage in the archdeaconry and diocese of St. Asaph's; val. in K. B. 19*l.* 9*s.* 9½*d.*; patron, the Bishop of the diocese. Two of the schools are endowed, one of them by the late Lady Jeffreys; and an estate of the ann. val. of 250*l.* is vested in the vicar and churchwardens, for the relief of the poor of this parish. Reading, news-rooms, library, and a lecture-room are amongst the establishments of a public nature which have lately sprung up in this place. This is the great thoroughfare between Liverpool and Chester and North Wales. The coaching establishments are numerous, and the travelling in consequence at moderate rates. The great fair, for all sorts of wares, goods, &c. commences on the 23d of March, and continues during one fortnight. It is attended by purchasers, chiefly small shop-keepers, from all parts of North Wales, and business is transacted on this occasion to a considerable extent. The flannel trade is less prosperous here than formerly, but an extensive trade is carried on in coal, iron, and lead, as well as in flour, wire-drawing, and paper-making. The mineral region of Minera is amply stored, and its treasures pursued with skill and enterprise; besides which the various streams in the vicinity afford sites well calculated for the establishment of mills. The petty sessions for the hundreds of Bromfield and Yale are held here regularly, and here also the election of a county member for Denbighshire sometimes takes place.

WYCOMBE, HIGH, or CHIPPING, [co. Buckingham.

London 29 m. W b N. Pop. of Pa. 2735.
Of Bo. 2351. M. D. Fri. Fair, Mond. before Michaelmas, statute. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish, having separate jurisdiction, but locally situated in the hundred of Desborough. It is a place of great antiquity, and from the Roman relics and coins which have been discovered here, is supposed to have been a Roman villa; the distinguishing appellation, however, of Chipping, a corruption of the Saxon Cheaping-market, is a proof of its having been in the possession of that people. The town, though not the largest, is the handsomest in the county, and owes much of its prosperity to the rivulet called Wycombe stream, which sets in motion a considerable number of corn and paper mills, and after a long winding course, falls into the Thames below Marlow. It consists of one large street, with several smaller branching from it, and stands on the high road from London to Oxford. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the paper-mills, lace manufactures, and malting trade. The borough was governed by a mayor, and is said to have been first incorporated in the reign of Edward III.; this, however, is far from being certain, and the more general belief is, that it received the first charter in the reign of Henry VI., which was confirmed in the reigns of Elizabeth, James I., and Charles II. The corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, twelve aldermen, and two bailiffs, with inferior officers. The right of election is vested in the mayor, aldermen, bailiffs, and burgesses. The privilege of sending members to Parliament has been exercised without intermission since the reign of Edward I. The mayor and bailiffs are the returning officers. The corporation holds sessions for offences not capital, and has the power of holding a court of record for the recovery of debts under 40*l*. The town-hall is a neat building, erected in 1757, by the Earl of Shelburne. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Buckingham and diocese of Lincoln; valued in K. B. 23*l*. 17*s*. 1*d*.; ann. val. P. R. 80*l*. The church, ded. to All Saints, is an ancient structure, in the early English style of architecture, containing several handsome monuments, amongst which is one to the Earl of Shelburne, who died in 1751. Here are also two places of worship for Independent Methodists, and one for the Baptists, and Society of Friends, besides a grammar-school, a Lancasterian establishment for girls, and six almshouses for aged widows. The grammar-school and almshouses are supported by means of the produce of an endowment in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, augmented by an individual named Bowden, in 1790. A department of the royal military college existed here before its removal and completion at Sandhurst. Among the celebrated individuals to which Wycombe has given birth, are William Alley, Bishop of Exeter, one of the translators of the Bible in the reign of Elizabeth; Dr. Gamble, the biographer of General Monk, and who is said to have assisted that individual in his efforts in the restoration of Charles II., was for some time vicar of this parish. The place gives the titles of Earl and Baron to the Marquis of Lansdowne.

WYMONDHAM, or WINDHAM, co. Norfolk.

London 100 m. NE b N. Pop. 4708. M. D. Friday. Fairs, Feb. 12, May 16, and Sept. 29, for horses, lean cattle, and petty chapmen; statute fairs for hiring servants; occasionally.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Forehoe, of Saxon origin, which derives its name from the words win munde ham, signifying, in that language, a village on an elevated situation. It first became a place of importance in the reign of Henry I., in consequence of the foundation of a priory of black monks by William D'Albini, which was afterwards endowed by the king with lands, the right of claiming all wrecks between Eecles Happisburgh and Tunstead, and an annual rent in kind of 2000*l.* from the village of Hilgay. The same institution was, in 1448, elevated to the rank of an abbey. The two Kets, tanners and natives of this town, who endeavoured to inflame this county in the reign of Edward VI., used to meet their companions under an oak in the neighbourhood, a part of which is still pointed out as a kind of historical record; after they were defeated by the Earl of Warwick, the elder was hanged in chains at Norwich castle, and the younger on the steeple of Wymondham church. The town stands on the high road from Norwich to London: it has suffered severely by the two dreadful scourges of fire and plague; by the former in 1615, when upwards of 300 houses were consumed, and by the latter in 1631. In the market-place is an ancient cross. The greater portion of the inhabitants are employed in weaving, chiefly bombasins and crapes. The manufacture of wooden-ware is also carried on in a small way. An annual court-leet is held here for the appointment of constables, and manorial courts are held occasionally, but not at fixed periods. The inhabitants are exempt from serving on juries at assizes or sessions. The living is a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich, valued in K. B. 10*l.* 14*s.* 4½*d.*; patron, the Bishop of Ely. The church, ded. to St. Mary, is a portion of the ancient abbey church; it is a fine structure, in various styles of architecture, with the remains of a central tower, and a tower at the west end, surmounted by a very high spire. Within is a large carved font on an elevation of steps, and in the chancel is the tomb of the founder, with monuments to several branches of his and other families. The Independent and Wesleyan Methodists, as well as Baptists and Quakers, have places of worship here. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth the free grammar-school was founded, and endowed with part of the guild belonging to the church. Archbishop Parker attached to it a scholarship in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, in 1574; John Parker, Esq., another in 1580; and Edward Coleman, Esq., a share of an exhibition for scholarships in 1659. The scholars must be fifteen years of age, natives of the town, and have been at the school an uninterrupted period of two years. There is a house and land, value 100*l.* per annum, left by an unknown individual, partly for the benefit of this school, and partly for the benefit of the poor of the parish. The Rev. John Hendy, in 1722, bequeathed 400*l.*, to be vested in lands, the rental of which to be given to the vicar, provided he preach two sermons every Sunday throughout the year; and a rent-charge of 13*l.* 10*s.* for preaching a sermon every Friday in Lent. The same individual left a small estate to the charity-school, chargeable with 50*s.* annually, to be given to unmarried women of the parish, and 10*s.* to the poor of Crownthorpe. There is another charity-school, supported by voluntary contributions. The Wyndham family take their name from this town. William de Wymondham was overseer of the silvermines in Devonshire in 1293, and held offices in the Exchequer. In 1549 Sir William Wyndham was sheriff of the county.

U. Heathcote, Esq. Here is an establishment called Wymondley House, for the education of Presbyterian ministers; it is calculated to receive twenty-four students, and is conducted by two masters. The institution was first established at Northampton, in 1729. In 1752 it was removed to Daventry, back again to Northampton, and to this place in 1799. It has an excellent library, containing 10,000 volumes. Here was formerly a priory of black canons, founded in the reign of Henry III., no remains of which are at present in existence.

WYNNSTAY, co. Denbigh, N. W.

P. T. Wrexham (179) 4 m. SW.

A township in the parish of Rhiwabon and hundred of Bromfield. Here are the noble mansion and spacious park of Sir Watkyn Williams Wynne, Bart. It is adorned with venerable woods, and watered by the little brook which passes through the village, as well as by the windings of the river Dee. The whole is highly and expensively improved, decorated with temples and rustic buildings; but the works of nature displayed in the glen of Nant-y-Below, on the river side, throw all the efforts of even the most refined taste wholly into the shade. This seat was anciently called Wattstay, from its situation on the banks of the famous Dyke, but exchanged by the late baronet for its present more agreeably-sounding appellation.

London 237 m. N b W. Pop. 1504. M. D. Thurs. Fairs, Thurs. bef. April 5; Holy Thurs.; Aug. 2; and Oct. 19; for horned cattle, horses, and sheep.

A market-town and parish in the west division of the liberty of Langbaurch, situated on a low part of the county, surrounded on three sides by the river Tees, over which is a fine substantial stone bridge of modern erection. In consequence of the violent swells to which the river is subject, the old bridge of five arches was removed in 1805, and an iron one of 180 feet span commenced; which, however, fell down just before the completion, and the present structure was built in its stead. The town consists of one large street, running from north to south; it has several times suffered severely from floods, owing to the lowness of its site. The chief trade consists in the exportation of corn, flour, and lead, cheese, butter, and bacon; the river abounds with various kinds of fish, and is famous for its fine salmon. The living is a curacy in the archdeaconry of Cleveland and diocese of York; certified value 38*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*; patron, the Archbishop of York. The church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is a plain modern structure, but much admired for a painted window, of which the subject is, Moses, delivering the law on Mount Sinai. The free grammar-school was endowed by Thomas Conyers, in 1588. Here were formerly an hospital and house of black friars, founded by branches of the Bruce family, the former in the latter part of the twelfth century, and the latter in the beginning of the thirteenth. Not a vestige of either is at present remaining.

YARMOUTH, or GREAT YARMOUTH, co. Norfolk.

London 124 m. NE. Pop. 18,040. M. D.
Wed. and Sat. Fairs, Fri. and Sat. in Easter-week, general. Memb. of Pt. 2.

An important seaport, borough, and market-town, in the hundred of East Flegg, but under a separate jurisdiction. It is situated on a peninsula, bounded on one side by Breydon Water, an inlet formed by the confluence of the rivers Yare and Bure with the Waveney, and on the other side by the German Ocean; and the name of the place is derived from its being thus placed at the mouth of the Yare or Yar. It arose from the settlement of a few fishermen on the spot, then a sandbank, and the site of their station is still called, from the name of one of them, Fuller's Hill; but the channel of the river on which the establishment was originally formed becoming obstructed, the inhabitants removed to a more southern channel, where the town now stands. It appears from Domesday-book, that in the reign of William I. Yarmouth was a royal demesne, to which belonged seventy burgesses. Henry III. granted a charter to the inhabitants, and permitted them to fortify the burgh with an extensive wall, defended by a moat, and strengthened by sixteen towers, the wall having ten gates or portals. In 1588, at the time of the alarm from the Spanish armada, a castle or fortress, with four towers, whence beacons might be displayed, stood in the middle of the town; and an eminence called

South Mount, was constructed as the site of a battery. These fortifications becoming inefficient, and the castle having been destroyed, in 1621 parapets were constructed towards the sea, on which pieces of artillery were planted; and the fortified lines included a space about two miles and a half in circumference. In testimony of the great extent of population here at an early period, it may be stated that in 1348 no less than 7000 persons died of the plague at Yarmouth; and that terrible disease occasioned much havoc among the inhabitants in 1579; and in 1664, though the victims at those periods were much less numerous than at the preceding. In the reign of Edward VI., when a rebellion against the government took place in Norfolk, under Ket, the insurgents, who were numerous, furiously assaulted this place, but they were bravely repulsed by the townsmen, and obliged to retreat. The first charter of incorporation granted to this borough was that of John, who in 1108 authorized the burgesses to elect four bailiffs for the government of the borough, instead of a provost appointed by the king, as formerly; and instituted a court of hustings, now styled the burgh court. These privileges were extended and confirmed by succeeding sovereigns, as Henry III., Edward II., Richard II., Henry VII., Queen Elizabeth, and James I., prior to the charter of Queen Anne, dated 1702, which prescribes the form and powers of the corporation as now constituted. It consists of a mayor, a recorder, a high-steward, a sub-steward, seventeen aldermen (or with the mayor, eighteen), and thirty-six common-councilmen; together with a town-clerk, a registrar of the admiralty court, four proctors who are attorneys of the burgh court, a water-bailiff, and other officers. The mayor is elected annually, August 29, by the common-councilmen, and sworn into office September 29 ensuing. The aldermen are chosen on the death or resignation of any of their number by those remaining, from among the members of the common council; and the latter are chosen from the freemen. The mayor, the recorder, the high-steward, the deputy-mayor, and such aldermen as have been mayors, have power to act as justices of the peace. General sessions of Oyer and Terminer are held twice a-year, before these magistrates, for the trial of all, including capital offences; Yarmouth not being within the limits of the judges' circuit. The admiralty court, for the trial of maritime causes, is held weekly before the mayor, as judge and admiral, an appeal lying to the court of delegates only. Besides the burgh court before mentioned, there is a court of requests for the recovery of debts under forty shillings, the jurisdiction extending over the borough and its liberties; and likewise a court-leet and a court of piepowder. The maritime jurisdiction of the corporation, under a charter given by Charles II., extends to South-town, or Little Yarmouth, in Suffolk; and as conservators of the Bure, Yare, and Waveney, they have a jurisdiction for ten miles on those rivers. Yarmouth first sent members to Parliament in the reign of Edward I., and the returns, with some intermissions, have been continued ever since. The right of election is vested in the freemen, said to be about 2500 in number; and the mayor is the returning officer. The living is a perpetual curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of Norwich; and in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Norwich. The church, which is dedicated to St. Nicholas, is a handsome cruciform edifice of pointed architecture, with a tower and spire in the centre, turrets at the west end, and an ornamented south porch: the spire was erected in 1804, instead of a wooden spire, by which the tower was previously surmounted. This church was founded in the beginning of the twelfth century, as a chapel of the priory of the Holy Trinity at Norwich, belonging to which there was a cell at this place. A chapel of ease, dedicated to St. George, was erected in 1716, the benefice of which is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the Corporation of Yarmouth; it was erected under the authority of an act of parliament; and the minister's salary is derived from a local duty on coal. Another church has been partly erected, under the influence of the commissioners for building new churches. Here is a chapel for the Roman Catholics; and the Independent Methodists, the Unitarians, Baptists, and Quakers, have their respective places of worship. There is a freeschool for children of both sexes, called the hospital school, originally founded in 1651, as a free grammar-school, and in which seventy boys and thirty girls are now instructed in reading, writing, and arithmetic; and the former are also clothed, maintained, and apprenticed. Besides this, there are a Lancasterian school, and one under the direction of the minister of the parish, supported by voluntary contributions. An hospital, for twenty decayed fishermen, with weekly stipends from a grant of the crown, subsists here; and there are various almshouses. Some remains are still to be seen of convents of the Dominicans, Franciscans, Carmelites, and other monastic establishments, which were suppressed at the reformation. The town is divided into eight wards, formerly four leets. It consists of four principal streets, parallel with each other, and a number of narrow lanes called rows, intersecting the others at right angles. Its figure is quadrangular, extending about a mile in length, and half a mile in breadth. The streets are lighted with gas, and well supplied with water. The quay is reckoned the longest and finest in the kingdom, being in some parts 150 yards in breadth, and containing in the centre a noble promenade, planted on each side with trees. On the quay stands the town-hall, a handsome building, with a portico in front, ornamented with Tuscan pillars. It contains a council-chamber, much decorated, and having an embossed ceiling of stucco, and over the chimney-piece a full-length portrait of George II., in a superb frame. A little to the north of the town-hall is the Star inn, remarkable as having been the residence of Bradshaw, president of the high court of justice which condemned Charles I., and some of the apartments are richly, though antiquesly ornamented with wood-carving and tapestry. The theatre is a neat building, erected in 1778, which is conveniently arranged and fitted up for dramatic exhibitions, during a part of the summer months. On the beach is an edifice called the bath-house, in which are salt-water baths, with every requisite accommodation; and adjoining is a large and pleasant public room, for balls and concerts, built in 1788. A jetty, raised on piles, (such as are used for the foundation of the piers of a bridge,) extends into the sea to the distance of 456 feet, with a breadth of twenty-four feet, forming an agreeable promenade in fine weather. Not far from the jetty, on a spot called the South Denes, are barracks for troops, built from the design of Mr. Pilkington, at the expense of 120,000*l.* Here also stands the naval pillar, erected in 1817, in commemoration of Admiral Lord Nelson, consisting of a fluted column, 140 feet in height, surmounted by a statue of Britannia. A handsome suspension chain-bridge over the river Bure, was built by Mr. R. Cory, at the cost of somewhat less than 4000*l.*; and a new road over it, leading to Norwich, has since been completed, an act of parliament having been obtained for that purpose. The principal commerce of Yarmouth is carried on with the ports of the Baltic, the Mediterranean, and Portugal; to which may be added the coasting-trade in coal, corn, and other articles from the north. The herring and mackerel fisheries (particularly the former), are prosecuted extensively; and there are large establishments for curing herrings, quantities of which are sent for sale to the metropolis and elsewhere. There were, according to the returns to parliament in 1829, 585 vessels belonging to this port, whose burden altogether amounted to 41,134 tons. A duty on coal, producing about 8000*l.* a-year, is levied under the direction of twelve commissioners, for the purpose of keeping the piers and jetties in repair. The navigation off the coast is extremely hazardous, and two floating lights are constantly maintained in Yarmouth Roads, for the benefit of mariners. The only manufacture in this town of importance is that of silk goods and erapes, introduced from Norwich a few years ago; besides which, there are yards for ship-building, rope-walks, and breweries. Yarmouth gives the title of Earl to the Marquis of Hertford.

YARMOUTH, or SOUTH YARMOUTH, co. Southampton.

London 97 m. SW. Pop. 564. M. D. Frid.
Fair, July 25. Memb. of Pt. 2.

A borough, market-town, and parish, in the hundred of West Medina liberty, Isle of Wight, situated at the eastern point of the mouth of the river Yar, from which the name is derived, and directly opposite to the town of Lymington, with which there is a constant communication. The town consists of several well-built streets, the houses having a very neat appearance, from being constructed with freestone. The market-house, a plain substantial building, has an upper apartment, appropriated for the uses of the corporation and all public business; baths, with every convenience, have recently been established. Yarmouth has several times suffered severely by the attacks of the French; and in the reign of Richard II. they entirely destroyed it by fire, having first pillaged it. The trade of this place is not extensive, the chief article of exportation being a fine white sand obtained here, used in making glass and earthenware; the imports, coals and timber. The town is governed by a mayor and twelve capital burgesses, with a steward, town-clerk, &c.; it was originally incorporated by a charter, granted by Balwyn de Kedvers, Earl of Devon, and confirmed by Edward I., but that under which the corporation is at present constituted, was granted by James I. The borough returned members to Parliament as early as the time of Edward I., but the privilege was for some time neglected, and not renewed until the reign of Elizabeth. The living is a dis. rectory in the archdeaconry and diocese of Winchester; certified value 50*l.*; patron (1829) John Calland, Esq. In the church, dedicated to St. James, is a fine Parian marble statue of Sir Robert Holmes, who was governor of the Isle of Wight. Here are places of worship for Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists; and a Lancasterian school, supported by voluntary subscriptions. Thomas, Lord Holmes, bequeathed 30*l.* for charitable purposes. At the western extremity of the town are a castle and small fort, erected by Henry VIII., the latter consisting of a platform, with eight guns. From the foundations of buildings, visible in a place called the Lower Field, it is evident that Yarmouth was at one period of much greater extent than at present.

YARROW, shire of Selkirk, S.

P. T. Selkirk (35½) 8 m. W. Pop. 1249.

A parish eighteen miles in length, sixteen at its greatest breadth, and estimated to contain 60,000 acres. Of this extensive district the ancient parish of Duchroire forms the eastern portion, that of Kirkhope the south-eastern, and that of St. Mary (annexed at the reformation) the western. The surface is mountainous, but interspersed with fertile valleys, which, with some of the declivities, are cultivated, though the prevailing employment of the inhabitants is in rearing sheep, of which there are usually from 50,000 to 60,000 upon the hills. The view on every side is broken by lofty mountains, and of these the range termed the Blackhouse Heights, rises in considerable grandeur to an elevation of 2370 feet above the level of the sea; whilst the windings of those celebrated classic streams, the Etterick and the Yarrow, contribute to enhance the romantic beauty of the scenery. The Yarrow has its source near Moffat Water, but is soon absorbed in the Lochs of the Lowes and St. Mary, on the western boundary, whence it again emerges, and with increased rapidity takes an easterly course of fifteen miles to a junction with the equally-rapid Etterick near Selkirk: "The Braes of Yarrow," renowned in Scottish pastoral, are extremely picturesque, especially at Newark Castle, which some aver was the birthplace of the fair Mary Scott, "The Flower of Yarrow," while others prove that she was born at Dryhope in this parish. Though now quite destitute of natural wood, this district still retains the ancient appellation of Etterick Forest, the remains of which, principally oak, lie hidden in the mosses; there are, however, at Hanging Shaw, a venerable but ruinous seat of the Murrays, as well as upon several farms, some flourishing and very extensive plantations. The living is in the presbytery of Selkirk and synod of Merse and Teviotdale; patron, the Crown and the Marquis of Lothian. The present church was erected in 1640 on a more central situation than St. Mary's, the ancient parish church, but the old cemetery of the latter is still used. Vestiges of numerous feudal castles and mansions are discernible; and on the summit of Kersope Hill stood a monument, termed Tait's Cross, but the purpose for which it was erected is unknown. It is recorded that on and near its site, in 1722, were seen at one view more than 12,000 ewes folded and milked.

A township in the parish of Kirk Newton, and west division of Glendale ward, formerly a place of consequence, and the scene of the battle of Geteringe, fought in 1415, between a body of Scots, headed by Sir Robert Umfraville and the Earl of Westmorland, in which 430 English discomfited 4000 Scots, and took 160 prisoners. At the south side of the village is a stone column fourteen feet high, erected to commemorate the event. A short distance hence is a lofty conical mountain called the Bell, rising upwards of 2000 feet above the plain below. It commands a very extensive prospect over the surrounding parts of the county, and into Scotland. On different parts of the elevation are the remains of Druidical altars, and British fortifications, from which it is supposed to have been the residence of British chiefs, previously to the invasion of the Romans.

YELL, shire of Orkney and Shetland, S.

Pop. including Fetlar 3315.

One of the Shetland islands, the next largest of the group to Mainland, from which it is separated by Yell Sound, as it is from Unst by the strait of Blommel, and from Fetlar by Colgrave Sound. It is about twenty miles in length, and from six to twelve in breadth, exhibiting a tolerably level surface, but a bold and rugged coast, indented by many bays or voes, of which Bura, Hamma, Refirth, and Whalfirth are the principal, and form secure harbours. There are a few small patches of arable near the shore, but the interior affords only a coarse pasturage for sheep and cattle, and a plentiful supply of peats, in procuring which large trees are frequently discovered in the mosses, though scarcely a shrub is now to be seen upon the surface. The island was formerly divided into three parishes, North Yell, now in union with the isle and parish of Fetlar, South Yell, and Mid Yell, which are also united. These two livings are in the presbytery of Shetland and synod of Orkney; patron, Lord Dundas. There are two churches. The inhabitants are principally employed in the fisheries: those who work in the fields use a kind of spade instead of a plough, and as the men dig, their wives and children drag the harrows.

YELLAND CONYERS, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Lancaster (240) 9½ m. N b E. Pop. 261.

A township in the parish of Warton and hundred of Lonsdale, south of the sands, famous for the number and excellency of its orchards. It formerly was infested with adders, for the destruction of which the Middleton family kept numbers of peacocks.

YELLAND REDMAYNE, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Lancaster (240) 10 m. N b E. Pop. 227.

A township in the parish of Warton and hundred of Lonsdale, south of the sands.

P. T. Daventry (72) 10 m. N b E. Pop. 651.

A parish in the hundred of Guitsborough; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough; valued in K. B. 25l. 0s. 10d.; church ded. to All Saints; patron (1829) Earl Craven.

YELVERTON, co. Norfolk.

P. T. Norwich (108) 7 m. SE b S. Pop. 79.

A parish in the hundred of Henstead; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Norfolk and diocese of Norwich; valued in K. B. 10l.; patron, the Lord Chancellor.

YEOVIL, co. Somerset.

London 122 m. WSW. Pop. 4635. M. D. Frid. Fairs, June 28, for horses, bullocks, sheep, lambs, hogs, and wool; and Nov. 17, for horses, bullocks, sheep, and lambs. If Friday, Saturday, or Sunday, then held on Monday.

A market-town and parish in the hundred of Stone, which derives its name from the river Yeo or Ivel, on which it is situated, and over which there is a stone bridge. From the remains of Roman antiquities which have been discovered here, it has been supposed that a town stood on the site while the Romans governed Britain; but it has never been satisfactorily identified with any of the stations established by that people. The town, which is pleasantly situated on the south side of a range of hills, consists of several streets, some of which are spacious, and the houses are chiefly well-built of stone. It is governed by a corporation, consisting of a portreeve and eleven burghesses, with a mace-bearer and two constables. The portreeve acts as a magistrate, and holds a court of record once in three weeks; besides which a court-leet is held annually, under the authority of the lord of the manor. The living is a vicarage, with the perpetual curacy of Preston annexed, in the archdeaconry of Wells and diocese of Bath and Wells; valued in K. B. 18l.; and in the patronage of John Phelps, Esq., as lord of the manor. The church, deicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient Gothic structure, with a square tower at the west end. Adjoining the church is a building said to be of still greater antiquity, and which was probably a chapel, but is now used as a schoolroom. Here are also places of worship for Unitarians, Baptists, Independent and Wesleyan Methodists. A freeschool was originally founded in 1707, and has since been endowed by various benefactors, for the education of about thirty boys. An ancient almshouse exists, in which are supported a master, two wardens, and twelve poor men and women; and there is another charitable establishment called the Portreeves Almshouses, for four poor women. This place was formerly famous for its woollen manufacture, which has been superseded by that of gloves, chiefly of the finer kinds for ladies, made here at one period in great quantities; but this manufacture has suffered recently, from the introduction into use of French gloves, or from other causes. From the surrounding country abundance of butter, cheese, corn, and other articles of produce are sent to the markets for sale; and much butter especially is purchased, to be transmitted to the metropolis, where it is known by the appellation of Dorset butter.

YEOVILTON, co. Somerset.

P. T. Ilchester (121) 2 m. E. Pop. 255.

A parish in the hundred of Somerton, which also derives its name from the Yeo or Ivel, by which it is bounded on the south-west; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Wells and diocese of Bath and Wells; valued in K. B. 26l. 9s. 2d.; patron, the Bishop of Bath and Wells. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, has a well-built tower, containing five bells, and is supposed to have been built by Bishop Beckington, from his arms being painted in one of the windows.

YERBESTON, co. Pembroke, S. W.

P. T. Narbeth (255) 4 m. SW. Pop. 107.

A parish in the hundred of Narberth; living, a dis. rectory in the diocese of St. David's; valued in K. B. 5l. 3s. 9d., and in P. R. 100l. 9s. 9d. annually; patron, — Knox, Esq. Area of parish, 700 acres.

YERO, co. Brecon, S. W.

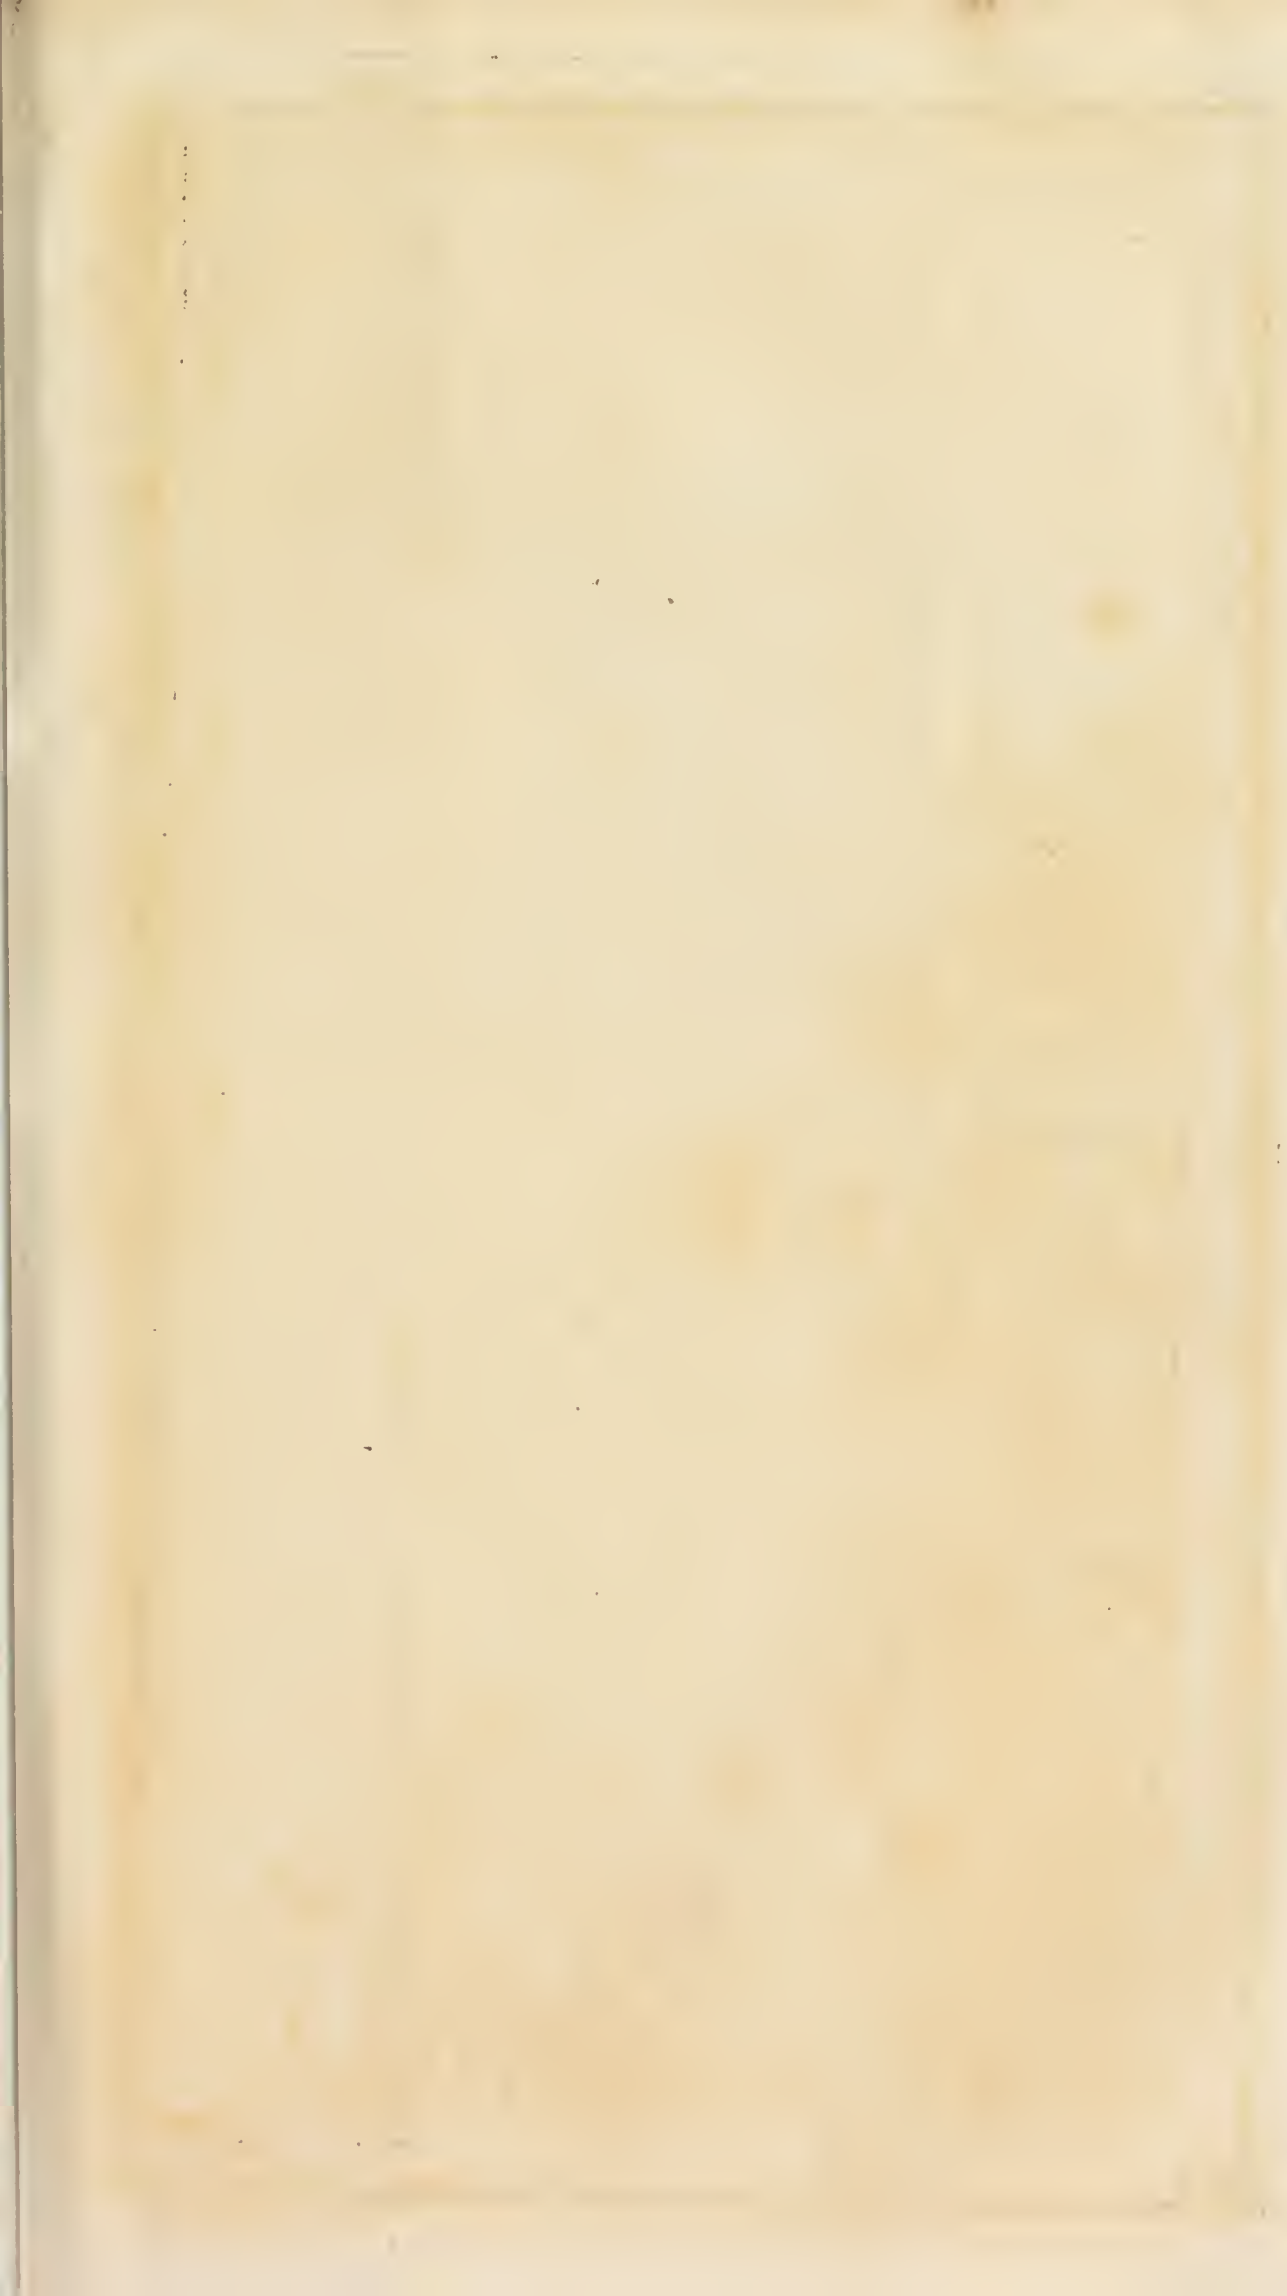

P. T. Abergavenny (146) 9 m. NW. Pop. 517.

A parcel in the parish of Llangynidr and hundred of Crickhowell.

YESTER, shire of Haddington, S.

P. T. Haddington (16) 4 m. S. Pop. 1100.

A parish, three miles in length, two in breadth, and extending about two miles more into Lammermuir, where the surface is hilly and barren, but the remainder is tolerably level and fertile. It is watered by the small river Gifford, upon the eastern bank of which is the village of the same name, a burgh of barony giving the title of Earl to the Marquis of Tweeddale, and said by some to be the birthplace of the celebrated John Knox. The living is in the presbytery of Haddington and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale; patron, the Marquis of Tweeddale, whose magnificent mansion, Yester House, was in this parish. The church was built in 1708, at Gifford, when the ancient church of St. Bothan was resigned to decay; the latter was made collegiate in 1420, for a provost, six prebendaries, and two choristers, and so continued till the reformation. At a place called Duncan's-Law, there was a chapel, dedicated to St. Nicholas, and a considerable portion of the ancient castle of Bothan is still existing; it was the last fortress that surrendered to General Gray, who was sent into Scotland by the Protector Somerset.

YETHOLM, shire of Roxburgh, S.

P. T. Kelso (42) 9 m. SE. Pop. 1280.
Fairs, July 5 and Oct. 31.

A parish and village in the district of Kelso, the latter of which is divided into two parts, termed Town Yetholm and Kirk Yetholm, by Bowmont Water, and has for ages been inhabited by tinkers and gipsies. The parish is four miles and a half in length, two in breadth, and bounded on the east and south by the English border. The surface is diversified with verdant hills, upon which vast flocks of sheep and lambs are pastured, and there are extensive haughs on the banks of the Bowmont, with a considerable quantity of land under tillage. The living is in the presbytery of Kelso and synod of Merse and Teviotdale; patron, Wanchope, of Niddrie. There are several schools in the parish, besides the parochial school, which has a salary of 300 merks, with a school-house and dwelling.

A maritime county, far exceeding in size any other in the kingdom, bounded on the north by Westmorland and Durham, on the east by the German Ocean, on the south by the river Humber and the counties of Lincoln, Nottingham, Derby, and Chester; and on the west by Lancashire and Westmorland. From the latter counties it is chiefly separated by hills and moorlands, which have been termed the English Apennines, and its northern border line is formed throughout by the river Tees. Its most ancient inhabitants of whom we have any account were the British tribes called Brigantes, whose dominion extended over a wide tract of country. On the invasion of Britain by the Romans this region was overrun by Ostorius Scapula; and its inhabitants, being defeated by Petilius Cerealis, at length submitted to Agricola. In the reign of Antoninus Pius the Brigantes revolted against the Roman government, but they were reduced to subjection by Lollius Urbicus. During the later period of the Roman ascendancy in Britain this county formed a part of the province called Maxima Cæsa-riensis; and after the departure of the Romans it was, from its situation, peculiarly exposed to the predatory incursions of the Picts and Scots. This county was intersected from south to north by the Watling Street, which was crossed obliquely by the Ermyrn Street, entering Yorkshire on the south-east, and by the Rykniel Street, entering it on the south-west. In this spacious county were several Roman stations: as Eboracum (York), Catarracton (Catterick), Latare (Bowes), Olicana (Ilkley), Isuriun (Aldborough), Cambodunum (Slack), Calcaria (Tadcaster), Prætorium, or Prætorium, probably near Flamborough Head; Legiolium, at Castleford, near the confluence of the rivers Aire and Calder, and Ad Danum, supposed to be at or near Doncaster. At York, and in other places have been found a multitude of inscribed stones, altars, urns, coins, and other Roman antiquities. After the invasion of Britain by the Anglo-Saxons this county formed the principal part of the kingdom of Deira, in which the Jutes made some settlements in the fifth century; but the Britons retained the sovereignty till about 560, when they were conquered by Ella. In 617 Deira was united with the northern kingdom of Bernicia, under the name of Northumbria. This kingdom, after undergoing various revolutions, was ravaged by the Danes, under Ingvar and Hubba, in 867, and subsequently colonised by that people. Alfred the Great obliged the Northumbrian Danes to acknowledge his supreme authority, but their chiefs still retained their regal title; and they made war against Edward the Elder and his successor Athelstan, by whom they were conquered; but the complete subjugation of Northumbria did not take place till the reign of Edred, after which it formed a province under the government of an Earl, who resided at York. The Danes invaded this part of the country in 993; and again in 1013, it was also the scene of hostilities between Earl Tostigh and his brother Harold, the last Saxon king of England, who, immediately after his victory over Tostigh and his confederates, was himself defeated and slain at the battle of Hastings. After the Norman conquest an insurrection took place against William I. in this part of the kingdom, through the influence of the Anglo-Saxon nobility, which terminated in the destruction of the principal insurgents, and the utter desolation of the country, which is said to have continued entirely uncultivated during nine years: and William of Malmesbury, the historian, who wrote in the reign of Stephen, reports that in his time, the whole tract between York and Durham was still a mere desert. In 1138 Yorkshire was ravaged by the Scots, under their king David I., who, however, was completely defeated at Northallerton. The Scots also invaded this part of the kingdom in 1318, and again in the following year, when they gained a victory over the English at Myton. Scarborough Castle was besieged by the barons confederated against Edward II., and his favourite Gaveston, who, being taken prisoner on the capture of that fortress, was shortly after executed. In 1321 Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, the turbulent uncle of Edward II., was defeated and taken prisoner, with other insurgent barons, at Boroughbridge, and a few days after beheaded at Pontefract. In 1347 David II., of Scotland, having made an incursion into Yorkshire, was on his retreat defeated and taken prisoner at Nevill's Cross, near Durham. In 1408 the insurgent Earl of Northumberland was vanquished and killed at the battle of Bramham Moor. During the conflicts between the royal houses of Lancaster and York battles were fought at Wakefield, and at Towton, in the latter of which more than 36,000 men are said to have fallen in the field. The religious innovations which took place in the reign of Henry VIII., occasioned an insurrection in Yorkshire, called the Pilgrimage of Grace, which was with some difficulty suppressed by the Duke of Norfolk; and similar insurrections occurred in 1537 and 1548, but they were alike unsuccessful. The civil war under Charles I. may be considered as having commenced in Yorkshire, by the unsuccessful attempt of the king to gain possession of Hull, in 1642. Subsequently battles were fought at Guisborough, Selby, and Marston Moor; after the last of which engagements, York, and several other royal garrisons were successively taken by the parliamentarians. In 1757 riots took place in various parts of Yorkshire, in consequence of new regulations then made for raising the militia; and in 1812, and again in 1819, disturbances occurred in consequence of the sufferings of the labouring classes engaged in the manufactures of that district. This county, from its vast extent and variety of surface, may be considered as an epitome of the whole kingdom, with regard to soil, products, and aspect of country. Its local peculiarities may be more distinctly specified by describing them with reference to the three Ridings, or grand divisions of the county. These districts are named, from their relative situations, the North, West, and East Ridings. The North Riding includes all that part of the county extending from the shore of the German Ocean to the border of Westmorland, and separated on the south from the East Riding by the rivers Hartford and Derwent, by the Ouse, from the Ainstey of York, and partly by the latter river and by the Ure from the West Riding, the remainder of the boundary-line being imaginary. The sea-coast of this riding, from Scarborough nearly to the mouth of the Tees, is bold and rocky, the cliffs rising from sixty to 150 feet, and at Stoupe Brow, about seven miles south of Whitby, the height is not less than 890 feet. The surface generally rises rapidly, from the shore towards the interior, to about the height of 400 feet, at which level is a considerable extent of fertile soil. Further inland the hills become loftier, till they reach the elevated tract called the Eastern Moorlands, which, however, are intersected by several fine and fertile vales. Near the borders of this district some of the heights command noble and extensive prospects, and here is the mountain called Roseberry Topping, a noted landmark, 1020 feet high. North-westward of these mountains is the vale of Cleveland, a fertile district, bounded on the north by the river Tees. Part of the extensive vale of York is comprised within the North Riding, lying between the Eastern and Western Moorlands. The latter are of much greater elevation and of a bolder character than the former, but intersected by a multitude of fertile vales, watered by numerous streams. The West Riding, which is by much the largest of the three, includes all the southern part of the county eastward of the river Ouse, by which it is divided from the East Riding. It exhibits considerable diversity of surface, but consists principally of three districts. That part which is included within the vale of York is level and marshy, except in a few places where there are low sandhills. The more central parts of this riding consist of gentle eminences, exhibiting much fine scenery. The western and north-western parts are rugged and mountainous, here being some of the loftiest mountains of South Britain, particularly Ingleborough and Wharfedale. Interspersed among these heights are several picturesque and beautiful valleys, the most extensive of which are those of Wharfedale, Niddedale, and the vale of the Aire. In the north-west part of the riding is the district of Craven, where are several small lakes, one of which, called Malham Water is situated on a lofty moor. The East Riding, the landward borders of which have been already specified, is bounded on the east by the sea, and on the south by the Humber. This district is not only smaller than the two preceding, but its characteristic features are also less strongly marked. The central part of the riding from north to south, called the Wolds, consists of a lofty range of chalk-hills, extending from the banks of the Humber, westward of Hull, to the vicinity of New Malton, on the Derwent, and thence eastward to the German Ocean, where they terminate in the lofty promontory of Flamborough Head. To the south, along the coast, the surface in general is flat and marshy, and near Hornsea is a lake called Hornsea Mere. This tract terminates in the low narrow headland called Spurn Head, westward of which is Sunk Island, consisting of fertile meadowland, nearly 5000 acres in extent, which has been chiefly recovered from the sea since the beginning of the seventeenth century. The western part of this riding, usually termed the Levels, is a fruitful tract, but the scenery is tame and uninteresting. The Ainstey of York, situated between the three ridings, though comparatively inconsiderable in the point of size, may be regarded as constituting a fourth distinct division. It is situated at the junction of the three Ridings, and is divided from the North riding by the rivers Nid and Ouse, from the East riding by the latter river, and from the West riding principally by the Wharfe. The Ainstey was anciently a forest, and in the character of its surface and scenery it corresponds with the other parts of the vale of York. This county is furnished with abundance of rivers, the natural disposition of which is somewhat peculiar and interesting. They in general rise in the mountainous borders of the county, on every side except towards the sea, and uniting as their streams flow toward the centre, like the veins of a spreading leaf, at length terminate in one main trunk, which opens into the estuary of the Humber. The most important of these rivers are the Northern Ouse, the Swale, the Ure, the Wharfe, the Derwent, the Aire, the Calder, the Don, or Dun, and the Rother; besides which the Tees skirts the northern border of the county, and the Ribble, which soon passes into Lancashire, has its source in the western mountains of this county. The Swale rises in the north western moorlands, and, passing through Swaledale, flows eastward by Richmond to Kirkby Fletham, whence it takes a winding course south-eastward to its junction with the Ure, at Myton, a little beyond which it takes the name of Ouse, from a little stream which there unites with it; after receiving the Nid, it then flows on to York, and, turning southward, after being joined by the Wharfe above Cawood, it resumes its south-eastern course, and making several windings, flows by Selby and Goole into the Humber, receiving about midway between the place last mentioned the waters of the Derwent. The Ure has its source about five miles southward of that of the Swale, and flowing eastward by Askrigg and Middleham, then takes its course south-eastward, by Masham and Ripon, to meet the Swale below Aldborough. The Wharfe rises at the base of the Craven hills, and flowing south-eastward through Wharfedale, passes Otley and Tadcaster, to form a confluence with the Ouse above Cawood. The Derwent rises in the eastern moorlands, a few miles from Scarborough, and runs southward by New Malton, then, after forming the boundary between the East and North Ridings, it crosses the western portion of the former, falling into the Ouse near Barnby. The Aire, a river of considerable size, has its source at Malham, eastward of Settle, and passes south-eastwards, by Skipton and Leeds, to join the Calder, and then proceeds to Snaith; and after receiving the Don, takes a turn towards the north-east to meet the Ouse. The Calder, which rises on the borders of Lancashire, takes a tortuous course by Dewsbury and Wakefield to join the Ouse. The Don, rising on the confines of Derbyshire, passes by Sheffield and then by Rotherham, where it receives the Rother, and continues its course north-eastward, by Doncaster, to its junction with the Aire, below Snaith. There are several small streams, which rise in the northern part of the county and fall into the Tees. Among those which empty themselves immediately into the sea is the Eske, which has its source in the eastern moorlands, and, passing eastward, enters the German Ocean at Whitby. The climate of this county varies in different parts; mists and fogs being frequent in the marshy level districts, while the heights are cold, and the air is frequently disturbed by tempests; notwithstanding which, the inhabitants are generally robust and healthy. Keen easterly winds commonly prevail in the spring, and during the greater part of the summer, and their concurrence with the western gales from the opposite side of the island, occasion frequent rain-storms in the mountainous part of this county. The soil of the North Riding, which is chiefly of brownish clay and loam, and the hills along the coast, abound with argillaceous schistus, or alum shale. In the district of Cleveland the soil is a fertile clay and fine red sand, and in the Ainstey of York its composition is variable, but it is generally fertile. Swaledale contains very rich land, while the eastern moorlands are covered with morasses, peat-bogs, or loose rocks. In the West Riding the soil varies in quality, from a deep strong clay, or loam, to barren peat-earth. In the Wolds of the East Riding are 300,000 acres of sheep-walks, the soil of which is a light gravelly loam; and near the borders of the Humber is found strong clay-loam, remarkable for its fertility. In the North Riding, a considerable part of the vale of York, and the district between it and the sea, is under tillage. That portion of the West Riding extending westward from the river Ouse to Leeds, Wakefield, and Rotherham, consists principally of arable land, but little of which is found in other parts of the riding. In the East Riding most of the land in the Wolds is under tillage, and also about one-third of the land in Holderness and Howdenshire, but more in the former than the latter. Wheat is raised in many parts in large quantities, the quality of which is good, especially in Cleveland; barley is largely cultivated in the Wolds; and in Ryedale, and other parts of the North Riding, big and bear are sometimes raised; rye is also cultivated on the lighter soils, sometimes, together with wheat. Oats form a general crop in the North and West Ridings, and in the latter this grain is frequently made into bread. Peas are chiefly raised in the North and East Ridings, and beans on the stronger soils. Swedish and other turnips are cultivated in various parts, and in the East Riding several kinds of cabbages are grown for feeding cattle. The culture of potatoes is general, and on the borders of the Ouse, and in Holderness, large quantities are raised for exportation to London. Rape is raised for seed in the North and West Ridings, flax in several parts, woad in the neighbourhood of Selby, mustard around York, and teasels in the wapentake of Barkstone Ash, in the West Riding. This county has long been noted for the excellence of its breed of horses, especially those of the North and East Ridings. The coach and saddle horses are generally sold at the fairs of Beverley, Malton, York, and Howden, and distributed to different parts of the kingdom, and often sent to the continent. The West Riding is famous for a breed of long-horned cattle, called the Craven breed; but in the northern part of the vale of York, and in Cleveland, the cattle are of the short-horned kind, called the Teeswater breed, known in the south of England under the appellation of Holderness cattle. Sheep kept here are of various kinds: on the Wolds those of the South-Down variety have been introduced; on the moors of the West Riding is a breed of sheep, supposed to be indigenous, called the Penistone breed; and great numbers of Scots sheep are fed in the low parts of the county. In the moorland dales bees are often kept in sufficient quantities to make their honey a commercial article of some importance, as from its rich flavour it fetches a high price in the metropolis. Within this county were anciently the royal forests of Galtres, Hardwick, Arkelgarthdale, Knaresborough, Pickering, Wharfedale, Swynden, Okeden, Harlow, Fullwith, and Coverdale, and the chase of Hatfield, all which have been alienated from the crown and disafforested. In the West Riding is grown much oak and ash timber, as also in the North Riding, where likewise may be found elm, birch, and alder. In the Wolds are plantations of larch, different kinds of firs, and various deciduous trees. The mineral productions of Yorkshire are various and important, including coal, iron, and lead ores; alumstone, marble, limestone, and alabaster. In the West Riding is one of the most extensive coal-fields in the kingdom, extending westward from a line, stretching from north to south, between Ripon and Tickhill. The coal-mines are most numerous between the rivers Aire and Calder, and to the south about Barnsley and Sheffield. Ironstone is found in great quantities in the eastern moorlands, and some strata of this ore are worked in the vicinity of Whitby. At Grassington, in the West Riding, are considerable lead-mines, and there are others in Swaledale, Arkendale, and other parts of the western moorlands. Copper-ore has been found in the North Riding, at Richmond and at Middleton Tyas, where mines existed about the middle of the last century. The hills of Cleveland, and the rocks on the coast of the North Riding, consist largely of strata of aluminous slate, and near Whitby aluminous works have been long established. Marble occurs in the western mountains, some of which resembles in its veins and texture the Derbyshire marble; but it is used only for making lime, or other common purposes. Alabaster, or gypsum, is met with in the North Riding; and there are quarries from which it is procured near Thornton bridge, on the Swale: it is also found in the other ridings. Near Knaresborough occurs a bed of Strontian earth; and about Whitby are found the fossils called cornua ammonis, with some other curious productions of a similar kind. The manufactures of Yorkshire, especially those of the West Riding, are of great national importance, both as the source of wealth, and on account of the occupation they afford to numbers of the lower classes of the people. Woollen cloths and stuffs, of various descriptions, have long been manufactured in the extensive district around Halifax, Bradford, Leeds, Wakefield, and Huddersfield. The rivers Aire and Calder, by which this part of the country is intersected, are advantageous, not only by the facilities they afford, in conjunction with canals, for the transport of manufactures and raw materials, but also especially by supplying currents of water for driving machinery, and for various necessary manipulations. This manufacture formerly was principally confined to the coarser kinds of cloth, but now broad cloths and kerseymeres are largely made; and, likewise, blankets, carpets, baizes, serges, shalloons, camlets, moreens, and other articles, in great variety. There are also large factories for making coarse linens and Manchester cotton goods. Sheffield, from an early period, has been noted for cutlery and hardware, besides which it has now iron and brass foundries. Among the other manufactures of Yorkshire may be mentioned pottery, bricks, and tiles, hair-cloth, tanned leather, ropes, and sail-cloth. Hull, in this county, is one of the most important of our seaports, and it also contains the ports of Whitby, Scarborough, Bridlington, and Goole. The West Riding is intersected by several canals, for the convenience of commercial intercourse with other parts of the kingdom, and with the sea. Off the coast are found abundance of fish of various kinds, the taking of which furnishes employment for an industrious and hardy race of fishermen, inhabitants of sea-side villages, who often pursue their prey to great distances, and furnish extensive supplies of provision for the country. Some of the ports, especially Hull and Whitby, share to a great extent in the Greenland fishery and the commerce of the Baltic. The North Riding contains the wapentakes of West Gilling, East Gilling, Langbaugh, Hang West, Hang East, Hallikeld, Birdforth, Ryedale, Pickering Lythe, Bulmer, and Allertonshire, and the liberty of Whitby Strand. The West Riding contains the wapentakes of Ewcross, Staincliffe, Claro, Skyrack, Barkstone Ash, Morley, Osgoldcross, Agbrigg, Staincross, and Strafforth and Tickhill. The East Riding contains the wapentakes of Buckrose, Dickering, Ouse and Derwent, Harthill (including the divisions of Bainton Beacon, Holme Beacon, Hunsley Beacon, and Wilton Beacon), and Holderness (including the middle, north, and south divisions), and also Hullshire and Howdenshire: the Ainstey of York is also considered as belonging to this riding. In this county are the city of York, and the boroughs of Northallerton, Beverley, Boroughbridge, Aldborough, Hedon, Kingston-upon-Hull, Knaresborough, New Malton, Pontefract, Richmond, Ripon, Scarborough, and Thirsk. The market-towns in Yorkshire are Abberford, Askrigg, Barnsley, Bawtry, Bedale, Bingley, Bradford, Bridlington, Dewsbury, Doncaster (formerly a borough), Great Driffield, Easingwold, Gisburn, Goole, Guisborough, Halifax, Harewood, Hawes, Helmsley, Howden, Huddersfield, Keighley, Kirkby Moorside, Leeds, Leyburn, Masham, Otley, Pateley Bridge, Patrington, Penistone, Pickering, Pocklington, Reeth, Ripley, Rotherham, Sedbergh, Selby, Settle, Sheffield, Sherburn, Skipton, Snaith, South Cave, Stokesley, Tadcaster, Thorne, Wakefield, Market Weighton, Wetherby, Whitby, and Yarm; besides which may be mentioned, Cawood, Cottingham, Hornsea, Middleham, and Tickhill, the markets of which are discontinued or inconsiderable. Four members are returned to Parliament for the county, two for the city of York, and two for each of the boroughs. The whole of this county is within the diocese of York, except a part of the North Riding, which belongs to that of Chester. It consists of three archdeaconries in the former diocese, namely, that of York or the West Riding, that of the East Riding, and that of Cleveland; that part of the county which belongs to Chester is in the archdeaconry of Richmond. Yorkshire, besides its magnificent cathedral and several noble churches, contains extremely interesting remains of monastic edifices; among which are the abbeys of Kirkstall, Selby, Roche, Fountains, Byland, Rievaulx, and Whitby; and the priories of Bolton and Knaresborough. There are also several remarkable castellated relics of antiquity, as Conisborough, Cawood, Harewood, Knaresborough, Pontefract, Skipton, Richmond, Skelton, and Clifford's Tower, at York. Among the family mansions in this county, Temple Newsame, near Leeds, belonging to the Marquis of Hertford; and Gilling Castle, the seat of the Fairfaxes, are remarkable as ancient structures: and in the number of those of a later date may be mentioned, Wentworth House (Earl Fitzwilliam's), Wentworth Castle (Wentworth Vernon's, Esq.), Sandbeck Park (Earl of Scarborough's), Methley Park (Earl of Mexborough's), Harewood House (Earl of Harewood's), Allerton-Mauleverer (Lord Stourton's), Castle Howard (Earl of Carlisle's), Stanwick (Duke of Northumberland's), Mulgrave Castle (Lord Mulgrave's), Londesborough (Duke of Devonshire's), and Hornby Castle (belonging to the Duke of Leeds). Besides several medicinal mineral springs, as those of Scarborough, Knaresborough, Askerne, and Harrogate, this county contains a dropping or petrifying well, at Knaresborough, the water of which deposits an immense quantity of calcareous earth, thus seemingly turning every thing it flows over into stone; and a curious ebbing or intermitting natural fountain at Giggleswick. Among the northern and western mountains are some singular caves, and subterraneous passages.

YORK, co. York.

London 196 m. NNW. Pop. of City 20,787. Of Ainstey 8740. M. D. Tues., Thurs., and Sat.; the last chiefly for corn. Fairs, Whit-Mon., St. Peter's, Lammas, and every fortnight, for horses and cattle; every month, for leather; every Thurs., from Lady-day to Michaelmas, for wool; Sat. bef. Michaelmas, Martinmas, Christmas, Lady-day, Lammas-day, and Whit-Mon., for flax; and week bef. Christmas, a large horse-fair. Memb. of Pt. 2.

An ancient city, having exclusive jurisdiction over the district called the Ainstey of York, which constitutes a distinct county. The ancient Britons had probably a considerable settlement at this place, and the Romans, after their conquest of the country, established a colony here, which Richard of Cirencester says was called Sexta, from its being the station of the sixth legion (Legio Sexta), termed the Victorious; and that it was afterwards distinguished by the presence of many emperors, and raised to the privileges of a municipal city. It is called, in the writings of Ptolemy and Antoninus, Eboracum, an appellation probably derived from its British name. The Emperor Adrian resided here in 124; Severus died in this city in 212, and a memorial of his funeral obsequies still subsists, at a place on the west side of the city, where are three sand-hills, called Severus's Hills. Here also died the Emperor Constantius Chlorus in 307. Many traces of Roman residence have at various times been brought to light, as altars, urns, and coins; and there are some remains of Roman architecture. After the conquest of this part of the island by the Anglo-Saxons, this city became the metropolis of the kingdom of Northumbria; and Edwin, the first Christian king of that region, founded a church, which he dedicated to St. Peter, and made it an episcopal see; though after his death, in 633, Christianity was suppressed; but it was again introduced by King Oswald, and on the subsequent division of England into two ecclesiastical provinces, York was constituted the seat of an archbishopric. To the Saxons this city doubtless owes its present name, which may be remotely deduced from the ancient appellation, Eboracum; but it appears to have been called, at different periods, Eoforwic and Euervic, signifying a street or town on the Ure, Eure, or Yore, as the Ouse at this place was anciently denominated, and from the river it is extremely probable that the British, Roman, and Saxon appellations were alike derived. York, in the ninth century, was devastated, and afterwards colonised by the Danes, who retained possession of it till they were expelled by King Athelstan, who destroyed a castl which they had built here. At the time of the Norman conquest it was a large and flourishing city, and William I. stationed here a garrison for its defence. In 1069, Sweyn, King of Denmark, having invaded England, after being joined by the discontented Saxon nobility, advanced to York, and the Norman garrison, who held the castle, to prevent the enemy from establishing themselves in the suburbs, set the houses on fire, and the flames communicated to the city, of which the Danes and their confederates gained possession. It was soon after retaken by King William, who, suspecting the citizens of treachery, burnt their habitations and desolated the surrounding country, in so horrible a manner as to render it long unfit for the residence of man. The cathedral, which had been ruined in common with the other buildings, was first repaired and afterwards rebuilt by Thomas, Archbishop of York, and the city was gradually restored from its state of devastation. In 1088 a noble Benedictine monastery was erected, and dedicated to St. Mary; but in the reign of Stephen, this, and almost all the other edifices, public and private, were destroyed by an accidental fire. In 1138 David I., of Scotland, besieged York, but was repulsed by a body of forces commanded by the Bishop of Durham; when, however, a great number of the English were killed, and especially many ecclesiastics, who had joined the army. In the beginning of the reign of Richard I. a terrible massacre of the Jews took place in this city, when a number of them having sought refuge in the castle, where they were besieged by the populace, from whom they were unable to defend themselves, and expected no mercy, the men at length, with their own hands killed their wives and children, and then set the fortress on fire; thus destroying themselves and their property to disappoint the brutal malice and avarice of their enemies. In 1252 Alexander III. of Scotland, came to York, with a large retinue, to celebrate his nuptials with the daughter of Henry III. Parliaments were held here in 1297, 1298, 1299, 1314, 1318, 1322, 1328, 1332, 1335, and 1336. Richard II. in 1389 visited York to settle some disputes between the ecclesiastics and the civic magistrates, on which occasion he presented to the mayor his own sword, and gave him the title of Lord Mayor, which has ever since been borne by the chief magistrate of this city, in common only with those of London and Dublin. In the reign of Henry VIII. the art of printing was introduced here by Hugh Goes, son of a printer, at Antwerp. Charles I. took up his residence here in 1639, during his unfortunate expedition against the Scottish insurgents, with whom he was obliged, after making the concessions they demanded, to sign a treaty of peace. Hither also that monarch came before the commencement of the civil war; and here he held his court till his march to Nottingham, where the royal standard was first erected in hostility to the parliament. The city, having been made a royal garrison, was besieged in 1644 by Sir Thomas Fairfax and the Scottish Earl of Leven, who retreated on the approach of Prince Rupert; but, after the battle of Marston Moor, York was surrendered to the parliamentarians. In this city was ratified the treaty of compromise between the English parliament and the Scottish army, January 1, 1645, when the latter surrendered Charles I., who had committed himself to their custody, on the payment of 200,000*l.*, arrears due to them for military service. At the revolution in 1688, some spirited proceedings took place on the part of the friends of freedom, who, being apprehensive of an insurrection of the Catholics, made arrangements for the defence of the city; but they disgraced themselves by acts of violence towards the Catholic citizens, whose chapels and habitations they plundered and destroyed. The earliest existing charter of privileges granted to the citizens of York, appears to be that of Richard I. In the time of Edward I. the civic government was vested in a mayor, aldermen, and bailiffs, and the catalogue of the mayors has been preserved nearly perfect since 1273. Richard II. gave the citizens a new charter, confirming those of his predecessors, and granting additional privileges, which extended the jurisdiction of the corporation over the district of the Ainstey of York, and appointing two sheriffs instead of the three former bailiffs. The city is now governed, under a charter of Charles II., by a lord mayor, two sheriffs, the ex-sheriffs (called the twenty-four, though their number of course is variable), a recorder, and seventy-two common-councilmen, with two city-counsel, a town-clerk, a chamberlain, a sword-bearer, a mace-bearer, and other officers. The election of the lord mayor takes place annually, on the 15th of January, and he enters on office on the 3d of February, being chosen from the court of aldermen by the general body of the corporation. The sheriffs are elected from the citizens at large; the aldermen and common-councilmen are chosen by the corporation from among the citizens; as also are the chamberlains and the recorder; and city-counsel, who must be barristers, as likewise the town-clerk, are chosen by the corporation in general; but the election of the recorder and town-clerk must be confirmed by the king. Peculiar privileges belong to the lord mayor, aldermen, sheriffs, and all those who have served the office of sheriff, and who are collectively styled the upper house of the corporation. The lord mayor, the recorder, the counsel, and the aldermen, act as magistrates for the city and county of the city. Courts of assize are held twice a-year for the city, by the corporation, under a commission opened on the same day as that for the assizes for the county; and sessions are held quarterly before the lord mayor, aldermen, and recorder, in January, April,

July, and October; petty sessions are likewise held before the lord mayor, or one of the aldermen, three times a-week. A court of record, for the recovery of debts unlimited in amount, is held before the sheriffs, in the Guildhall, every Thursday. Members were returned to Parliament for this city in the forty-ninth year of Henry III., and the returns appear to have been regularly continued ever since the time of Edward I. The right of election is vested in the corporation and freemen, in number 3500; and the sheriffs are the returning officers. Elections for the county of York also take place in this city. York was made the see of a bishop under Paulinus, who converted the Northumbrians to Christianity in 627; but this prelate was obliged to abandon his station, in consequence of the wars with the Britons and Mercians, which proved fatal to his royal patron Edwin. The see, however, was ere long restored; and while it was held by the famous Wilfred, disputes for the dignity of primate of the whole kingdom occasioned a quarrel with Theodore, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Wilfred was deprived of his episcopal authority, which, however, he afterwards recovered. The contest was continued by successive archbishops of York and Canterbury, but it was at length terminated in favour of the latter, who acquired the title of Primate of All England, while the Archbishop of York was permitted to assume the title of Primate of England. This metropolitan is always lord high almoner to the king, and ranks above all dukes not of the royal family, and all the great officers of state except the lord chancellor. The archiepiscopal establishment is composed of the archbishop, the dean, and the sub-dean, four archdeacons, a chancellor, a precentor, a succentor, a registrar, four canons residentiary, twenty-four prebendaries, a chancellor of the diocese, and various inferior officers. The archbishopric is valued in K. B. 1610*l.*; the deanery of York is valued in K. B. 308*l.* 10*s.* 7*d.*; and is in the patronage of the King; the sub-deanery is valued in K. B. 50*l.* 14*s.* 2*d.*, and is in the patronage of the archbishop; the archdeaconry of York, valued in K. B. 90*l.* 3*s.* 1*d.*, that of Nottingham 61*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*, that of the East Riding, with the sinecure rectory of Mapleton, 61*l.* 14*s.* 7*d.*, and that of Cleveland 36*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*, are all in the patronage of the Archbishop; the chancellorship is valued in K. B. 85*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, the precentorship 96*l.* 4*s.* 2*d.*, the succentorship 8*l.*; all which, with the chancellorship of the diocese and registry, are in the patronage of the Archbishop. The prebends are likewise in the same patronage; and on a vacancy in the chapter, the dean appoints a residentiary from among the prebendaries of the cathedral. The cathedral church, a most magnificent structure, dedicated to St. Peter, was erected principally in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. The building having been destroyed by fire in the reign of King Stephen, it was partly re-erected by Archbishop Roger, about 1170 ; but the principal part of the existing structure was built in the reign of Edward I., the nave being begun at that period, but it was finished about 1330, by Archbishop Melton, who also erected the west front and angular towers. Archbishop Thoresby rebuilt the choir in 1361, and in 1370 the central tower was also rebuilt. The arrangement of this building is cruciform, having, besides the principal transept, a smaller transept between the great tower and the eastern extremity. The western front forms three compartments, separated by panelled buttresses, surmounted by crocketed pinnacles, and the whole is richly ornamented with statues and sculptures of various kinds. In the centre is the grand entrance, through a Gothic archway, ornamented with clustered pillars, mouldings, and canopied niches, with statues. Over the entrance is a noble west window, decorated with rich tracery, and surmounted by a canopy and parapet characteristically ornamented. There are lateral entrances to the aisles, over which are handsome windows with canopies. At the sides are square towers of uniform architecture, having double angular buttresses finely ornamented, and being crowned with an embattled parapet with crocketed pinnacles. The north and south sides of the cathedral are likewise ornamented with buttresses and pinnacles, and an open parapet. The transepts exhibit the early pointed style of architecture, and the entrance to the south transept is by a handsome porch, over which are three lancet-shaped windows and a large circular one, adorned with rich mouldings. The central tower is a massive square structure, with buttresses and windows on the sides, and battlements on its summit. At the east end of the edifice, which is decorated with buttresses, pinnacles, niches, and statues, is a noble window of nine lights, displaying beautiful tracery. In the interior, the nave, which is divided from the aisles by lofty clustered pillars supporting pointed arches, has a plain groined roof ; in the clerestory is a range of windows of five lights, with handsome tracery ; and in the aisles are corresponding windows of three lights. Between the nave and choir stands the lantern-tower, supported by four pointed arches springing from clustered pillars, the light from the windows above producing a fine effect. A richly-ornamented stone screen separates the nave from the choir, which last-mentioned beautiful portion of the building narrowly escaped entire destruction, in consequence of its being set on fire, February 2, 1829. This outrage was the act of Jonathan Martin, who being arrested, a judicial investigation of the affair took place, when it appeared that he was insane, and he has consequently been consigned to Bedlam for life. Every part of the timber-work of the choir, and the more delicate portions of the masonry having been injured or destroyed, the whole is now undergoing repair, or rather renovation, towards the expense of which the sum of 50,000*l.* was subscribed, chiefly within the county, shortly after the fire took place. Here are many interesting monuments, erected in the middle ages in commemoration of the archbishops and other distinguished persons, and also some fine monumental sculptures of a modern date. Connected with the north transept is the Chapter House, a fine Gothic structure of an octangular figure, having a lofty groined roof of wood-work, without any central pillar. The entire length of this cathedral is 524 feet, the length of the principal transept from north to south 222 feet, the length of the nave from the western door to the organ-screen 261 feet, the breadth of the nave and aisles 109 feet, that of the west front 140 feet, the height of the central tower 213 feet, and that of the western towers 196 feet. This city contains the parishes of All Saints, North Street, a dis. rectory ; valued in K. B. 4*l.* 7*s.* 11*d.* ; ann. val. P. R. 66*l.* ; and in the patronage of the Crown. All Saints, on the Pavement, a dis. rectory, with the vicarage of St. Peter the Little ; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 16*s.* 10½*d.* ; ann. val. P. R. 67*l.* 2*s.* ; in the same patronage with the preceding. St. Cross, a dis. rectory ; valued in K. B. 6*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.* ; ann. val. P. R. 104*l.* ; and in the same patronage with the preceding. St. Cutlibert, a dis. rectory with those of St. Helen on the Walls and All Saints, in Peaseholm ; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.* ; and in the same patronage with the preceding. St. Denis, in Walmgate, a dis. rectory, with the vicarage of St. George Naburn ; valued in K. B. 4*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.* ; ann. val. P. R. 80*l.* ; in the patronage of the Crown alternately with another. St. Helen's, Stonegate, a dis. vicarage ; valued in K. B. 4*l.* 5*s.* 5*d.* ; ann. val. P. R. 46*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* ; and in the same patronage with the preceding. St. Margaret, in Walmgate, a dis. rectory, with the vicarage of St. Peter-le-Willows ; valued in K. B. 4*l.* 9*s.* 9½*d.* ; ann. val. P. R. 60*l.* ; and in the same patronage with the preceding. St. Mary, Bishophill, Senior, first mediety, a rectory ; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.* ; ann. val. P. R. 95*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.* ; and in the alternate patronage of the Crown and the Dean and Chapter. the second mediety is also valued in K. B. 5*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.* ; ann. val. P. R. 146*l.* 4*s.* 5*d.* ; and in the same alternate patronage with the preceding. St. Mary, in Castlegate, a dis. rectory ; valued in K. B. 2*l.* 8*s.* 6½*d.* ; ann. val. P. R. 80*l.* ; and in the patronage of the Crown. St. Michael, in Spurriergate, a dis. rectory ; valued in K. B. 8*l.* 12*s.* 1*d.* ; ann. val. P. R. 58*l.* ; and in the same patronage with the preceding. St. Saviour is a dis. rectory, with that of St. Andrew ; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* ; ann. val. P. R. 127*l.* ; and in the same patronage with the preceding. Trinity, in Micklegate, is a perpetual curacy ; valued in P. R. 80*l.* ; and in the same patronage with the preceding. St. Laurence is a dis. vicarage, with the perpetual curacy of St. John ; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 10*s.* ; ann. val. P. R. 70*l.* ; and in the patronage of the Dean and Chapter. St. Martin, in Coney Street, is a dis. vicarage; valued in K. B. 4*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 110*l.*; and in the same patronage with the preceding. St. Michael Belfrey is a perpetual curacy, with the rectory of St. Wilfred; valued in K. B. 2*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 35*l.*; and in the same patronage with the preceding. St. Paul is a perpetual curacy, in the same patronage with the preceding. Trinity, in Goodramgate, is a dis. rectory, with St. John, Delpike, and the vicarage of St. Maurice without Monkbar; valued in K. B. 12*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.*; ann. val. P. R. 97*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.*; and in the patronage of the Archbishop. Trinity, in King Street, or Christ Church, is a dis. vicarage; valued in K. B. 8*l.*; ann. val. P. R. 41*l.* 8*s.*; and in the patronage of the Master of Well Hospital. St. Martin, in Micklegate, is a dis. rectory, with the vicarage of St. Gregory; valued in K. B. 5*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*; patron, Giles Earle, Esq. St. Olave, with St. Giles, is a perpetual curacy; valued in P. R. 50*l.*; patron, Lord Grantham. St. Sampson is a perpetual curacy; valued in P. R. 100*l.*; and in the patronage of the city of York. The church of All Saints, on the Pavement, is a structure of great antiquity, with an octangular lantern tower. The church of St. Helen's, Stonegate, rebuilt about the middle of the sixteenth century, is said to occupy the site of a Roman temple, dedicated to Diana; and the present edifice, which has undergone considerable alterations, has a handsome octagonal tower, and it contains a curious Norman font. The church of St. Martin, in Coney Street, is a handsome edifice in the later pointed style of architecture, with an embattled square tower at the west end. The church of Trinity, in Micklegate, is a building of considerable antiquity, partly in the Norman style, but with additions and alterations; and the church of Trinity, in Goodramgate, an ancient structure, has a window over the altar, in which are some fine specimens of painted glass. Here are also places of worship for the Baptists, Unitarians, Quakers, Independent Wesleyans, and Primitive Methodists, and Sandemanians; besides two chapels for the Roman Catholics. A free grammar-school was founded in 1546, by Robert Holgate, archbishop of this sec, who endowed it with 12*l.* a-year, and placed it under the patronage and control of his successors. There is another free grammar-school, originally founded in 1330, and refounded by royal charter of Philip and Mary, with an endowment from property which had belonged to a suppressed hospital, to which additions were made in the reign of Queen Elizabeth; and this institution is under the management of the Dean and Chapter, in whom is vested the appointment of the master. Besides these, there are the blue-coat school for boys, at St. Anthony's Hall, Peaseholm Green; the gray-coat school, for girls, at Monkgate, established in 1705; a charity-school in the parish of St. Cross, founded in 1773; a Laneasterian school, a national school, and a school for gratuitous instruction, supported by the Roman Catholics, besides some others. Among the hospitals and almshouses are that of St. Catherine, for four aged widows, who receive 18*l.* a-year each; an hospital for eight old women, with 5*l.* a-year each, founded by Dr. Colton in 1717; the Old Maids' hospital, instituted by Mary Wandesford in 1725, and endowed with considerable property, for the support of ten unmarried women, and the payment of 15*l.* a-year to a chaplain; Trinity hospital, founded in 1373, and re-established in the reign of Edward VI.; Lady Hewley's hospital, for ten aged women, with 15*l.* a-year each, founded in 1708; a similar institution, founded and endowed by Dorothy Wilson in 1717; Sir Arthur Ingram's hospital, at Bootham; Mason's hospital, founded in 1732; and Middleton's hospital, for twenty widows of poor freemen of the city. In Monkgate is the county hospital, established in 1740, and supported by subscription. The city dispensary, similarly supported, for the supply of advice and medicine to the sick and indigent, was established in 1828; at Bootham is a lunatic asylum, instituted in 1774; and at Heslington, about a mile from the city, is another institution for lunatics, called the Retreat, founded under the superintendence of the Society of Friends in 1796. There are likewise societies for the benefit of pregnant women, and other charitable purposes. York is agreeably situated on the eastern bank of the river Ouse, which here receives the little river Foss. The ancient walls erected for its defence still remain, with four gateways, or as they are provincially termed, bars; towards the south-west is Micklegate bar, leading to Tadcaster; to the north-west Bootham bar, leading towards Edinburgh; to the north-east Monkbar, leading to Malton and Scarborough; and on the south-east Walingate bar, leading to Beverley. Besides these, there were five smaller or postern gates, called North Street, Fishergate, Latherthorpe, Skeldergate, and Castlegate; the last two of which have been taken down. Over the Ouse and Foss are several bridges, one of which, across the former river, is a handsome stone bridge of three arches, erected in 1820, at the cost of 80,000*l.*; and another bridge has been built over the Foss. At the foot of the bridge over the Ouse is a spacious quay, close to which may be moored vessels of ninety tons burden. The navigation of this river was much neglected till the reign of George I., but since that time it has been greatly improved; as also has the city in general, many of the streets having been widened, well paved, and lighted with gas. Formerly some of the old houses were so constructed as that their upper stories overshadowed the streets and avenues, but numbers of these have been pulled down and rebuilt; and though the place has still an air of antiquity, the alterations and improvements have been productive of great advantage to its general appearance. The city is divided into four wards, respectively denominated from the four principal gates. The chief public buildings not already noticed, are the guildhall, the mansion-house, the castle, the theatre, the assembly-rooms, and the public library. The guildhall is a Gothic edifice, built about the middle of the fifteenth century, and adjoining it is the council-chamber, erected in 1819; the mansion-house for the residence of the lord mayor, is a large and handsome building, erected in 1726, and in the banquet-hall is a collection of fine portraits of royal and distinguished personages; the castle is a spacious building, used as the city gaol, and well adapted for its purpose; adjoining it is an artificial mount, which was the keep of the ancient castle, and on it stands a circular structure called Clifford's tower. The theatre, which was built in 1769, was improved and handsomely fitted up in 1822; in Blake Street are the assembly-rooms, splendidly furnished, with a front of ornamental architecture, executed from a design of Lord Burlington in 1730; the subscription library, established in 1794, consists of a large collection of books, for the reception of which a handsome building, including a news-room, was erected in 1811. There is a Philosophical Society, established in 1822, to which belongs a museum and a botanic garden, and a hall for the purposes of this institution has been recently erected. At Monkgate is an establishment for the academical education of the Unitarian Dissenters, called Manchester College, having been transferred hither from that place in 1803. A periodical musical festival, which takes place in York cathedral, was established in 1823; and the surplus profits are devoted to charitable purposes. At Lendal are hot, cold, and vapour baths, for the accommodation of the public; and there are cold baths near the New Walk. Races are held annually in May and August, on Kuavescmire, about a mile from the city, near the road to Tadcaster. The manufactures of this city are not very considerable, consisting principally of linen cloth and gloves: there are also iron and brass foundries, tobacco-pipe makers, flax-dressers, sacking and sailcloth manufacturers, rope and twine makers, mustard manufacturers, coach, lace, and fringe manufacturers, comb makers, and white and red-lead manufacturers. A great part of the trade arises from the demands of the local population; and great quantities of coal are brought hither by water. Large sales of cattle and horses take place once a fortnight, and at the annual fairs; and a market for leather is held once a month; corn, flax, and wool are also extensively sold, at several of the fairs. Near the city are the ruins of St. Mary's Abbey, founded for Benedictine monks, by William Rufus, the revenue of which at the dissolution amounted to 2085*l*. The hospital of St. Leonard, founded in the reign of William the Conqueror, had, at its dissolution, an annual revenue of 500*l*.; the crypt belonging to it still existing, is used for a wine-cellar. Fragments of the ancient city walls may still be traced in some places. Among the distinguished individuals to whom this city has given birth, were Flaccus Alcuinus, a learned ecclesiastic, patronized by Charlemagne; Henry Swinburne, an eminent lawyer, in the beginning of the seventeenth century; Thomas Gent, a learned printer, and writer on topography and antiquities; and John Flaxman, the celebrated sculptor. This city has usually given title of Duke to some member of the royal family; that title having been last borne by the late Prince Frederick, second son of George III.

YORION, co. Salop.

P. T. Shrewsbury (153) adjacent.

A township in the parish of Broughton and liberty of the town of Shrewsbury.

YOUGHAL, co. Cork, Munster, I.

Dublin, 154 m. SW. Pop. of St. Mary's 1905. Of To. 8969. Fairs, May 4 and Oct. 18. 2

A market, fair, post, and borough town, in the parish of St. Mary's and barony of Imokilly, situated on the western shore of the fine estuary of the Blackwater, which is crossed near this by a bridge of wood, erected from the designs of the late Alex. Nimmo. It is the largest town in the barony, stands upon a narrow patch of ground at the base of a steep and lofty hill, and is not calculated to admit of convenient extension. It is a place of antiquity, and retains still the admiration of many of the county gentry. The High Street is the great resort of persons in trade, but Devonshire Place is the Mall of Youghal; it consists of several handsome private dwellings, commanding a delightful marine prospect. Here are two churches, a Roman Catholic chapel, meeting-houses of Dissenters, a barrack, jail, custom-house, handsome assembly-room, and a spacious inn, and has lately adopted the advantages of the bill for paving, lighting, and cleansing large towns. Edward IV. granted the first charter to this place, at the intercession of the Earl of Desmond. Its privileges were enlarged by succeeding monarchs, and finally confirmed by James I. The corporation consists of a mayor, burgesses, and commonalty, and the borough returns one member to the Imperial Parliament. The living is a wardenship, constituting part of the see estates, in the diocese of Cloyne and archdiocese of Cashel. The College of St. Mary's is united in the population returns with the parish of Trabolgan; patron, the King. The harbour is deep within, but obstructed at the entrance by a bar, denying admission to large ships, which, together with the great superiority of Cork Harbour, reduces the traffic of this port to a mere coasting-trade. Large quantities of grain are shipped here, at a very inconvenient quay, and Cork is supplied with good building-bricks from this vicinity. The convenience of its situation for bathing, and the agreeable character of the strand, have rendered this a place of fashionable resort in the summer-season. The freeschool was founded in the year 1810. and endowed by the Earl of Cork with 30*l.* per annum, and a commodious school-house; patronage in the representatives of the founder. Here is a Lancasterian school of 250 boys. The first potatoes grown in Ireland were cultivated in the suburban gardens of Youghal; they were brought hither from Virginia by Sir Walter Raleigh, who possessed large estates in this district, since transferred to the family of Boyle and their representatives. The person who first planted the potatoes, mistaking the apple or seed, for the esculent part, experienced, it is said, much disappointment; the error has since been very fully rectified, at least in Ireland. In the year 1579 the town held out for some time against the Earl of Desmond; but being at last taken, the unlucky mayor was hanged up before the arrival of the queen's troops, who were marching to his assistance. Charles II. was proclaimed by the townsmen in 1648, yet Cromwell was received, without resistance, upon his first approach. From this point the general took shipping for England, after his extraordinary and bloody successes in Ireland. The collegiate church is an ancient Gothic structure, the nave extending 135 feet, and having a breadth of 66. Here are some interesting monuments to the memory of different members and branches of the Boyle family; amongst them one to the famous Roger Boyle, author of the "Art of War," and of several dramatic pieces. In the little temple, usually called the Earl of Cork's chapel, is a monument to Villiers, Earl of Grandison, bearing the following curious inscription:

Munster may curse the time that Villiers came
To make us worse, by leaving such a name;
Of noble parts, as none can imitate,
But those whose hearts are married to the state;
But if they press to imitate his fame,
Munster may bless the time that Villiers came.

In 1232 a monastery for Franciscans was founded here by Maurice Fitzgerald, Lord Justice of Ireland; and, A. D. 1268, a Dominican friary was erected on the north side of the town; some of the ruins may still be seen.

YOULGREAVE, or YEOLGRAVE, co. Derby.

P. T. Bakewell (153) 3 m. S. b. W. Pop. 3593. A parish in the hundred of High Peak; living, a dis. vicarage in the archdeaconry of Derby and diocese of Lichfield and Coventry, valued in K. A village and parish, the latter partly in the hundred of Uwch-Aled, but extending also into the hundred of Nant-Conway, in the county of Carnarvon. It comprehends the townships of Eidda, Tir-Evan, and Tre-Brys. Living, a curacy, not in charge, in the archdeaconry and diocese of St. Asaph; ann. val. P. R. 60*l.*; patron, the Bishop. Captain Richard Vaughan endowed an almshouse here for six poor men. In the church are shown three monuments bearing effigies; the first, of Rhys - ap-Meredydd, standard-bearer to Henry VII. at the battle of Bosworth; a second, his lady; and a third, to his son Robert, cross-bearer and chaplain to Cardinal Wolsey. There is a tomb to the memory of Mrs. Elizabeth Price, of Giller, in the church-yard, which appears to have been dislodged from its original position. The name Ysptyty, of Hysptyty, is derived from an Hospitium, or sanctuary, of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, which was anciently established in this remote and elevated district.

YSTRAD - MEIRIC, or YSPYTTY-YS-TRAD-MEIRIC, co. Cardigan, S. W.

P. T. Aberystwith (208) 13 m. SE.
Pop. 114. Fair, July 2 and 3.

A parish in the upper division of Ilar hundred, situated upon the banks of the river Meiric; living, a chapelry not in charge, with the curacy of Ysptyty-Rhiw-Ystwyth, in the diocese of St. David's; patron, the Earl of Lisburne. Area of chapelry, 700 acres of land, the whole of which formerly belonged to the abbey of Strata Florida. Edward Richards, an eminent Welsh critic and pastoral poet, a native of this place, founded and endowed a freeschool here for thirty-two poor boys. A second endowment was given by the same benevolent individual towards the education of forty boys of the upper division of Llanfihangel-llethyr-troed, an adjoining parish. The castle was taken and destroyed by Owen Gwynedd and his brother Cadwalader in the year 1187. Cadell, Merydd, and Rhys wrested it from the hands of Howel-ap-Owen-Gwynedd, A. D. 1150. Roger, Earl of Clare, appears to have been its possessor in the year 1158; in the year 1189 it was seized by Maelgwn-ap-Rhys, who bestowed it upon his brother Anarawd in 1194, as a ransom for his brothers Howel and Madoc, whom Anarawd had imprisoned and deprived of their sight. In 1198 it was taken from the Normans by Maelgwn, who finding himself unable to retain possession against Llewellyn-ap-Jorweth, razed it nearly to the ground.

YSTRAD-OWAIN, co. Glamorgan, S. W.

ABSON-WITH-WYKE, co. Gloucester. A

This place was called Abson or Abston from its having been the property of the Abbot of Glastonbury, and it obtained the conjunct name of Wyke from its winding brook. At Toghill, partly in this parish, the forces of Charles I., commanded by Ralph Lord Hopton, were drawn up on the 5th of July, 1643, while the Parliamentarians under Sir William Waller, occupied the neighbouring eminence of Lansdown, previous to the warmly contested but indecisive battle, which derives its name from the place last mentioned. (See Lansdown.) In this parish is found a dark-coloured kind of stone, containing oxide of iron, and which, when burnt, forms an excellent cement or terras.

ASHTON, co. Pal. of Lancaster. A

In this township, in the parish of Preston, is an ancient Episcopal chapel. A custom, said to have originated in the reign of Henry VI., still exists here, of granting to the tenants of the manor three roods of land, to feed a bull for their use, at the annual rent or payment of a red rose.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE, co. Pal. of Lancaster. A

A remarkable manorial custom prevailed at this place of parading the effigy of a knight on horseback through the town, on Easter-Monday, and afterwards using it as a butt to shoot at. The origin of this strange usage, locally termed the "Riding of the Black Lad," is involved in considerable obscurity. The ancient authority of the mayor has been revived here, after long disuse, and last year a mayor was appointed. The police of the town is under the direction of a body of commissioners, in conjunction with the magistrates and the constables. The newly-erected church, or chapel, situated at the west end of the town, is a handsome stone edifice in the Gothic style, with a square tower and pinnacles; the cost of the building is said to have exceeded 140,000*l*. Here are places of worship for the Roman Catholics, the Independents, the Methodists, the Baptists, and the followers of Joanna Southcote, who were formerly numerous at this place, and whose chapel has been characterized as an elegant building. Here is an endowed freeschool, rebuilt by subscription in 1828. Here are several almshouses for the reception and support of the indigent, a ladies' charity, for the relief of lying-in women, and likewise a mechanics' institution. A spacious market-house was erected in 1830, on land given by the lord of the manor; and here are assembly-rooms, and a new theatre. The town is lighted with gas. In 1830 it contained fifty factories, with spinning-machines and power-looms; and one silk-mill, and three cotton-mills were in the progress of erection. The parish contains twenty more cotton-mills, four woollen-mills, calico-printing works, and hat manufactories, besides gingham and silk mills. Duckinfield, and Fairfield, are not hamlets of this parish, but neighbouring villages, the former being separated from the town by the river Tame, and the latter being situated three miles westward of Ashton. A market is now held thrice a-week, namely, Mondays, Wednesdays, and Saturdays.

ASHTON-IN-MAKERFIELD, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

A hamlet in the township of Newton, parish of Manchester and hundred of Salford. According to Dr. Dunham Whitaker, this place was the site of one of the principal cities of the Anglo-Saxon kingdom of Northumbria.

D

DAYLESFORD, co. Worcester.

For "archdeaconry of Gloucester," read "of Worcester."

DEAN, co. Pal. of Lancaster. A

The parish church, which is a low small edifice of Norman architecture, appears to be very ancient. The village and church stand in the township of Rumworth, where the buildings and population are rapidly increasing, owing to the vicinity of the Bolton and Leigh railway, the town of Bolton, and the extensive bleaching-grounds and coal-mines, said to be hardly inferior to any in the kingdom.

DEAN, co. Sussex. O

Pop. 403.

A hundred in the rape of Lewes and southern part of the county, containing the parish of Patcham.

DEAN FOREST, co. Gloucester.

Living in the archdeaconry and diocese of "Hereford," not of "Gloucester."

DEAN, LITTLE, co. Gloucester.

Living in the archdeaconry and diocese of "Hereford," not of "Gloucester."

DEFYNOC, co. Brecon.

For "diocese of Gloucester," read "of St. David's."

DELPH, W. R. co. York.

P. T. Oldham (191) 4½ m. ENE.
Pop. with Pa.

One of the three principal villages in the hilly commercial district of Saddleworth, situated in a deep valley, on the river Tame, noted for its woollen manufactories, a stone-quarry, &c., in the townships of Friar Mere and Shaw's Mere. New Delph consists of several elegant mansions, a little to the south of the old village, which has an Episcopal chapel, seated on a bleak hill, a mile distant; a perpetual curacy, patron, the Vicar of Rochdale; it is commonly called Heights Chapel, or more properly Friar Mere. Here are besides Presbyterian and Methodist places of worship, and schools.

DERBY, WEST, co. Pal. of Lancaster. A

From this township, which gives name to the hundred, the Stanley family derives the title of Earl of Derby. Here was anciently a castle.

DERWENTWATER. See Keswick and County of Cumberland.

DOBCROSS, W. R. co. York.

P. T. Oldham (191) 4½ m. E. Pop. with Pa.

The principal village of the hilly chapelry of Saddleworth, stretching along a steep ridge, rising from the river Tame; with an Episcopal chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, a perpetual curacy; patron, the Vicar of Rochdale. The waters of the Tame wash several woollen-mills; and the village contains a bank, a post-office, a small endowed school, educating a few poor children, a Dissenters' meeting-room, and a population of 2000 souls. The petty sessions for the district is held here once a fortnight, as well as at Upper Mill, another of the three principal villages in the district.

DULVERTON, co. Somerset.

Vol. I. p. 650, col. 1, l. 16 from the bottom, for "Trumanoy," read "Free-manors."

FURNESS, co. Pal. of Lancaster. O

A liberty in the hundred of Lonsdale, north of the Sands, comprising, besides several villages, the market-towns of Cartmel, Dalton, Hawkshead, and Ulverstone; to the east are situated Furness Fells, formerly covered with wood. This district is remarkable for the ruins of an abbey, situated one mile and a half south of Dalton. Furness Abbey was founded in 1127, by Stephen, Earl of Mortaign, and afterwards King of England, who bestowed on it a princely endowment, so that it was superior in point of wealth, privileges, and jurisdiction, to all other monastic establishments in the north of England, except Fountains Abbey in Yorkshire. The existing ruins of the conventual edifices are situated on the banks of a small stream, in a narrow and secluded valley. The finest view of these ruins is from the east, where, through the opening formed by a spacious Gothic window, appear in perspective the interior of the choir, with the arches of the aisles and the remains of the nave, the prospect being terminated by woods in the distance.

G

GEORGE, ST., co. Gloucester.

For "archdeaconry of Dorset," read "archdeaconry of Bristol."

GOOLE, co. York, W. R. A

London 175 m. NW.

A new and rapidly-improving seaport and post-town, situated on the right bank of the river Ouse, close to its junction with the Dutch river, and about ten miles from the point where the Ouse and the Trent unite their streams and form the Humber. Here are two docks and a basin, or entrance-harbour, connected with each other and with the Ouse, by locks, capable of admitting vessels of 300 tons register burden. The ship-dock is 600 feet long by twenty feet wide, with eighteen feet depth of water, and will contain fifty-four sail of square-rigged vessels, of which number the quay will admit seventeen to load and unload at the same time. The barge-dock is 900 feet long by 150 feet wide, with eight feet depth of water, and is calculated to contain 200 sail of the river craft, which navigate into the interior of the kingdom by means of the canal, which passes westward from this dock and forms an uninterrupted communication by water, between the German Ocean and the Irish Sea. The basin, or entrance-harbour is 250 feet long by 200 feet wide, with nineteen feet depth of water; and although Goole is situated so far inland, vessels drawing from fifteen to seventeen feet of water have arrived and discharged their cargoes there in perfect safety. There is a very handsome custom-house, with a collector, comptroller, and a suitable establishment of officers. The warehouses (one of which is a warehouse of special security), contain 12,000 superficial yards of vaults and floors for the bonding of all goods, excepting only tobacco and snuff, which are prohibited. There is also a pond which will hold 3000 loads of timber, and a range of fourteen yards for deals and iron in bond. The ship-dock is nearly surrounded by spacious sheds, in which the import and export trade is carried on under the inspection of the custom-house officers. A patent slip is now being laid down, upon which vessels of 250 to 300 tons register may be hauled and repaired. Goole, which within the last ten years was only an insignificant village, promises to become at no distant period a flourishing port, and an important station of inland and maritime navigation. The canal and docks were opened on the 20th of July, 1826, for the coasting-trade. In October, 1827, it was made a port for foreign trade, which commenced on the 6th of April, 1828, and has been progressively increasing. According to returns made to parliamentary inquiries, the number of ships and vessels belonging to this port in 1829 was fifty, and their united burden amounted to 3625 tons. The whole of these works having been begun and completed since the last general census in 1821, there cannot be any return of the population, excepting of the original village, which is situated on the south side of the Dutch river.

GRANTHAM, co. Lincoln. O

Pop. 9394.

A soke in the parts of Kesteven, at the south-eastern extremity of the county, near the borders of Leicestershire, containing twelve parishes, including the borough of Grantham.

HELEN'S, ST. co. Pal. of Lancaster. O

London 199 m. NE. Pop. with Pa.

A market-town, formerly a village, which has within about twenty years past so greatly increased in population and improved in its buildings and general importance as to deserve a place among the more considerable manufacturing towns in the county. A court-leet is held annually in the month of September, under the authority of the lord of the manor of Windle, to which this township belongs. Besides the chapel, which is dedicated to St. Mary, there are two chapels for Roman Catholics, and places of worship for the Independents, the Methodists, and the Quakers. In that part of the town called Moorflat, is an endowed freeschool, and there are also Catholic and other charity-schools. At the hamlet of Ravenhead, adjoining St. Helen's on the south-west, is an establishment for the manufacture of crown, plate, and flint glass, conducted, on a very extensive scale, by the Ravenhead Plate Glass Company; and at Sutton and elsewhere in the neighbourhood are bottle, flint, and crown glass-works. At the Ravenhead works are made glass plates of vast dimensions, some measuring 140 inches by seventy-two; and concave and convex mirrors thirty-six inches in diameter, not inferior to glass of French or Venetian manufacture. Here also are breweries, earthenware manfactories, manfactories of sail-cloth, nails, hats, and wire, and also a distillery. Coal is obtained here in abundance, and the operation of mining employs a great number of persons. A customary market is held every Saturday, and fairs twice a-year, namely on the Monday and Tuesday after the Easter week, and the Friday and Saturday after the 8th of September.

Vol. III. p. 90, col. 1, l. 12, read "Pop. with Hales Owen." From line 13, &c., read as follows, the two Oldburys having been confounded in the authorities:

The parish is in the Hales Owen division of the hundred of Brimstree; but Oldbury now forms a considerable town, extending on the south into the parish of Hales Owen, and on the west into that of Dudley, in Worcestershire. It is situated on the road between Dudley and Birmingham, about three miles eastward of the former, and five westward of the latter town. Courts leet and baron are held annually, under the authority of the lord of the manor; and there is a prison for the confinement of debtors, and also a court-house, in which is held the court of requests, for the recovery of any sums under 5l. Besides the church, there is a newly-founded chapel, in the parish of Hales Owen, the living of which is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the Vicar of Hales Owen. The Unitarians likewise have a place of worship here. The Birmingham Canal forms a curvature in its course round the town, which is also watered by a small brook, falling into the river Tame; and on the north side of the town is a fine spring of water, called the Fountain Well, which is enclosed as a reservoir, and affords to the inhabitants a constant supply of water. The trade and manufactures of this place are intimately connected with those of Dudley. Here are blast-furnaces, for smelting and making pig-iron, as well as steel-works; and coal and ironstone are found in abundance in the vicinity. Two fairs take place annually, June 6 and October 3.

OVERBURROW, co. Pal. of Lancaster. O

P. T. Kirkby Lonsdale (253) 2 m. SE.
Pop. with Pa.

A township in the parish of Tunstall and hundred of Lonsdale, south of the Sands, situated near the conflux of the Leckbeck and the Lune. This place, now a small village, appears to have been anciently a Roman station, perhaps that called by Richard of Cirencester Ad Alaunam, as tessellated pavements, coins, and other relics of antiquity have been found here. The old hall, or manor-house of Burrow is still standing.

P

PARR, co. Pal. of Lancaster. A

This place, which comprises the hamlets of Ashton Green, Blackbrook, Parr Flats, and Parr Stocks, has increased considerably in size and importance, in consequence of its vicinity to the New Town of St. Helen's. Here is a handsome Catholic chapel.

PILKINGTON, co. Pal. of Lancaster. O

In this township, which is divided into the hamlets of Outwood, Whitefield, and Unsworth, are three Episcopal chapels, and several places of worship for Dissenters; and here is Stand Hall, formerly the seat of the Pilkington family.

PLYMOUTH, co. Devon. A

At Stonehouse there are two chapels belonging to the establishment, besides that attached to the Hospital. The Naval Hospital is the finest in Great Britain, after that of Haslar, which, however, being built of stone, it exceeds in architectural beauty. Immediately opposite on the Stoke side of Stonehouse is the Military Hospital, having a noble colonnade extending the whole length of the front. Here are also a lofty range of stone buildings for the Marines, besides the Long Room Barracks, for the Regulars. At the entrance to Hamoaze is a most magnificent Victualling Office, now in progress, which will be built entirely of marble.

PURLEIGH, co. Essex. O

P. T. Maldon (37) 4 m. S b W. Pop. 957.
Fair, Whit.-Tues., for toys.

A parish in the hundred of Dengey; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Essex and diocese of London; valued in K. B. 25*l.*; church ded. to All Saints; patronage annexed to the Provostship of Oriel College, Oxford.

PURLEY, co. Berks. O

P. T. Reading (38) 4 m. NW b W.
Pop. 196.

A parish in the hundred of Theale; living, a rectory in the archdeaconry of Berks and diocese of Salisbury; valued in K. B. 12*l.* 17*s.* 3½*d.*; church ded. to St. Mary; patron, the Lord Chancellor.

F R

RICHMOND, co. Pal. of Lancaster. O

P. T. Liverpool (206) 1 m. NE.
Pop. with Pa.

A chapelry in the parish of Walton, formerly a distinct village, but now forming one of the suburbs of Liverpool, and containing St. Anne's chapel.

RISHTON, co. Pal. of Lancaster. A

This place was the ancient seat of the Rishton family; and it is also remarkable as the spot where was the first establishment for weaving calico in the county, formed by a person named Duxbury, who sold it to the Peels in 1776.

RODE HUISH, co. Somerset. O

P. T. Dunster (162) 3 m. SSE.
Pop. with Pa.

A chapelry in the parish and hundred of Carhampton; living, a curacy subordinate to the vicarage of Carhampton, and a peculiar of the Dean of Bath and Wells, not in charge; patronage with Carhampton vicarage.

ROMSEY, co. Southampton. O

Market-day recently altered from Saturday to Thursday.

ROWLEY REGIS, co. Stafford. .

For "archdeaconry and diocese of Worcester," read "archdeaconry of Stafford and Worcester."

S

SADDLEWORTH, W. R. co. York. A

In this township, which is situated in a valley, watered by the river Tame, are situated the large villages of Dobcross, Delph, and Upper Mill, near the high-road from Manchester to Leeds. At Delph are two Dissenting chapels, two schools, and a post-office. Dobcross contains an Episcopal chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, in the patronage of certain trustees; a freeschool, and a post-office. Petty sessions are held here and at Upper Mill every fortnight. There is another Episcopal chapel at Lydgate, on the western borders of this township, the living of which is a perpetual curacy, valued in P. R. 88*l.*, and in the patronage of the Vicar of Rochdale. The parochial chapel dedicated to St. Chad, has been rebuilt at the expense of the parishioners. In the vicinity is the romantic valley of the Green Field, where are caverns, rocks, and a massive hanging stone, with other remains of antiquity, supposed to be Druidical. At Castle Shaw, said to be the site of a British fortress, have been found beads, and a brazen celt.

SEATHWAITE, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Hawkeshead (267) 8 m. W b N.
Pop. 208.

A chapelry in the parish of Kirby Ireleth, hundred of Lonsdale, north of the Sands; living, a perpetual curacy, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter of York; valued in P. R. 58*l.*; patron, W. Penny, Esq. The chapel is situated on the east bank of the river Duddon.

SEFTON, co. Pal. of Lancaster. See Sephton.

SEND, co. Surrey.

Distance of Ripley, as post-town, for "215," read "24;" that of Ripley in Yorkshire was inadvertently given for Ripley in Surrey.

SHUTTLEWORTH, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Bury (195) 3 m. N. Pop. with To.

A hilly township, now included in that of Walmersley, in the parish of Bury. It comprises several villages and seats, on the east bank of the Irwell, near which are traces of a Roman camp. In this township is a lofty peak, called Scaite Hill.

SIXPENNY HANLEY, hundred of.

Correctly given Vol. III. 405. Incorrectly given under HANLEY SIXPENNY, Vol. II., page 146. The latter only including a subdivision of the hundred.

SMALL BRIDGE, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Rochdale (198) 2 m. ENE. Pop. with Pa. A large village in the township of Wardle-cum-Wnerdale, parish of Rochdale. Here is a chapel of ease, erected by the parliamentary commissioners. Here are also Independent and Methodist chapels. Great Howarth, near this place, is said to have been the paternal mansion of the Howards, Dukes of Norfolk.

SOUTHPORT, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Ormskirk (219) 9½ m. W. Pop. with Pa. A chapelry in the parish of North Meoles and hundred of West Derby, where is a sea-side village, on the south bank of the river Ribble, recently become a much frequented watering-place. An Episcopal chapel (Christ Church) was erected here in 1820, the curacy of which is in the patronage of Peter Hesketh, Esq. Here are places of worship for the Calvinistic Independents (1823), and the Wesleyan Methodists (1824). A dispensary, for the relief of the poor, was established in 1823; and there is an institution called the Strangers' Charity, the object of which is to afford the sick and indigent the benefit of sea-bathing. This village consists chiefly of one street of handsome brick houses, having gardens in front; and here are hotels and lodging-houses, with a theatre, news-room, and libraries.

STAININGTON, W. R. co. York.

P. T. Sheffield (162) 4 m. W b N. Pop. with Pa. A chapelry in the parish of Ecclesfield and north division of the wapentake of Strafforth and Tickhill; living, a curacy in the archdeaconry and diocese of York, not in charge; patron, the Vicar of Ecclesfield. The chapel, which is a Gothic edifice, with a cupola, was erected in 1829, by the commissioners under the late acts of parliament.

STAND, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Bury (195) 3½ m. SSW. Pop. with Pa. A pleasant village and district in the township of Pilkington, parish of Prestwich, hundred of Salford. A handsome Gothic church was erected here in 1827, by the parliamentary commissioners, the living of which is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the Vicar of the parish. Here are a Unitarian chapel, founded in 1693, and rebuilt in 1818, and places of worship for the Independents and the Methodists. At the village of Stand is a free-school.

STAYLEY BRIDGE, STALEY BRIDGE, or STAVELEY BRIDGE, cos. Pal. of Chester and Lancaster. ;

P. T. Ashton-under-Lyne (186) 1 m. E. Pop. (1831) 14,216.

TOPOG. DICT.—ADDITIONAL NOTICES.

The increase of this place in size and population, in consequence of the introduction of the cotton manufacture, has been extremely rapid; for, in 1776, it was a village consisting of about forty houses, but the number at present amounts to more than 2400. A town-hall has been recently erected, which is a lofty and handsome stone structure; and besides the stone bridge over the Tame, there is an iron bridge, which has been lately built a little lower down the stream. The town is lighted with gas; and water-works have been constructed for the supply of the inhabitants; and here are news-rooms and a library. The town is governed by a head constable and his deputies, whose jurisdiction is restricted to a police district, including parts of the townships of Hartshead, [in the parish of Ashton-under-Lyne, Stayley Bridge, in the parish of Mottram, and Duckinfield, in the parish of Stockport.

STEPNEY, co. Middlesex.

"The local government is vested in twelve trustees, &c." Their authority is confined to the hamlet of Ratchiffe.

STOCKPORT, co. Chester. A

The manor of Stockport belongs (1830) to the Hon. Frances M. Warren, Lady Vernon of Paynton. The free grammar-school was founded in 1487; and a new school, with a house for the head master, was erected in 1830. A commodious market-place, for the accommodation of the inhabitants of the higher part of the town, was built at the expense of the lady of the manor, and opened in 1831.

STONYHURST, co. Pal. of Lancaster. O

P. T. Clitheroe (217) 3½ m. SSW.

A village in the township of Aighton-cum-Bailey, parish of Mitton and hundred of Blackburn. At this place is the celebrated Catholic college, for the education of youth of that church.

SUNDERLAND, co. Pal. of Lancaster. O

P. T. Lancaster (240) 7 m. SSW. Pop. with To.

A village in the township of Overton, parish of Lancaster and hundred of Lonsdale, south of the Sands, situated on a narrow neck of land, terminating in a promontory at the point where the river Lune falls into Morcambe Bay. This place, which is now much resorted to for sea-bathing, is remarkable as being the harbour where cotton-wool was first landed in this county, before it was imported at Liverpool.

SWINTON, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

P. T. Manchester (182) 5 m. NW. Pop. with To.

A village and chapelry in the township of Worsley, parish of Eccles, and hundred of Salford, where has lately been established a post-office. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued in P. R. 48*l.*, and in the patronage of the Vicar of the parish,

TAUNTON, co. Somerset. A

Mr. Alexander Baring is the patron of the living of St. Mary Magdalen, not Mr. E. B. Portman, as stated in the body of the work ; and the church has four not five aisles as therein described. The county jails are at Ilchester and Shepton Mallett, not Wilton, the prison at which place is only a House of Correction.

TINTERN PARVA, or TYNTERNE, co. Monmouth. A

Here are the ruins of Tynterne Abbey, the property of the Duke of Beaufort. It was founded in 1131, as a convent for Cistercian monks ; and the ruins of its church, still remaining, present some beautiful specimens of Gothic architecture. This edifice was erected in the form of a cathedral, comprising a nave and aisles, a transept, and a choir, with a central tower. A considerable portion of the walls is still remaining. The west front exhibits a noble appearance ; and through the western portal may be seen a long range of elegant columns, which separated the nave from the south aisle ; beyond are the lofty arches, which supported the tower, and the view is terminated by the grand eastern window of the choir. Though many of the pillars have been demolished, and the windows and sculptured ornaments are in a state of dilapidation, yet enough remains to show the general character of the building, and give some idea of its beauty and grandeur when in a perfect state. Some of the windows are wholly obscured by thickly-interwoven masses of ivy, others are canopied, or partially wreathed on the sides ; while the branching evergreen elsewhere creeps along the walls, encircles the pillars, or hangs in pendulous tufts from the capitals. The numerous mosses and lichens, which cover the surfaces of the stones, by their contrasted tints, add much to the general effect of the appearance of this interesting ruin. The floor, which was once covered with tessellated bricks, or tiles, is now open to the soil, and the roof is also wanting ; the surface of the area within is partly covered with pieces of capitals, friezes, broken statues, sepulchral monuments, and sculptured stones, originally forming portions of the groined roof, or other parts of the building. These ruins, which stand on the western bank of the river Wye, five miles north of Chepstow, appear to great advantage from a spot about half a mile down the river, where the great eastern window shows like the portal of a magnificent edifice, embosomed in a dense wood ; besides being clustered with ivy, and the lower part of the building concealed by numerous shrubs, the river, sweeping in front, forms a very fine foreground, while the distant hills fill the back of the landscape.

TODMORDEN, co. Pal. of Lancaster. A

This place, called Todmorden-cum-Walsden, has become a flourishing market-town, in consequence of its situation on the Rochdale Canal ; and the Leeds and Manchester rail-road will pass through it. The new chapel was opened April 15th, 1832. Here are news-rooms, and a weekly market has been established on Saturdays.

TWEMLOW, co. Pal. of Chester.

W

WARDLE-CUM-WUERDALE, co. Pal. of Lancaster.

In this township is an Episcopal chapel. See Small Bridge.

WATERFORD, co. Waterford, Munster, I. A

Vol. III. p. 718, col. 2, after l. 14, add "The principal manufacture is that of glass, the quality of which has for many years been much esteemed, it has lately found a rival in the manufactory of Cork, but is still a clear, bright, and beautiful composition. The river is navigable above the city to Clonmel, and below Waterford it is joined by the waters of the Nore and Barrow, the latter also navigable to the trading town of New Ross. Such natural lines of inland navigation have been attended with the happiest consequences as respects the increasing commercial prosperity of this port. The communication is opened with South Wales and England by a line of steam-packets which ply regularly between Dunmore Pier at the mouth of the Suir, and Milford Haven. See Dunmore East. Waterford school is held in a spacious and commodious building, and is under the direction of a distinguished scholar and successful instructor, and the patronage is vested in the corporation. There is a poor-school in Trinity parish of 500 boys, one-third of the number being clothed at the expense of the subscribers, as a stimulus to diligence and morality. The blue-school in St. Michael's parish was founded by Sir John Mason, and endowed by his three daughters, who died unmarried. St. Stephen's poor-school, consisting of sixty-five day-scholars and ten boarders, was founded and endowed by the corporation, who sustain a charter-school in Killoteran parish also, consisting of thirty-eight boys. In connexion with the charitable and humane institutions may be mentioned an asylum for poor widows of the clergy of the diocese, wherein a certain number are comfortably lodged and assisted with a small annuity ; also a spacious and well-conducted fever hospital, one of the earliest, for fevers exclusively, erected in the kingdom. Little of the ancient fortifications or defensive works now remain ; one old circular building, called Reginald's Tower, is quite perfect, and is believed to have been erected by the son of Ivarus, a Danish king. The Ostmen founded a priory here for Augustinian canons of the order of St. Victor, which they dedicated to St. Catherine. The hospital for lepers, in St. Stephen's Street, was established by the family of Poer. John, Earl of Moreton, afterwards King of England, built and endowed the priory of St. John the Evangelist, in the suburbs of the city, for monks of the order of St. Benedict, and confirmed to them the lands of Ballyoweddyn, A. D. 1185. It was then called an almshouse, and was a cell to the abbey of St. Peter and St. Paul, in Bath, Somersetshire. Henry III. granted the site of an ancient tower to the Dominicans, with leave to erect thereon a religious house, about the year 1235. This was at first called the monastery of St. Saviour, then Black Friars, and ultimately became the site of the county court-house. Lord Hugh Purcell founded a friary here for conventual Franciscans in the year 1240, and was interred in the church of the same. His monument still remains, and represents a man in armour, in alto relievo; bearing a shield on his left arm, on which are three lions passant guardant in pale. The hospital of the Holy Ghost was afterwards erected upon a part of the site of this monastery. The Lumley family take the title of Viscount, the Talbot family of Earl, and the Poer-Beresfords that of Marquis, from this ancient city.

WEIR, shire of Orkney and Shetland, S. O
Pop. with Pa.

An island of the Orkneys in the parish of Rousay, from which it is separated by Weir Sound. It is a low island about two miles in length and one in breadth, with a fertile soil and good peat mosses. Among the rocks upon the coast seals are found in great numbers. The church, which is in a ruinous condition, is surrounded by graves of unusual dimensions, and upon an eminence near it are the remains of the Castle of Cubberow, built in the twelfth century by Kolbern Ilranga, a magnate of Orkney, which soon afterwards withstood a siege of several months, and maintained his post.]

WELFORD, co. Northampton.

Has been for a year or two past a post-town to various parts of the county, and of Leicestershire.

WESTERKIRK, shire of Dumfries, S. O

P. T. Langholm (70) 6 m. NW. Pop. 672.

A parish nine miles in length, averaging two miles and a half in breadth, and containing 27,307 acres, of which not more than 1400 lying along the banks of the Esk are arable. The surface in general consists of hills, some covered with heath and others verdant, affording pasturage for nearly 20,000 sheep, besides a considerable number of cattle. At a place called Megdale, there is a loch of rich shell-marl, and at Glendonwyn a valuable mine of antimony was formerly wrought, but the works have been suspended for some years past. The smelting-house in which the ore was manufactured into the sulphuret and the regulus of antimony, still remains at the village of Jamestown, a neatly-built place on the river Megget, founded by the late Sir James Johnstone, Bart., for the residence of the miners. The living is in the presbytery of Langholm and synod of Dumfries; patron, the Duke of Buccleugh. The church, rebuilt in 1788, is one of the neatest in this part of Scotland. Vestiges of the two ancient castles, Glendonwyn and Westerhall, and of some Roman encampments, are still visible. This place has given birth to several distinguished individuals, among whom may be noticed Mr. Pulteney, the successful opponent of the celebrated Sir Robert Walpole; Governor Johnstone, a gallant officer and eloquent statesman; and the brave Admiral Sir Thomas Pasley, who led the van in Earl Howe's glorious action June 1, 1794.

WESTERTOWN, shire of Clackmannan, S.
Pop. with Pa.

A village in the parish of Tillicoultry. The parochial school is kept here.

WESTFIELD, shire of Renfrew, S.
Pop. with Pa.

A small village in the parish of Cathcart.

WESTMUIR, shire of Lanark, S. J
Pop. with Pa.

A populous village in the barony, parish, and jurisdiction of the city of Glasgow.]

WESTPANS, shire of Edinburgh, S. J
Pop. with Pa.

A village in the parish of Inveresk, and jurisdiction of the town of Musselburgh. It is situated on the Firth of Forth, to the westward of Preston Pans, and is subject to the Custom-house of that port.—Salt is manufactured here to some extent, as china also was a few years back.

WESTRAY, shire of Orkney and Shetland, S. O

P. T. Kirkwall 20 m. N. Pop. 1650.

One of the Orkney islands, comprising the united parishes of St. Mary and Cross Kirk, to which is annexed the ancient chapelry of Papa Westray, an island to the northward, which see. Its figure somewhat resembles a cross, extending eight miles from north-west to south-east, by five miles from north-east to south-west; and its contents are computed to be fourteen square miles. The surface, which is watered by several mill-streams, is tolerably level on the east, north, and south shores, where much corn is raised, and there is fine pasturage for cows, which produce excellent butter; but the interior exhibits a barren elevated ridge, stretching the entire length of the island; while a range of high hills forms the western district. Peats, sandstone, and sandstone-flag, are every where abundant. Though the coast is indented by several bays, the only safe harbour is that termed Pier o'Wall, which formerly afforded security for large vessels, but now will admit only small craft. At the head of this bay, close to the margin of a beautiful loch, are the stately ruins of the castle of Naltland, of which a tradition prevails, that it was erected as a retreat for Queen Mary and Bothwell, when driven to their last extremity; near it is the pleasing village of Waal, so called perhaps in reference to some battle fought on the adjoining waste, where skeletons, warlike weapons, domestic utensils, &c., are frequently discovered. The fisheries are very productive; lobsters are plentiful; and about 300 tons of kelp are annually manufactured. The living is in the presbytery of North Isles and synod of Orkney; patron, Lord Dundas. St. Mary's Church is four miles distant from the manse; Cross Kirk, three miles; and the church of Papa Westray, about eight miles and a half; each being served in rotation by the minister of the parish. There are vestiges of several Popish chapels, which the natives till lately held in great veneration. Picts' huts, tumuli, large graves, encircled with stones, with various other relics of antiquity are met with here. The principal seats are those of Trenoby and Brough, the former belonging to John Balfour, Esq., the latter to the Stewart family.

WESTRUTHER, shire of Berwick. O
P. T. Greenlaw (36) $6\frac{1}{2}$ m. WNW.
Pop. 870.

A parish and village, the latter of which has considerably increased of late years by the erection of a number of new houses, each having a garden and two or more acres of land attached. The parish is about five miles in length by four in breadth, lying on the southern declivity of the Lammermuir hills, which separate it from the district of East Lothian; it includes two other villages, Hounslow, founded in 1775, and situated on the great London road by Coldstream; and Wederley, which has much decayed within the last fifty years. The surface is partly under cultivation, but principally appropriated to pasturage; and there are several peat-mosses convenient to the villages. The living is in the presbytery of Lauder and synod of Merse and Teviotdale; patron, the Crown. The church was erected about 1647 at Westruther, which circumstance gave name to the parish, then first created by the union of the ancient parish of Bas-sendean, with the lands of Spottiswoode and Westruther.

NOTICES OF THE PROVISIONS OF THE REFORM ACT AS RESPECTS COUNTIES.

THE ELECTIVE FRANCHISE IN COUNTIES.

No person will in future be entitled to a vote for any county, or town being a county of itself, in respect of any freehold estate for life or lives in lands or tenements, unless he shall be in the actual and bonâ fide occupation of such lands or tenements, or except the same shall have come to him by marriage, settlement, devise, or promotion to any benefice or office, or the same shall be of the clear yearly value of 10*l.* above all rents and charges; but persons now having, or who but for this Act might acquire a right of voting in respect of any such freehold, will not be prevented from retaining or acquiring the right, so long as he is so seised of the same lands or tenements, if duly registered, as this Act provides. (Clause 18).

All persons not subject to any legal incapacity, who are seised of lands or tenements of copyhold, or any other tenure, except freehold, of the clear yearly value of 10*l.* over and above all rents and charges payable out of or in respect of the same, will be entitled to a vote for the county in which such lands or tenements are situate. Every person entitled, either as lessee or assignee, to any lands or tenements, for the unexpired residue, whatever it may be, of any term of not less than sixty years (whether determinable on a life or lives or not), of the clear yearly value of not less than 10*l.* over and above all rents and charges; or for the unexpired residue of any term of twenty years, of the clear yearly value of 50*l.*; or who shall occupy as tenant any lands or tenements for which he shall be actually liable to a rent of 50*l.*, will be entitled to a vote for the county; but no sub-lessee or assignee will be so entitled, unless in actual occupation of the premises. (Clauses 19 and 20).

No public or parliamentary tax, nor any church, county, or parochial rate is to be deemed a charge payable out of or in respect of any lands or tenements within the meaning of this Act, nor is it necessary for any county voter to be assessed to the land-tax. (Clause 21).

Trustees and mortgagees are not entitled to vote for a county, unless they are in actual possession or receipt of the rents and profits of the trust or mortgage estate; but the cestuique trust or mortgagor in possession may vote. (Clause 23).

No person shall be entitled to a county vote in respect of any freehold premises occupied by himself, which, according to the provisions hereinafter contained, would confer on him the right of voting for any city or borough, whether he shall or shall not have actually acquired the right to vote for such city or borough in respect thereof. A similar provision exists with regard to the estate of any copyholder or customary tenant, or tenant in ancient demesne, holding by copy of court roll, or lessee or assignee, which would confer on him or any other person the right of voting for any city or borough. (Clauses 24 and 25).

No person will be entitled to vote for a county, unless he shall have been duly registered according to the provisions of this act, and no one shall be so registered in any year, unless he shall have been in actual possession of his estate, or in the receipt of the rents and profits of the same for his own use, as a freeholder, for six calendar months at least, or as a lessee or assignee for twelve calendar months, next previous to the 31st of July in such year, except where any lands or tenements which would otherwise entitle the owner, holder, or occupier, to vote in any such election, shall come to any person at any time within such respective periods by descent, succession, marriage, settlement, devise or promotion to any benefice or office. (Clause 26)

PERSONS NOW ENTITLED TO VOTE FOR COUNTIES.

1. FREEHOLDERS, comprehending (1) 40*s.* FREEHOLDERS, possessing an estate of inheritance in fee-simple, or fee-tail. A freehold estate need not consist of land only; it may be an interest arising out of lands, as rents, annuities when duly registered, tithes, shares in rivers and canals, tolls of markets or fairs. So offices, in respect of which the holder has a freehold interest issuing out of or charged upon land, gives a right to vote, as in the case of a schoolmaster or parish-clerk not liable to removal. Purchasers of the land-tax to be deemed freeholders; and sole corporations, as parsons, may vote for lands holden in their corporate capacity, but not so aggregate corporations.

2. FREEHOLDERS FOR LIFE, such as tenants by the curtesy, tenants in dower, and tenants in tail, after possibility of issue extinct; but the right of such freeholders, if they have a freehold estate of the value of 40*s.* only, is limited by this act to those who are in actual or bona fide occupation,^f or to those who have come into possession before or at the time of the passing of this act, by descent, devise, or any other way except purchase or gift.

3. 10*l*. FREEHOLDERS FOR LIFE generally.

4. FREEHOLDERS and BURGAGE-TENANTS, in towns being counties of themselves, are entitled to a vote in respect of their freehold estate, which, as to tenure, interest, and value, must be the same as is required for county elections.

5. COPYHOLDERS, including tenants in ancient demesne, and those holding by tenant right in the counties of Cumberland and Westmorland, possessing an estate of the clear yearly value of 10*l*., whether of inheritance or life, are entitled to a vote by this act, which repeals the 31 George III., c. 14, s. 1, excluding them from a vote.

6. LEASEHOLDERS, comprehending lessees and assignees, possessing a leasehold of the clear yearly value of 10*l*. for the residue of an unexpired term of sixty years, or of the value of 50*l*. for a term of twenty years or under; or being liable to a bona fide yearly rent of 50*l*. Sublessees and assignees of an underlease, provided they are in actual occupation, otherwise they are not entitled.

7. TRUSTEES and MORTGAGEES, if they are in actual receipt of the rents and profits; otherwise the cestuique trusts and mortgagors are entitled. So persons having an equitable estate are, in conformity to the 7 and 8 William, c. 25, s. 7, entitled to a vote: as a vendee, who is let into possession under an agreement of which equity would compel a specific performance. 1 Heyw. 104. Malc. 278. 5.

Persons entitled to a vote in respect of property situate in a borough, cannot vote in respect of the same property for a county, but there is a distinction between freeholders and copyholders, or leaseholders, in this respect. The restriction is confined to freeholders so long as they occupy the premises themselves; therefore a freeholder may have a vote for the county in respect of property in a borough, which gives his tenant a right to vote for the borough; but copyholders and leaseholders lose their right of voting under every circumstance for the county, where they, or any one in their place, are entitled to a vote in respect of property situated in a city or borough. As the inhabitants of the disfranchised boroughs do not come under either of the provisions in the act, they will, subject to the provisions in clause 25, be entitled to a vote for the county in respect of property which they possess in any such borough.

REGISTRATION AS TO COUNTIES.

Registration is exacted from every voter, be his qualification what it may; and in order to be registered, voters are required to comply with certain conditions.

County voters are required—1. To have been in legal possession, or in the receipt of the rents and profits, if freeholders, for six calendar months, and if leaseholders for twelve months, next previous to the 31st of July in each year, unless where the property comes to them by descent, &c. This provision, as respects freeholders, is in conformity with the 18 George II., except that the time of possession is changed from twelve to six months. 2. The voter must send in his claim on or before the 20th of July in each year.

DUTIES AND OFFICE OF BARRISTER AS TO REGISTRATION.

The lord chief justice of the court of King's Bench is, in the month of July or August in this and every succeeding year, to nominate for Middlesex, and the senior judge of assize, when travelling the summer circuit, is to nominate for every county, riding, parts, or division, a barrister or barristers, to revise the lists of voters for the county; and the lord chief justice of the King's Bench is to appoint as many barristers as he thinks fit to revise the lists for the city of London and the city of Westminster, and the several boroughs in the county of Middlesex; and the senior judge on the circuit is to appoint barristers to revise such lists for the several cities and boroughs in every county, and also for every city and town, and county of a city and town adjoining to any such county. The town and county of the town of Kingston-upon-Hull to be considered as next adjoining to the county of York, and the town and county of Newcastle-upon-Tyne as next adjoining to the county of Northumberland, and the city and county of Bristol as adjoining to the county of Somerset; the judges to nominate one or more barristers to revise the lists for the same city, or one barrister only for several cities or places; and in case of the death, illness, or absence of the barristers, or of insufficiency of numbers, to appoint others in their place, or by way of addition. Members of parliament and persons holding any office under the crown are, by ss. 41 and 49, not to be appointed revising barristers, and those who have been once appointed are not eligible to serve in parliament for eighteen months from the time of their appointment. (Clauses 41, 49, and 53).

Barristers appointed to revise the lists of county voters are to give notice, by advertisement in some of the newspapers circulating in the county or division, as also by a notice to be fixed up in some public and conspicuous situation in the principal place of election for the county (such last-mentioned notice to be given three days at least before the commencement of their circuit) that they will make a circuit of the county, or division, and of the several times and places at which they will hold courts—such times being between the 15th of September inclusive, and the 25th day of October, inclusive, in the present, and every succeeding year; and they are to hold open courts at the time and places so announced. And where two or more barristers are appointed for the same county, or division, they are to attend at the same places together, but to sit apart, and hold separate courts at the same time. Revising barristers for boroughs are to hold open courts within the respective cities, boroughs, or places sharing in the election therewith between the periods above-mentioned. And every such barrister for the county is empowered to insert the name of every person omitted in the lists of county voters, if it be proved to his satisfaction that the claimant gave due notice of his claim, and he was entitled on the 31st of July then next preceding;—and every barrister for the borough is to insert the name of every person omitted in the lists of borough voters who shall be also proved to have been entitled on the same day of July to have his name inserted. The barristers are also to retain on the lists the names of persons not objected to, and likewise those of persons which have been objected to, unless the party so objecting shall appear, by himself or by some on his behalf, in support of his objection,—and in that case, it must be proved to the satisfaction of the barrister that the person objected to was entitled on the said 31st of July; but if it be proved that the person was incapacitated by any law or statute from voting, then in all such cases the barristers are authorised to expunge the name of such person from the lists, and also to expunge the name of any person who may be dead, and also to correct mistakes which are proved to have been made in any of the lists, as to any particulars required by this Act to be inserted in such lists. And where the Christian name, or the place of abode, or the nature of the qualification, or the local description of the property of any person who is included in such lists is wholly omitted, which is required by this Act to be inserted, the barristers are authorized to expunge the name of such person, unless the omission be supplied before the revision of the list is completed. But no person's name is to be expunged except in the case of his death, or of his being objected to by the overseers as before mentioned, or except in the case of any such omissions, unless such notices have been given to the overseers, and also to the person objected to, as are hereafter mentioned. The barristers are moreover empowered to require any assessor, collector of taxes, or other officer having the custody of any duplicate or tax-assessment, or any overseers having the custody of any poor-rate, to produce the same before him, at any court held in pursuance of this Act. And also, to adjourn the court from time to time, so as that no such court shall be held after the 25th of October in any year; and also to administer an oath (or, in the case of a Quaker or Moravian, an affirmation) to all persons making objection to the insertion or omission of any name in the lists, and to all persons objected to, or claiming to be inserted in any such lists, or claiming to have any mistake corrected or omission supplied, and to all witnesses who may be tendered on either side. Lastly, every barrister is, upon the hearing in open court, finally to determine upon the validity of such claims and objections, and for that purpose to have the same powers, and proceed in the same manner (except where otherwise directed by this Act), as the returning officer of any county, city, or borough, according to the laws and usages now observed at elections; and the barristers are, in open court, to set their initials against the names respectively struck out or inserted, and against any part of the lists in which any mistake has been corrected or omission supplied, and to sign their names to every page of the lists so settled. (Clauses, 50, 43 and 5).

§ 37. Every barrister appointed to revise lists, under this Act, is to be paid at the rate of five guineas for every day that he shall be so employed, over and above his travelling and other expenses; and after the termination of his last sitting, he is to lay before the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury a statement of the number of days during which he has been so employed, and an account of the travelling and other expenses incurred in respect of such employment; and the Lords Commissioners are to make an order for the amount to be paid to such barrister. (Clause 57).

The lists of voters for the county signed by the barrister as before mentioned, to be forthwith transmitted to the clerk of the peace of the county or division for which such barrister has been appointed, and the clerk of the peace is to keep them among the records of the sessions, arranged with every hundred in alphabetical order, and to cause the lists to be fairly and truly copied in the same order in a book provided for that purpose, and to prefix to every name its proper number, beginning the numbers from the first name and continuing them in a regular series down to the last name, and to complete and deliver such book on or before the 31st of October in this and every succeeding year, to the sheriff or under-sheriff of the county, to be safely kept and delivered over to his successor. The lists of borough voters to be delivered to the respective returning officers, to be fairly and truly copied into books, and the books, together with the lists, to be delivered over to their successors, according to the directions above mentioned. And every such book to be deemed the register of the electors to vote after the end of this present Parliament, for any county, city, borough, or place at any election which may take place after the 31st of October in this year, and before the 1st of November, 1833; every such book in every succeeding year is to be deemed the register between the 1st day of November inclusive, in the year wherein the register has been made and the 1st of November in the succeeding year. (Clause 54).

Upon petition to the House of Commons complaining of an undue election, the petitioner, or any person defending the return, is empowered, to impeach the correctness of the register, by proving that, in consequence of the decision of the revising barrister, the name of any person was improperly inserted or retained, or the name of any person tendering his vote was improperly omitted; and the select committee is to report their determination thereupon, and the House to carry such determination into effect, or make any other order which it may deem proper. (Clause 60).

The overseers to cause to be written or printed copies of the lists in this and every succeeding year, and to deliver such copies to all persons applying for them, on payment of a reasonable price for each copy. Clerks of the peace and returning officers in like manner to have copies of the registers written or printed for sale. The monies arising from the sale are by the overseers to be accounted for and applied to the same purposes as monies collected for the relief of the poor, and by the clerks of the peace and returning officer to be accounted for to the treasurer of the county. (Clause 55).

Persons entitled to vote for counties are to give to the overseers of every parish and township notice of their claim according to Form 2 in Sched. H. (see Appendix), or to the like effect; but no person whose name is once upon the register is required to make any subsequent claim so long as he retains the same qualification, and continues in the same place of abode. (Clause 37).

Every person who is on the register for any county, or who has claimed to be inserted in any list for the then current year, may object to any person as not having been entitled on the 31st of July then next preceding to have his name inserted in any list of voters for such county, &c.; and every person so objecting, except overseers objecting as before-mentioned, are, on or before the 25th of August in this and every succeeding year, to give, or cause to be given, a notice in writing according to Form 4. in Sched. H., to the overseers who made out the list in which the name of the person objected to was inserted, and also to give to the person objected to, or leave at his place of abode, as described in the list, or personally deliver to his tenant in occupation of the premises described in such list, a notice in writing according to Form 5 in Sched. H. (Clause 39).

Every person giving notice of his claim to vote for the county, is to pay one shilling, otherwise such notice will not be deemed valid. (Clause 51).

DUTIES OF OVERSEERS AND OTHER OFFICERS IN MAKING OUT LISTS OF CLAIMANTS, &c. FOR COUNTIES.

The sheriffs of Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, and the counties divided by this Act, to cause proclamation to be made of the several days for the elections in the several ridings, parts, and divisions of their respective counties; and they are to preside either in person or by their deputies. Sheriffs generally empowered to appoint deputies to preside, and poll-clerks to take the poll at the principal places of election, and also at the several places to be appointed for taking the polls as hereafter mentioned. (Clause 61 and 62).

The Overseers of every parish and township on the 20th of June in every year to cause notices to be fixed on the church or chapel door, then in some public or conspicuous situation, a notice according to Form 1, Schedule H. requiring all persons who claim to vote for the county or division in respect of lands or tenements situate wholly or in part in their parish or township, to send a notice of their claims, as hereafter mentioned; and by s. 38, they are, on or before the 31st of July, to make out according to Form 3, Schedule H., an alphabetical list of all persons claiming as aforesaid, and on the same day of every succeeding year, to make out a similar list of all persons who shall be then on the register, and also of all persons claiming to be inserted in such list. The list to contain the Christian name and surname, at full length, of every person, his place of abode, nature of his qualification, and the local and other description of such lands and tenements as the same are respectively set forth in his claim to vote, and the name of the occupying tenant, if stated in such claim. The overseers to sign their lists, and to cause a sufficient number of copies to be written or printed and to be fixed on the church or chapel door, or in some public or conspicuous situation, on the two Sundays next after such list shall have been made; every overseer to keep a copy of his list, to be perused by any person without payment of any fee, at all reasonable hours during the two first weeks after such list shall have been made. Places extra-parochial, or having no overseers, for the purpose of making out such lists, to be deemed to be within the adjoining parish; and when there is more than one adjoining parish, then to be within that which is least populous. (Clause 37).

Overseers, having reasonable cause to object to any claiming as aforesaid, are empowered to add the words "objected to," opposite the name of every such person, on the margin of their respective lists; and to include the names of persons objected to by third persons, as hereinafter mentioned, in a list according to Form 6, Schedule H., and to cause copies of such lists to be fixed on the church door, &c. as before directed, on the two Sundays next preceding the 15th of September in this and every succeeding year, and likewise to keep a copy of such lists for inspection, without payment of any fee, at all reasonable hours during the ten days next preceeding the said 15th of September. (Clause 39).

Overseers are required to deliver the lists of county voters, together with a statement of the persons objected to by themselves and others, to the high-constable of the hundred or district in which their parish or township is situate; and the high-constables are to transmit them forthwith to the clerk of the peace of the county, who is to make out an abstract of the number of persons objected to, and transmit the same to the barristers to be appointed as hereinafter mentioned. (Clause 40).

The clerk of the peace is, at the opening of the first court to be held by the barrister for any county, riding, or division as hereinafter mentioned, to produce or cause to be produced the lists of county voters delivered to him by the high constables as aforesaid; and the overseers of every parish or township who made out the lists of voters are to attend and deliver a copy of the list of persons objected to, and to answer upon oath all questions put to them by the barrister touching any matter necessary for revising such lists. (Clause 42).

POLLING AT COUNTY ELECTIONS.

The polling at county elections, to commence at nine o'clock in the forenoon of the next day but two after the day fixed for the election, unless such day be Saturday or Sunday, then on the Monday following, and to continue for two successive days only, that is to say, for seven hours on the first day of polling, and for eight hours on the second day of polling, the poll to close at four on the second day. Sheriffs authorized to erect booths at the principal place of election, and also at each of the polling places allotted by the Boundary Act; and they are to have the names of the several parishes and places affixed on the respective booths, at which each voter is to give his vote as before-mentioned. The poll-clerks, at the close of each day's poll, after enclosing and sealing their several books, to deliver them to the sheriff or his deputy, who is to give a receipt for them, and at the commencement of the second day's poll to deliver them back so sealed; and at the final close of the poll, every deputy is to transmit them so sealed to the sheriff or under-sheriff, who is to keep them unopened until the re-assembling of the court on the day next but one after the close of the poll, unless such day be Sunday, then on the Monday following, when the numbers are to be cast up as they appear on the several poll-books, and the state of the poll being declared, proclamation of the members chosen is to be made not later than two in the afternoon of the same day. (Clauses, 62, 64, 65).

EXPENSES AT COUNTY ELECTIONS.

The expenses incurred by Overseers in making out lists, &c. are to be defrayed out of the monies collected for the relief of the poor. The booths are to be erected at the joint and equal expense of the Candidates. The expense of each booth not to exceed 40*l*. (Clauses 56 and 91).

SWANSEA, New District, co. Glamorgan, comprising Swansea, Aberavon, Kenfig, Loughor, and Neath. Electors, old constituency of burgesses. 10% houses 1200. Population 18,833. Limits: Aberavon extends from where the Avon falls into the sea, south of the town, northward, along the boundary Havod-y-Porth, to a stone fence nearly opposite to a small round pool; thence along this fence until it meets a path leading to a small cottage; thence along this path to a ford across a brook opposite Margam Chapel; thence along the road to Dyffrynucha, until it meets the rail-road from Pai-bach copper-works; thence northward along this road as far as a stream; thence until this stream runs into the Avon; thence to where a stream running through Cwm Bychan Ravine falls into the Avon; thence along this road to the boundary of Baglan; thence southward until this boundary meets that of Aberavon parish; thence westward until this boundary is left by that of the old borough; thence along this boundary to that of Havod-y-Porth, and thence southward to the point first described. Kenfig comprises the old borough of Kenfig. Loughor, the old borough of Loughor. Neath extends from the Neath, where it is left by the old borough boundary, along this boundary, to the point where Caerfwel ditch joins the Neath; thence along this ditch to Heol-morfa lane; thence until this lane joins the Merthyr high road; thence until this road is left by the Pontardawey road; thence until this road is joined by Rheol-y-glow lane; thence until this lane meets a brook; thence along this brook until it meets Rheol-wern-fraith lane; thence along this lane until it is cut by the fence of Cae-eanddaw field; thence along this fence until it meets a brook running to Nantlyws; thence along this canal, until it crosses the Clydach stream; thence along this stream until it joins the Neath; thence to the point first described. Swansea extends from where the northern boundary of St. John's parish is crossed by the road to Llangefelach church, northward, along this road, until it is joined by Rheol-y-coap lane; and thence until this lane or its continuation joins the Neath Turnpike-road; thence northward along this road as far as a road leading towards Clas Mont farm; thence along this road, until it is met, opposite to the Penlan road, by a track leading to a well head; thence by this track to the well-head; thence along the stream flowing from it, until it falls into the Nant Velin stream; thence along this stream, until it crosses a road from Morriston; thence along this road, until it reaches the bridge over the Tawey; thence eastward, along the Neath road, until it is met, near the Star public-house, by a lane; thence along this lane, until it meets the boundary of St. Thomas, near Tregwl; thence eastward, along this boundary, until it meets that of the town and franchise; and thence westward to the boundary of St. John; and thence to the point first described. Returning officer, the mayor.

The words "northward," "southward," used in the above descriptions of the boundaries, denote the direction in which any boundary immediately proceeds from the point last described, but not throughout to the next point. Where a road is mentioned, it means the principal road; where a line is said to be drawn from or to an object, it implies to the centre of the object. Every building through which a boundary is made to pass, is to be included within that; and where the boundaries of more than one place pass through the same building, then it is to be considered as within that which before this Act was entitled to return members; and if neither or both return members, then within that the area whereof is the smallest. Wherever any road, lane, path, river, &c., is mentioned as being cut by or passed through, &c., the middle of such road, &c., is always to be understood. By the words "sea" and "sea-coast," are to be understood the low-water mark. No place is to include any detached part, if in consequence of including it, the boundary of such place would not be continuous; unless before the passing of this Act the detached part had, for the purposes of election, formed part of that place. It is provided that misnomers, or inaccurate descriptions are not to prevent or abridge the operation of this Act, if it be so designated as to be commonly understood; and for the purpose of identifying the descriptions with their subjects respectively, they are to be held applicable to such subjects as they existed on the 1st of July, 1831.

ELECTIVE FRANCHISE IN BOROUGHES.

All persons not subject to any legal incapacity will be entitled to a vote in any city or borough, who as owner or tenant shall occupy any house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building, either separately or jointly with any land within such city or borough, occupied therewith by him as owner or as tenant under the same landlord, of the clear yearly value of 10*l*., if duly registered, but no person can be so registered in any year unless he shall have occupied such premises for twelve calendar months next previous to the 31st of July in such year, nor unless such person shall have been rated in respect of such premises to all rates for the relief of the poor in the parish or township where such premises are situate, nor unless all the poor's rates and assessed taxes payable in respect of such premises shall have been paid on or before the 20th day of July in such year, nor unless such person shall have resided for six calendar months next previous to the 31st of July in such year, within the city, borough, or place sharing in the election as aforesaid, or within seven statute miles of the same. (Clause 27).

The premises giving a title to vote for a borough need not be the same, but may be different premises occupied in succession; and when there are joint occupiers of any premises, each of such occupiers subject to the conditions above-mentioned, will be entitled to a vote in respect of the premises so jointly occupied, in case the clear yearly value of such premises shall be of an amount which, when divided by the number of such occupiers, shall give a sum of not less than 10*l*. for each and every such occupier. (Clauses 28 and 29).

Any person occupying premises in a borough may demand to be rated to the relief of the poor in respect of the premises so occupied by him, whether the landlord shall or shall not be liable to be rated, and upon his so claiming and actually paying or tendering the full amount of the rates that may be due in respect of such premises, the overseers of the parish or township in which such premises are situate are hereby required to put the name of such occupier upon the rate for the time being, and in case of their neglect or refusal, such occupier is to be deemed to have been rated to the relief of the poor. This clause further provides that the landlord's liability to pay the rate, by virtue of any Act of Parliament, is not to be varied or discharged in case the tenant makes default. (Clause 30).

Freeholders or burgage tenants previously having a right to vote for any city or borough, being a county of itself, to retain that right if duly registered; but no person can be so registered in any year in respect of any freehold or burgage tenement, unless he shall have been in the actual possession thereof, or in the receipt of the rents and profits for his own use, for twelve calendar months next previous to the 31st of July in such year, except where the same shall have come to him by descent, &c., as provided in Clause 26; nor unless he shall have resided for six calendar months, as directed in Clause 27. This enactment is not to be deemed to vary or abridge the provisions hereinbefore made relative to the right of voting for any place being a county of itself, in respect of any freehold for life or lives, and moreover is to extend to freeholds within the boundaries of such city or town, as the same shall be settled by the future Boundary Act. (Clause 31).

Every person who would have been entitled, if this Act had not passed, to vote for any city or borough not included in Schedule A, as a burgess or freeman, or in the city of London as a freeman and liveryman, to retain his right of voting if duly registered; but no person can be so registered in any year, unless he shall, on the 31st of July in such year, be qualified in such manner as would entitle him then to vote if such day were the day of election, and this Act had not been passed, nor unless he shall have resided for six calendar months, as prescribed within such city or borough, or seven miles from the place where the poll for such city or borough shall heretofore have been taken, nor unless where, being a burgess or freeman of any place sharing in the election for any city or borough, he shall have resided for six months within such place as aforesaid, or within seven miles of the place mentioned in conjunction with such place as named in the second column of Schedule E 2. But no person admitted as a freeman since the first day of March, 1831, will be entitled to vote as such, unless admitted in respect of birth or servitude, and in this case the right must be derived from or through some person who is or was entitled to be a freeman previous to the 1st of March, 1831, or who at any time may acquire the right by servitude. The freemen or burgesses of Swansea, Loughor, Neath, Aberavon, and Kenfig, who had heretofore a right to vote for the borough of Cardiff, are no longer to retain that right, but are in future to vote for the borough composed of the five towns mentioned in Clause 10. (Clauses, 32, 27, and 10).

Every person having now a right to vote for any city or borough, except those in Schedule A, may retain such right so long as he shall be qualified as an elector according to the usages and customs of such city or borough, or any law now in force. But he must be duly registered; and in order to entitle him to be registered, he must reside according to the provision given in the last section. And if the name of any such person shall be omitted for two successive years from the register, his right is to cease for ever, unless the omission shall have been in consequence of his receiving parochial relief, or being absent on his Majesty's service in a naval or military capacity. (Clause 33).

All persons having now a right to vote for the borough of New Shoreham, Cricklade, Aylesbury, or East Retford, in respect of any freehold wheresoever situate, are, to retain such right, subject to the provisions mentioned in last section, except that, in order to be entitled to registration, they must have resided for six months within the place, or seven miles thereof; and as to all persons now having a right to vote for the borough of New Shoreham, in respect of any freehold situate in the borough of Horsham, or for the borough of Cricklade, in respect of any freehold situate in the borough of Malmesbury, as such boroughs may respectively be defined by the future Boundary Act, they are to be inserted in the list of voters hereinafter directed to be made by the overseers of that parish or township within the borough of New Shoreham, or Cricklade, as defined by this Act, which shall be next adjoining to the parish or township in which such freeholds shall be situate, and if adjoining to two or more parishes, then such persons are to be inserted in the list of voters of the least populous of such adjoining parishes. (Clause 34).

No person will be entitled to vote for any city or borough (not being a county of itself) in respect of any estate of freehold acquired since the 1st of March, 1831, unless it shall have come to him since that day, and previously to the passing of this Act, by descent, succession, marriage, marriage settlement, devise or promotion to any benefice or office. (Clause 35).

No person will be entitled to be registered in any year who shall, within twelve months next previous to the last day of July in such year, have received parochial relief or other alms which now by law disqualify from voting in elections. (Clause 36).

PERSONS NOW ENTITLED TO VOTE FOR CITIES AND BOROUGHES.

1. Occupants, whether as tenant or owner of any building, or any building and land

(but not of land only) of the yearly rent of 10*l.* : and where the amount of the rent is paid upon buildings and land, they must be held under the same landlord.

2. Liverymen and Freemen of the city of London, and freemen and burgesses of corporate towns or boroughs, who have been admitted as freemen on or before the 31st of March, 1831, are, by the new Act, to retain their former right. So, likewise, those who derive their right by birth or servitude from freemen, with this distinction, that the right of birth must be derived from freemen admitted or entitled so to be, before that day and year; but the right in respect of servitude may be derived from those who become freemen at any time.

3. All persons possessing any prior right to vote in cities and boroughs are to retain their right. The qualification of inhabitants in boroughs are various, some requiring one, and others many qualifications. In some, leaseholders, and in others, copyholders have a right of voting. Those entitled to a vote in respect of inhabitancy, extend to Pot-wallers, or persons furnishing their own diet, whether as householders or lodgers. 3 Lnd. 159; 1 Dougl. 370: Householders, or those who have the control of the outer-door. 2 Peck. 244. Inhabitants paying scot and lot, that is, those who are assessed and contribute to the poor. This right is strictly confined to the person of the voter, and is to continue only so long as he shall remain qualified to vote according to the usage of the place for which he votes, not in any wise to affect the election of members for the two Universities of Oxford and Cambridge; nor the act entitle any person to vote in the election of members for the city of Oxford or town of Cambridge in respect of the occupation of any chambers or premises in any of the colleges or halls of those two Universities. (Clause 78).

REGISTRATION AS TO CITIES AND BOROUGHES.

Borough voters are required—1. To be rated to the poor; but if the overseer refuse or neglect to rate any person on demand, a tender of the rates will be as effectual as an actual payment would have been. 2. To pay all rates and assessed taxes on or before the 20th of July in each year, which shall have become due previously to the 6th of April next preceding. Before a freeman and liveryman of London is entitled to vote, he must have been, by 11 G. 2, c. 18, upon the livery twelve calendar months, and have paid his livery fines, and not have been discharged within two years from paying any of the rates and taxes payable by the citizens of London, or within that time have received any alms whatever. 3. To reside within the town for which he is entitled to vote or within seven miles, for six calendar months next previous to the 31st of July in such year. 4. If his name be omitted in the list made out by the overseers, he must give the overseer notice on or before the 25th of August in such year. 5. If his claim be objected to, he must attend, either in person or by attorney, at the Barrister's Court, to have the objections removed. (For Duties and Office of Barrister as respects the registry of the Electors of Cities and Boroughs, see the same head as relate to Counties, page 17).

DUTIES OF OVERSEERS AND OTHER OFFICERS IN MAKING OUT LISTS OF CLAIMANTS FOR CITIES AND BOROUGHES.

Overseers of every parish or township situate wholly or in part within any city or borough, on or before the 31st of July in this and every succeeding year, to make out, according to Form 1 in Schedule I, an alphabetical list of all persons entitled to vote for such city or borough, in respect of the occupation of premises of the clear yearly value of 10*l.*, and another alphabetical list, according to Form 2 in Schedule I, of all other persons, except freemen, who may be entitled to a vote for such city or borough in respect of any other right whatsoever. Such lists to contain the christian and surname at full length, together with the nature of his qualification; and where any person is entitled to vote in respect of any property, then the name of the street, lane, or other description of the place where such property may be situate, is to be specified in the list; and where the person is entitled to a vote in any other respect, then the name of the street or place of such person's abode is to be specified in the list. The overseers to sign the lists, fix up copies, and keep copies for inspection as before directed. Also, by s. 45, extra-parochial places are to be deemed to be within the adjoining parish or township, as before. For the purpose of making out such lists, overseers are empowered, by s. 51, to have access to any duplicate or tax-assessment books for their respective parishes and townships, upon request made by them, at any reasonable time between the 1st of June and 31st of July, in this and any succeeding year, to any assessor or collector of the taxes having custody of the same.

The town-clerks of every city or borough, or place sharing in the election for any city or borough, are required, by s. 46, to make out, according to Form 3 Schedule I, a list of the freemen entitled to vote for such city or borough; a copy of such list to be fixed on the door of the town-hall, or in some other conspicuous situation, on the two Sundays next after such lists shall have been made out, and a copy to be kept for inspection, as before directed. Where there is no town-clerk, or he is dead or incapable of acting, matters required to be done by this Act may be done by any person performing similar duties, or by the chief civil officer of such city, borough, or place.

Overseers required to make a list, according to Form 6 in Schedule I, of all persons whose names shall have been omitted in borough lists and claiming to be inserted, and also of all persons objected to by third persons as hereinafter mentioned, according to Form 7 in Schedule I; and town clerks are to make out a list of all persons so claiming as freemen, according to Form 8 in Schedule I., and also of all persons as freemen so objected to, according to Form 9 in Schedule I. Copies of such lists to be fixed up by the overseers and town-clerks as before directed. Overseers and town-clerks likewise to keep a copy of such lists for inspection, without payment of any fee; and also to deliver a copy of such lists to any person requiring the same, on payment of one shilling for each copy.

For providing a list of such of the freemen of the city of London as are liverymen of the several companies entitled to a vote, the returning officers of the city are, on or before the 31st of July in this and every succeeding year, to issue precepts to the clerks of the several companies, requiring them to make out a list, according to Form 1 in Schedule K, of the freemen of London, being liverymen of the respective companies, who are entitled to a vote; and every such clerk is to sign such list, and transmit the same with two printed copies to such returning officers, who are to fix one copy in the Guildhall and one in the Royal Exchange. Clerks of the said livery companies are to have a sufficient number of such lists to be printed at the expense of the respective companies, and to keep the same for inspection as before directed. In the case of persons omitted and claiming to be inserted in such lists as hereafter mentioned, the returning officers are to include their names in a list, according to Form 2 in Schedule K, and cause it to be fixed up in the Guildhall and the Royal Exchange on the two Mondays next preceding the 15th of September in this and every succeeding year. Returning officers and the clerks of the several companies are to keep copies of such lists for inspection, without payment of any fee, during the ten days next preceding the said 15th of September. Persons omitted in the lists of the freemen and liverymen of London, or objected to who claim to have their names inserted, are to give notice according to Form 1 in Schedule K, or to the like effect, to the returning-officer and the clerk of the company in the list whereof he claims to have his name inserted. And every freeman objecting to another is to give notice, &c. to the person objected to according to Form 3 in Sched. K.

Persons whose names have been omitted in any borough list, and who claim to have their name inserted, are, on or before the above-mentioned day, to give notice according to Form 4 in Sched. I, (see Appendix), or to the like effect, to the overseers of their respective parish, or, if he claim as a freeman of any borough, to the town-clerk. And every person, whose name is inserted in any borough list of voters, may object to others as not entitled, and the person so objecting is to give a notice in writing as above directed, according to Form 5 in Sched. I, and to the person objected to, &c. according to Form 6 in Sched. I. (Clause 47).

Overseers and town-clerks and the returning officers of the city of London, are to produce their respective lists before the barristers, and the clerks of the several livery companies of the city of London, and the town-clerk of every other city, borough, or place sharing in the election therewith, and the several overseers within every city, borough, or place, are to attend and answer upon oath as abovementioned. (Clause 50).

POLLING AT ELECTIONS FOR CITIES AND BOROUGHES.

Polling at elections for all boroughs in England except Monmouth, to commence on the day fixed for the election, or at latest on the third day after, and to continue for two days only, as before prescribed for the county elections. The booths may be situated either in one place or at several places, and are to be divided into compartments, so that no greater number than 600 be allowed to poll at any one compartment. To have the names of the several parishes affixed on each, and public notice of the situation and allotment of the different booths are to be given two days before the commencement of the poll by the returning officer, and the poll-clerks are to observe the directions before given as to the sealing of the poll-books and delivering them to the sheriff or his deputy. Immediately on the final close of the poll, or the day after, unless it be Sunday, the returning officer is openly to break the seals of the poll-books, and, after casting up the numbers, to declare the state of the poll, and proclaim the Members, as before directed. (Clause 68).

EXPENSES FOR ELECTIONS AT CITIES AND BOROUGHES.

Expenses incurred by overseers in making out lists, &c., to be defrayed out of the monies collected for the relief of the poor; and those incurred by the returning officer of any city or borough, for the copying and printing of lists and registers, to be defrayed by the overseers out of the same monies.

The booths to be erected at the joint and equal expense of the candidates, with whom the returning-officer may make a contract if he thinks fit. The expense for each booth to be erected for any parish or place not to exceed 25*l*. Deputies are to be paid two guineas each by the day, and poll-clerks one guinea, at the expense of the candidates; but if any person is proposed without his consent, the party proposing him is to pay his share of the said expenses, as if he were a candidate. Electors for cities and boroughs are to pay one shilling annually, which will be levied as money applicable for the relief of the poor. (Clauses 56 and 71).

OF THE RETURNING OFFICERS OF CITIES AND BOROUGHES.

The persons described in Schedules C and D are to be the returning officers at elections for the boroughs with which they are respectively named; and for those boroughs in the same schedules for which no returning officer is named, the sheriff of the county is, within two months after the passing of this Act, and in every succeeding year, in the month of March, by writing under his hand, to be delivered to the clerk of the peace of the county, within one week to be by him filed and preserved with the records of his office, to nominate and appoint for each of such boroughs a fit person being resident therein, to be the returning officer, until the succeeding March; and in the event of his death, or incapacity to act, then upon notice thereof, to nominate a fit person in his stead. No person after the expiration of his office will be compellable to serve the office again for the same borough: nor is any one qualified to serve as a Member of Parliament compellable to serve as a returning officer, if within one week after having notice of his appointment, he makes oath of such qualification before any justice of the peace. Persons in holy orders, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor are disqualified from serving the office of returning officer, and any person nominated to be a returning officer cannot be an overseer during the period of his office. In case any of the boroughs in Schedules C and D should be incorporated by charter, the mayor, or other municipal officer, will, in that case, be the returning officer. (Clause 11).

The sheriff of the Isle of Wight, or his deputy, is to be the returning officer for the Isle of Wight, and the portreeve of Swansea to be the returning officer for the borough composed of Swansea, &c. The returning officer of the borough of Monmouth to appoint deputies for the towns of Newport and Usk, and the returning officer of the shire towns and boroughs in Schedule E is to appoint deputies for the places sharing respectively with them. The portreeve of Swansea is to appoint deputies for the other towns composing with it the new borough, and if there be a mayor or other municipal officer for either of these towns, he is to be appointed the deputy. All deputies to have the same power to administer oaths, or appoint commissioners to administer them, as returning officers now have by law. The sheriff or his deputy is empowered to act in places of extraordinary, as in those of ordinary jurisdiction. (Clauses 66, 73, and 74).

Sheriffs and other returning officers to cause true copies of the register of voters to be made for the use of each booth, and to certify under their hands such copies to be true. Likewise authorised to close the poll before the expiration of the time fixed by this Act; and if the proceedings at the election be interrupted by riot or open violence, adjourn the poll until the next day, or until such time as the obstruction or interruption has ceased; and any day on which the poll is so adjourned is not to be reckoned as one of the days of polling; but wherever the poll is adjourned by any deputy of any sheriff, or other returning officer, such deputy is forthwith to give notice of such adjournment; and the state of the poll is not to be finally declared until it be transmitted to the returning officer. (Clauses 72 and 70).

The lists, when finally settled by the revising barristers, to be transmitted to the clerks of the peace, as respects the county voters, and to the returning officer as respects the borough voters, which are to be copied into a book before the 31st of October, to form the register for the ensuing year. (Clause 31).

PROVISIONS APPLYING GENERALLY TO COUNTIES, CITIES, AND BOROUGHES.

All laws, statutes, and usages now in force respecting elections, to remain and be in full force, except as far as any of the said laws are repealed or altered by this Act. If any sheriff, returning officer, barrister, overseer, or any person whosoever, wilfully disobey, or contravene any provision of this Act, he is liable to be sued in an action of debt for the penal sum of 500*l.*, or for any less sum which the jury may think just to be paid for his offence; and the defendant in such action is, on conviction, to pay such penal sum, with full costs of suit, to the party who may sue for the same, but no such action can be brought by the party actually aggrieved, provided always, that no such action shall be brought except by a person being an elector or claiming to be an elector, or a candidate, or a member actually returned, or other party aggrieved: provided also, that the remedy hereby given against the returning officer shall not be construed to supersede any remedy or action against him according to the law now in force. (Clauses 71 and 76).

Persons incapacitated to vote by the old law are equally so under this act. These are, aliens, unless made denizens by letters patent, or naturalized by act of parliament; infants; idiots; lunatics, except during lucid intervals; women; persons convicted of felony, or perjury and bribery, by 2 Geo. II., c. 24, s. 6; peers, except Irish peers; revenue officers, by 22 Geo. III., c. 41, s. 23; police magistrates and officers, by 3 Geo. IV., c. 55, s. 14, 10 Geo. IV., c. 45; persons receiving parochial relief, unless families of militia-men on actual duty by 18 Geo. III., c. 59, s. 25. Receiving of private charity affects the right of voting only in particular cases where it is deemed to be equivalent to the receiving of parochial relief.

In all cases yearly value of the estate giving a right to vote must be clear of all charges; but rates and taxes by the new as well as the old law are not deemed charges; and by this act, which repeals the clause in 20 Geo. III., c. 17, an assessment to the land-tax is not necessary. The value of an estate is what a tenant would give for it; not what the owner occupying it would make of it himself. Where interest paid on a mortgage reduces the value below the required amount, it will invalidate the vote.

No nomination to be made, or election holden, for any city or borough, in any church, chapel, or other place of public worship; but sheriffs may use houses or buildings instead of booths; and the returning officers in the city of London are to take the poll of the liverymen at Guildhall. (Clauses 68 and 71).

Persons claiming to be inserted in any lists, or objecting to others, are required to attend either in person or by some one on their behalf; but it is expressly provided, that no person is to be attended by counsel at any courts held by revising barristers. And if any person take a false oath or make a false affirmation in the barristers' courts, he is to be deemed guilty of perjury, and punishable accordingly. (Clauses 42, 50, and 52).

No other inquiry permitted to be made at the time of polling, except the three following questions, to be put by the returning officer: 1. Are you the same person whose name appears as A. B. on the register of voters now in force for the county of ———, riding, or city, &c., as the case may be. 2. Have you already voted, either here or elsewhere, at this election for the county of ———, &c. 3. Have you the same qualification for which your name was originally inserted in the register of voters now in force for the county of ——— [or, specifying in each case the particulars of the qualification as described in the register]. If any person wilfully make a false answer to any of the above mentioned questions, he is to be deemed guilty of an indictable misdemeanour, and punished accordingly; and the returning officer is (if required on behalf of any candidate) to administer an oath or an affirmation in the following form: i. e. "You do swear [or being a Quaker or Moravian, do affirm], that you are the same person whose name appears as A. B. in the register of voters now in force for the county of ——— [or for the riding, &c.], and that you have not before voted, either here or elsewhere, at the present election, for the said county, &c. So help you God." No other oath is to be required of any elector, either in proof of his freehold, age, or other qualification; and no one is to be excluded from voting, unless it appears to the returning officer, upon putting such questions, that the person claiming to vote is not the same person whose name appears on the register, or that he has previously voted at the same election, or has not the same qualification for which his name was originally inserted, or unless the person shall refuse to take the above oath or affirmation, or that against bribery, or any other oath now required by law and not hereby dispensed with. (Clauses 42 and 50).

No person to vote in respect of any property situate in any parish or place, except at the booth allotted, as is hereinafter mentioned, for such parish or place; and if no booth be allotted for the same, then at any of the booths for the same district; and in case any parish or place happens not to be included in any district, then the votes in respect of property in such parish are to be taken at the principal place of election for the county, riding, part, or division. Persons voting for any city or borough to poll at the booth allotted for the parish, district, or part, wherein the property may be situated in respect of which he claims to vote; or in case he does not claim to vote in respect of property, then wherein his place of abode as described in the register may be; but if there be no booth in such place, then the votes may be taken at any of the booths. (Clauses 64 and 68).

Under the words "city or borough," to be understood all corporate towns, cinque ports, districts, or places in England and Wales which are entitled, under this act, to return members, as also the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed. The words "returning-officer" are to apply to any person performing that office, by whatever name or title he may be called. The words "parish or township" extend to every parish, township, vill, hamlet, district or place maintaining its own poor. "Overseers of the poor" extend to all persons executing those duties, under whatever designation; and all matters directed to be done by the overseers may be lawfully done by the major part; and any notice required by this act to be given to the overseers, may be delivered to any one, or left at his place of abode, or sent by the post, addressed by a sufficient direction. Matters to be done by or with regard to justices of the peace, sessions of the peace, or clerks of the peace, for, and treasurers of counties, to extend to the justices, &c. for the several ridings of Yorkshire and parts of Lincolnshire; and the clerk of the peace for the borough of Newport, in the Isle of Wight, is to be taken for the clerk of the peace of the county of the Isle of Wight; and the respective justices, &c. are empowered to do all matters required by this act within places of exclusive jurisdiction as without. No misnomer or inaccurate description of any person or place named or described in any schedule annexed to this act, or in any list or register of voters, or in any notice required by this act, to prevent or abridge the operation of this act, provided that such person or place shall be so designated as to be commonly understood. (Clause 79).

Register is to be conclusive as to the qualification of the voter, and is not to be questioned at the election, nor any scrutiny made; but a voter who is excluded by the barrister from the register may, nevertheless, tender his vote. Three questions are to be put to the voter, if necessary, and an oath administered. The polling, neither for the county nor the town, is to last for more than two days. (Clause 46).

SCOTLAND.

ABSTRACT OF THE LEADING CLAUSES OF THE ACT.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE REPRESENTATION.

By Clause 1. Fifty-three Members to be returned in future for Scotland, of whom thirty shall be for the several or conjoined shires, or stewartries, mentioned in the act; and twenty-three for the several cities, burghs, and towns; and districts of cities, burghs, and towns, mentioned in the act.

By Clause 2. The burghs of Peebles and Selkirk no longer to form part of the district to which they previously belonged, but to form parts of the counties of Peebles and Selkirk respectively. The burgh of Rothsay in the same manner to cease to form part of a district, and to be deemed part of the shire of Bute.

By Clause 3. Thirty Members to be returned for counties, agreeably to Schedule A, and one by each of the two combined shires described in Schedule B.

By Clause 4. Of the twenty-three Members to be returned by each of the combined cities, burghs, and towns, described in Schedule C, one is to be returned by each of the cities, burghs, and towns, described in Schedule D; and one in each of the districts or sets of cities, burghs, and towns described in Schedule E.

QUALIFICATION OF ELECTORS.

By Clause 6. No one to acquire the right of voting either in shires, or in cities, burghs, and towns, other than by qualifications described in this Act, except only those who were on the roll as freeholders at the passing of the Act, or who previous to the 31st of March, 1831, have become the owners or superiors of lands affording the qualification to be so enrolled.

By Clause 7. Claims for registration to be possessed by every person not subject to legal incapacity; shall be entitled to be registered as directed in the Act, and thereafter to vote at any election for a shire in Scotland, who, in the present or in any future year, shall have been, for a period of not less than six calendar months next previous to the last day of July in any future year, the owner (whether he has made up his titles, or his infeft, or not), of any lands, houses, feu duties or other heritable subjects (except debts heritably secured) within the said shire, provided the subject or subjects on which he so claims shall be of the yearly value of ten pounds, and shall actually yield or be capable of yielding that value to the claimant, after deducting any feu duty, ground, annual, or other consideration which he may be bound to pay or to give or account for as a condition of his right, provided he be, by himself, his tenants, vassals, or others, in possession of the said subjects, and be either himself in the actual occupation or in receipt of the profits and issues thereof to the extent above-mentioned; provided always, that where the whole profits and issues of any such subject do not arise annually, but at longer intervals, the worth and amount of such occasional profits shall be taken into computation in estimating the annual value: provided also, that where any property which would entitle the owner to be registered and to vote as above shall come to any person, within the said period of six months by inheritance, marriage, marriage settlement, or mortis causa disposition, or by appointment to any place or office, such person shall be entitled to be registered on the first occasion of making up the list of voters next following such succession or acquisition.

By Clause 8. Elections for shires, where two or more persons are interested in any subject to which a right of voting is for the first time attached by this Act, as life-renter and as fiar, the right of voting to be in the life-renter and not in the fiar; and all joint owners to be entitled each to vote in respect of their joint property within the shire, provided the share or interest of each joint owner is of the yearly value of ten pounds, but not otherwise; provided also, that husbands shall be entitled to vote in respect of property belonging to their wives, or owned or possessed by such husbands after the death of their wives, by the courtesy of Scotland.

By Clause 9. Tenants in lands, houses, or other heritable subjects, entitled to be registered, and to vote at elections for the shires in which the said heritable subjects are situated, provided each tenant (whether joint or several) when the sheriff proceeds to consider his claim for registration, shall, for a period of not less than twelve months next previous to the last day of July, shall have held such subjects whether in his personal possession or not, under leases or other written title, for a period of not less than fifty-seven years (exclusive of breaks) at the option of the landlord or for the lifetime of the tenant, where the yearly value of such tenant's interest, after paying the rent and other consideration due by him for his said right, is not less than ten pounds; or for a period of not less than nineteen years where the clear yearly value of such tenant's interest is not less than fifty pounds; or where such tenant shall, for the period of twelve months, have been in the actual personal occupancy of any such subject, where the yearly rent is not less than fifty pounds; or where the tenant, whatever the rent may be, has truly paid for his interest in such subject a price, grassum, or consideration of not less than three hundred pounds: provided always, that where the rent is payable in whole or in part in grain, the value shall be estimated according to the average fiars of the counties in which the heritable subjects are situated for the three preceding years, and where payable in any other species of produce, according to the average market prices of the neighbourhood for the same period; and the said values being once so fixed at the time of registering or refusing to register shall be held as settled for the whole period of the lease; where the right to any such lease as would entitle the tenant to be registered and to vote as hereinbefore provided shall come to any person, within the preceding twelve calendar months above specified, by inheritance, marriage, marriage settlement, or mortis causa disposition, such person shall be entitled to be registered on the first occasion of making up the lists of voters next following such succession or acquisition: that no sub-tenant or assignee to any sub-lease for fifty-seven or nineteen years to be entitled to be registered or to vote in respect of his interest under such lease unless he shall be in the actual occupation of the premises thereby set.

By Clause 10. That from and after the end of this present parliament the members who are to be returned to serve in any future parliament for any single city, town, or burgh, on which the right of returning a member or members is by this Act conferred, shall no longer be elected by the town councils of such cities, burghs, or towns, but directly by the several individuals on whom the right of electing such members to serve in parliament is by this Act conferred; and where the election is by districts or sets of cities, burghs, or towns conjoined, the right of electing shall no longer be in the town councils or corporations of the said cities, burghs, or towns, or in delegates appointed by them, but in the individual voters on whom the right of election is by this Act conferred; and the member to serve in parliament for any such district shall be returned according to the majority of individual votes given in the whole district.

By Clause 11. Every person, not subject to any legal incapacity, entitled to be registered and to vote at elections for any of the cities, burghs, or towns, or districts of cities, burghs, or towns, who shall have been, for a period of not less than twelve calendar months next previous to the last day of July, in the occupancy, either as proprietor, tenant, or life-renter, of any house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building within the limits of such city, burgh, or town, either separately or jointly with any other house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building within the same limits, or with any land owned and occupied by him, or occupied under the same landlord, and also situate within the same limits, shall be of the yearly value of ten pounds: provided always, that the claimant shall have paid, on or before the twentieth day of July in any year, all assessed taxes which shall have become payable by him in respect of such premises previously to the sixth day of April then next preceding: provided also, that no such person shall be entitled to be registered or to vote in the present or any future year unless he shall have resided for six calendar months next previous to the last day of August in the present or the last day of July in any future year within such city, burgh, or town, or within seven statute miles of some part thereof: persons so resident entitled to be registered and to vote if they are the true owners of such premises as are herein-before mentioned, within such city, burgh, or town, of the yearly value of ten pounds or upwards, although they should not occupy any premises within its limits, or although the premises actually occupied by them should be of less yearly value than ten pounds; and that the husbands of such owners shall be entitled to vote, either in the lifetime of their wives, or after their death, if then holding such property by the courtesy of Scotland, no person entitled to be registered or to vote for any city, burgh, or town who shall have been in the receipt of parochial relief within twelve calendar months next previous to the last day of August in the year 1832, or next previous to the last day of July in any succeeding year.

By Clause 12. Premises in respect of which any person shall be deemed entitled to vote in the election for any city, burgh, or town, or district, shall not be required to have been the same premises for the whole twelve months of his occupancy, but may be different premises (but always of the requisite value) occupied in succession by such person; provided such person shall have paid all the assessed taxes legally exigible from him in respect of all such premises; and that where such premises shall be of the yearly value of twenty pounds or upwards, and shall be jointly occupied by more than one person, each of such joint occupiers shall be entitled to be registered and to vote, provided his share and interest in the same shall be of the yearly value of ten pounds or upwards.

REGISTRATION.

By Clause 13. Claims to registry, agreeably to the form in Schedule F, to be presented to the schoolmaster, or person officiating for him, of the parish in which the property on which the claim is made is situated. Printed forms for that purpose to be supplied to the schoolmaster by the sheriff clerk, who is to deliver copies of the same to each applicant, on the payment of sixpence, such forms to be filled up and returned to the schoolmaster, who shall place a list of the same at given times upon the church door, and annex to each list a notice of the times and places where the sheriff shall examine the claims, against which no objections shall have been lodged, as also of those persons who claim to be registered for the county, and of the persons who intend to object to the claims of others. Note of objection to be signed by persons by whom it is presented, and to be in the form of the first part of Schedule H. Notice to be served by the objector to the party against whom he objects, within two days after having lodged such objections. The parishes of Tulliallan, Culross, and Logie in the county of Perth, and the parish of Alva in the county of Stirling, for the purposes of this bill, be held to form parts of the county of Clackmannan; and the parishes of Muckhart and Fossoway in the county of Perth, for the purposes of this Act, to be held to form parts of the county of Kinross.

By Clause 14. Each sheriff between the twelfth day of September and the fifteenth day of October in the present year, to examine and decide upon the merits of all claims for registration within his county; and that for this purpose the sheriffs of the counties of Aberdeen, Ayr, Argyle, Fife, Inverness, Lanark, Forfar, Perth, Renfrew, and Ross and Cromarty shall hold open courts during this period at not less than three several towns or places in their said counties; and the sheriffs in all the other counties shall hold open courts at not less than two several places, which places shall be so selected as to be most convenient for the claimants in the different districts of the said counties.

By Clause 15. Every person claiming a right to vote for a member or members to serve in parliament for any city, burgh, or town, or district, or cities, burghs, or towns, in Scotland, shall give in a claim subscribed by himself or his agent, and accompanied by such written title as he may choose to produce, to the town clerk of the city, burgh, or town within which the premises in respect of which he so claims are situate, which claim shall be in all respects in the same form as is hereinbefore directed as to claims to vote for a county, and shall be issued, received back, marked, and entered in a book or register by the town clerk on the same terms and in the same manner in all respects as the claims for county votes are hereinbefore directed to be issued, received back, marked, and entered by the several parish schoolmasters and sheriff clerks of each county. Where there is no town clerk, the duty to be performed by a person nominated by the sheriff of the county.

By Clause 16. The town clerks or persons officiating for them, to place the lists on the church door, and to act in the same manner with respect to claims and objections as the schoolmaster, in respect to similar claims and objections in relation to votes for counties.

By Clauses 17 and 18. Claims, objections, &c., to be laid before the sheriff by the 12th September, in the year 1832, who shall, after due examination, admit those which are admissible and reject the remainder.

By Clause 19. No written pleadings in any case allowed in support of claims or objections; but when the sheriff shall reject any claim to which no objection has been offered, and when he shall hear parties upon any claim to which any objection has been offered, he shall make a note of the statement of fact, and of the pleas founded on, and of the names of the witnesses, and shall affix his signature to the deeds, writings, and other documents produced by the parties in support of such claim or objection; and it shall not be competent to support any appeal upon any ground of fact or of law not set forth in such note of the sheriff, or to produce any witnesses not named in the said note, or any deeds, writings, or other documents to which the signature of the said sheriff is not affixed.

By Clause 2. That on or before the 15th day of October in the present year, each sheriff clerk shall complete his alphabetical lists or registers of voters for the county : provided always, that on or before the said 15th day of October each sheriff clerk, being the keeper of the roll of freeholders for the county of which he is clerk, shall transfer the names of all the freeholders standing on such roll after the passing of this bill to the said lists or registers of voters, without requiring any claim to be presented on behalf of such freeholders ; and if any election shall take place for such county before the said register shall be corrected at the next yearly revisal, as hereinafter provided, the votes at this first election shall be taken according to this first alphabetical register, an authenticated copy or copies of which shall accordingly be sent for this purpose to each of the polling places appointed for the county : provided always, that at all future elections which shall take place after the yearly correction of such registers, the votes shall be taken according to the last completed register.

By Clause 21. On or before the 12th day of October, 1832, the town clerk to complete alphabetical lists of voters in the same manner as the sheriff clerks of counties, and within three days transmit a copy to the town clerk of the city, burgh, or town, at which the election is to take place, who shall forthwith combine and reduce the whole into one list or register of voters for the whole district, those for each burgh being always kept together, to be kept by him in the said principal burgh, for the purpose of reference and inspection ; and if any election shall take place for such district before the said registers shall be corrected at the next yearly revisal, as hereinafter provided, the votes at such election shall be taken in each burgh according to their first alphabetical registers for such burgh, the originals or authenticated copies of which shall accordingly be sent to each of the polling places that may be appointed in each such burgh : provided always, that in all future elections the votes shall be taken according to the last completed and corrected register, as hereinafter enacted.

By Clause 22. Each sheriff once every year after the present year to examine and correct his said registers ; and each sheriff clerk, and town clerk, within the county, shall, for this purpose, in the month of June, and between the tenth and twentieth days thereof in every such future year, give public notice, by advertisements affixed to the church doors of all the county, burgh, and town churches within the shire respectively ; and also, if they shall see cause, by advertisement in the newspaper of greatest reputed circulation in the shire, to all persons intending to claim to be registered, or to object to the title of any voter already on the register, to give in their several claims, titles, and objections to the schoolmasters and town clerks, as such claims, titles, and objections respectively are by this act directed or authorized to be given in on or before the twentieth day of July then next ensuing, after which no such claims or objections shall be received ; and when the new claims are so given in, the schoolmasters, and the sheriff, and the sheriff clerk, and several town clerks, within each county, shall deal with and dispose of them in the same order and manner, both as to publication of the claims and notices to objectors, and as to the periods or intervals at which they shall severally be received, notified, and disposed of, as is above provided with regard to the first or original claims for registration under this act ; the claimants for counties being at liberty to lodge their written titles with the sheriff clerk at any time previous to the tenth day of August, and that the whole claims, objections, and titles, shall be laid before the sheriff on or before the twelfth day of that month, who shall decide upon their merits between that day and the fifteenth day of September thereafter ; and that, in so far as regards claimants in burghs, the several town clerks shall affix the lists of new claimants, with the notices hereinbefore directed, to the church doors of their burghs on or before the twenty-sixth day of July in each such year ; that the objections to such claims shall be given in on or before the tenth day of August thereafter, and that the whole claims, objections, and titles shall be laid before the sheriff on or before the twelfth day of the said month of August, who shall examine and decide upon the same on or before the fifteenth day of September in each such year ; the said sheriffs always proceeding to three or to two several places, as above provided, in their several counties, and notifying to the sheriff clerk on or before the fifteenth day of July in each such year, the days at which they are to hold their courts at each of the said places, of which days written notice shall be given by the sheriff clerks to each town clerk and parish schoolmaster in the county on or before the eighteenth day of July in each such year ; provided always, that the sheriffs shall upon this occasion correct any mistakes or omissions which may be pointed out or discovered in the registers in the name, residence, or condition of any person already registered or otherwise ; and each sheriff clerk shall for this purpose be obliged to keep a correct copy of the register for the county at some convenient place in the head burgh of the shire ; and each town clerk shall keep a copy of the register for his burgh at some convenient place in the said burgh, which several registers shall, for a period of ten days next after the twentieth day of June in each year, be open to the inspection of all persons who may desire to see the same, without payment of any fee for such inspection ; and each sheriff shall, on or before the fifteenth day of September yearly, have his said registers finally corrected and completed, and arranged as above directed in the alphabetical order of the voters' names, with the several columns of particulars thereto annexed, as in the Schedule G to this Act annexed ; and after the said fifteenth day of September no change shall be made by any sheriff on his registers for that year, except only in consequence of the judgment of one or other of the courts of review hereinafter provided.

By Clause 23. And be it enacted, that the sheriff's judgments, granting or refusing registration, shall, so long as they remain unaltered, be conclusive of the rights of parties claiming or objecting as above, but that it shall be competent to any party considering himself aggrieved by any such judgment, to appeal and apply for an alteration thereof, he always giving notice in writing to the sheriff clerk or town clerk, and to the opposite party where the claim has been disputed, of such his intention to appeal, within five days after the judgment complained of, and producing evidence of such notice to the judge of appeal before entering on its merits.

By Clause 24. All the judgment of the sheriffs on all appeals on the first registry under this Act shall be pronounced by the 25th day of November, 1832; and the registers to be corrected accordingly.

By Clause 25. Courts of review or final appeals, to be formed of the sheriffs of the counties of Edinburgh, Haddington and Linlithgow, who are to hold a court at Edinburgh at the same hour previously announced, between the fifteenth and twenty-fifth day of September in each year, and finally to determine on all appeals before the twentieth day of October thereafter, and to amend the registers accordingly.

By Clause 26. In all elections after the end of this present parliament, every qualified person whose name shall appear in the last corrected register, and none other, shall be entitled to vote; and it shall not be competent to inquire on that occasion into any other facts except those of the party tendering the vote being truly the individual mentioned in the said register, of his being still possessed of the qualification there recorded, on his own account, and not in trust for or at the pleasure of any other person, and of his not having previously voted at that election; the inquiry into these facts to be confined to the putting to the person so tendering his vote, if the sheriff shall be required so to do on behalf of any candidate an oath, or, if he be a Quaker or Moravian, a solemn affirmation, in the form of the Schedule I. to this Act annexed; and it shall not be competent at any such poll or election to put to any registered voter any other oath or affirmation whatsoever, except only the oath or affirmation against bribery, which, if required on the part of any candidate, shall then be put by the sheriff in the form of Schedule K to this Act annexed: provided always, that any person who has claimed to be registered, but whose claim has been rejected by the sheriff or court of review, may, notwithstanding, tender his vote at any election where such register is in force, and the sheriff or his substitute shall enter any vote so tendered, with the name of the person for whom it is given, distinguishing the same from the votes given by persons on the register, so that it may be in the power of any election committee to give effect to such vote in deciding upon the validity of any disputed election; but no scrutiny shall be allowed by or before any returning officer with regard to any votes given or tendered at any such election.

REGULATIONS FOR POLLING PLACES.

By Clause 27. That within three months after the passing of this Act, each sheriff shall divide his county into convenient districts for polling, following, as nearly as possible, the boundaries of parishes, baronies, or other known subdivisions, and shall appoint a particular polling place for each such district, which place shall be selected so as to be most accessible to the voters in the district; and such polling places shall in no case be more in number than fifteen for any one county, and shall be so arranged as that no more than six hundred persons or thereabouts shall poll at any election at any one place; and each town-clerk shall, in like manner, appoint one polling place in every city, burgh, or town, of which he is clerk, in which the number of voters does not exceed six hundred or thereabouts, and shall, wherever the number of registered voters in any such city, burgh, or town, shall exceed six hundred or thereby, divide the said city, burgh, or town, into convenient districts, and appoint a convenient polling place in each such district, so as that no more than about six hundred persons shall poll at any election at any such place; and each sheriff clerk shall, within fourteen days after the sheriff has so divided his county into districts for polling, make up a distinct list of the said districts and the polling place appointed in each, and shall cause copies of the said lists to be affixed to the doors of all the country parish churches in his county; and each town-clerk shall, within the same period, affix lists of the polling place or polling places within his burgh to all the church doors within the same; and every voter shall poll at the polling place of the district within which the premises, or any part of them, in respect of which he claims to vote, may be situate, except only where such polling place shall be in an island, distant more than ten miles from the mainland of any county, in which case the voters not resident in such island may poll at the polling place for the district in which the county town is included.

By Clauses 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, and 34, are enacted provisions regulating the issue of writs and process of election, which being lengthy directions of mere routine, it is not deemed necessary to particularly enter into.

By Clause 35. No person not now on the roll of freeholders admitted to claim or to vote at the election for any shire in respect of any subject situate within the limits of any city, burgh, or town, entitled to send or to contribute towards sending a Member to Parliament; nor any person admitted to claim or to vote in the election for any city, town, or burgh, in respect of any subject not situate within the limits of the said city, town, or burgh.

By Clause 36. No sheriff entitled, 'from and after the passing of this Act, to vote at any election for any Member of Parliament for the county of which he shall be sheriff; and no sheriff substitute, and no sheriff clerk, or deputy sheriff clerk, entitled, 'from and after the passing of this Act, to vote or to be elected at any election for a Member to serve in parliament for the shire of which he is the sheriff substitute or sheriff clerk; and no town-clerk or depute town-clerk, entitled to vote or to be elected for the city, burgh, town, or district, in which he is such clerk; and no sheriff substitute, sheriff clerk, or town-clerk, after the passing of this Act, directly or indirectly, to act as an agent for any candidate in any matter connected with or preparatory to any election for the county or burgh respectively in which such person shall be respectively sheriff substitute, sheriff clerk, or town-clerk.

By Clause 37. From and after the end of this present parliament the eldest sons of Scotch-peers shall be entitled to be registered and to vote at all elections for Members of Parliament for Scotland, and shall also be entitled, though not so registered, to be elected to serve as such Members for any county, city, burgh, or town, or district of burghs, in Scotland; and that after the end of this present Parliament no Member for any county in Scotland shall be required to be qualified as an elector or to hold any superiority within such county.

By Clause 38. If any sheriff, sheriff substitute, sheriff clerk, town-clerk, or any person whatsoever shall wilfully contravene or disobey the provisions of this Act, he shall for such his offence be liable to be sued in the court of session by any registered voter, candidate, Member actually returned, or other party aggrieved, for the penal sum of five hundred pounds; and the jury before whom such action shall be tried may find their verdict for the full sum of five hundred pounds, or for any less sum which the said jury shall think it just that such party defender should pay to such party pursuer; and the defender in such action, being convicted, shall pay such penal sum so awarded, with full costs of suit, to the party who may sue for the same, without prejudice, however, to the right of any party aggrieved by the misconduct of any sheriff as returning officer to recover such damages for a false return as he may be entitled to at common law or by virtue of any statute now in force: provided that every such action shall be raised within four calendar months next after the cause of action has arisen.

By Clause 39. That every person claiming to be registered shall, at the time of making such claim, pay a fee of two shillings for the use of the sheriff clerk or to the town-clerk receiving such claim; out of which monies the said clerks respectively shall be obliged to provide all the books, and to perform all the clerk's business necessary for making up the registers, and making copies thereof for the different polling places in the shire or burgh.

By Clause 40. That the monies which are now in use to be allowed to the sheriffs in their accounts with the exchequer for executing writs for elections shall continue to be allowed to them on such accounts; and that all halls, rooms, booths, or other places hired, constructed, or prepared for taking the polls shall be so hired, constructed, or prepared by contract with the candidates, at their joint and equal expense: provided always, that the expense of such hiring or construction at any one polling place for a county, shall not exceed the sum of thirty pounds, nor the sum of twenty pounds at any one polling place in any city, burgh, or town; and the candidates shall further be bound to pay and contribute among them to each poll clerk one guinea per day, and in like manner to contribute and pay a certain fee to each sheriff or sheriff substitute, for superintending the polls, the amount of which fee shall in no case exceed the sum of three guineas per day for each such sheriff or substitute; and the candidates, in all cases where a poll has been demanded, shall in like manner be bound to defray the necessary expenses incurred by the sheriff or sheriff clerks or town-clerks in the transmission of precepts, intimations, poll books, or other communications required or enjoined by this Act; and if any person shall be proposed as a candidate without his consent, the person so proposing him shall be liable to defray his share of all these expenses in like manner as if he had been a candidate himself.

By Clause 41. That each sheriff shall be entitled to make a charge for the time and labour employed in investigating and disposing of the claims and objections above specified, either originally in his own county, or there or elsewhere as a judge of appeal, which charge shall not be more than five guineas for every period of eight hours employed by him or by any assistant sheriff or advocate, to be appointed in the manner by this Act authorized and directed, exclusively, in any such investigations, over and above his or their reasonable travelling expenses; provided always, that no charge shall in any case be allowed for a greater number of hours so employed by such sheriff and by such assistants in originally deciding on the claims in any one county than thirty periods of eight hours for each such sheriff and assistant respectively.

By Clause 42. That when any sheriff who is hercinbefore required to examine and decide on the claims for registration within his county, or to whom any writ for election is directed, shall be incapacitated from acting by sickness or unavoidable absence, one of his ordinary substitutes may act in his stead, provided he holds a substitution specially authorizing him to do so ; provided also, that if the sheriffs of the counties of Edinburgh, Lanark, Fife, Forfar, Aberdeen, Perth, Ayr, Inverness, Renfrew, or Orkney and Shetland, or any of them, shall, after the passing of this bill, represent to the lord president of the court of session, that by reason of the great number of claims of registration presented or likely to be presented in such counties, it will be impracticable for them, without assistance, to dispose of such claims within the period limited by this bill, then and in that case it shall be competent to the said lord president, being satisfied of the correctness of such representation, and he is hereby required, to nominate and appoint one or more other sheriffs or advocates of at least four years' standing to assist in disposing of the said claims within the said counties or any of them ; and all judgments pronounced by the said assistant sheriffs or advocates shall be liable to be appealed from as if they had been pronounced by the sheriff of the county.

By Clause 43. That the notices required by this bill to be given at church doors shall not be necessary at any of the churches in the islands of North Uist, South Uist, Barra, Harris, or Eig, in the county of Inverness, nor at any of the churches in the island of Lewis, in the county of Ross, nor at any of the churches in the islands of Tirce, Coll, or Gigha, in the county of Argyle, nor at any of the churches in the county of Orkney and Shetland, except such as are in what is called the mainland of Orkney and Shetland respectively.

By Clause 46. That the word "sheriff" shall be held to include the word "stewart ;" and the words "sheriff substitute" shall be held to include the words "stewart substitute ;" and that the words "shire" or "county" shall be held to include the word "stewartry ;" and the words "sheriff clerk" shall be held to include the words "stewart clerk," and "sheriff clerk depute," and "stewart clerk depute ;" and the words "town clerk" shall be held to include the words "town clerk depute ;" provided also, that no misnomer or inaccurate description of any person or place in any writing made in the form of any schedule to this bill annexed, or in any list or register or notice made under authority of this bill, shall in any way prevent or abridge the operation of this bill, provided that such person or place shall be so designated in such writing, list, register, or notice as to be commonly understood.

By Clause 47. That all laws, statutes, and usages now in force respecting the right of electing, the qualifications of electors, and the actual election of Members to serve in Parliament for that part of Great Britain called Scotland, shall be and the same are hereby repealed in so far as they are inconsistent or at variance with the provisions of this bill : provided always, that the same shall be in force in all other respects whatsoever.

By Clause 48. That if a dissolution of the present Parliament shall take place after the passing of this bill, but before the 1st day of December in the present year, in such case such persons only shall be entitled to vote in the election of Members to serve in a new Parliament for any county, city, burgh, or town, or district of cities, burghs, and towns, as would have been entitled to be inserted in the respective lists under this Act, if the day of election had been the day of making out such lists ; and all persons are entitled to vote in such election, although they may not be registered according to the provisions of this bill, and the polling for any county may be fifteen days, and for any city, burgh, town, or district for eight days, any thing in this Act to the contrary notwithstanding ;

Boundaries of the foregoing Districts, form a portion of Schedule M, in the Scottish Reform Act.

RULES FOR ESTABLISHING THE LIMITS MENTIONED IN THE FOREGOING SUMMARIES, AS SETTLED BY CLAUSE 5, AND SCHEDULE M, IN THE REFORM ACT.

I. That the words “northward,” “southward,” “eastward,” “westward,” shall respectively be understood to denote only the general direction in which any boundary proceeds from the point last described, and not that such boundary shall continue to proceed throughout in the same direction to the point next described:

II. That when any road is mentioned merely by the name of the place to which such road leads, the principal road thither from the city, burgh, or town, of which the boundary is in course of description shall be understood:

III. That whenever a line is said to be drawn from, to, through, or in the direction of, or any distance to be measured from or to, an object, such line shall, in the absence of any direction to the contrary, be understood to be drawn from, to, through, or in the direction of, or such distance to be measured from or to, the centre of such object, as nearly as the centre thereof can be ascertained:

IV. That every building through which, or through any part whereof, any boundary hereby established shall pass shall be considered as within such boundary: provided always, that if the boundaries of any two or more of the cities, burghs, and towns, whereof the boundaries are hereby described, shall pass through the same building, or any part thereof, such building shall be considered as within that one of such two or more of the said cities, burghs, and towns, which was before the passing of this bill entitled to return members or a member to serve in parliament; or if neither or more than one of such two or more of the said cities, burghs, and towns shall have been so entitled, then within that one of them whereof the area as hereby established is the smallest:

V. That whenever any boundary by this bill established is said to pass, or any distance to be measured, along any street, road, lane, or loaning, or up, down, or along any river, stream, canal, or burn, the middle (as nearly as the same can be ascertained) of such street, road, lane, loaning, river, stream, canal, or burn, shall be understood:

VI. That the middle of any street, road, or lane shall be understood as the middle of the carriageway along the same:

VII. That when any boundary by this bill established is said to proceed, or any distance to be measured, along a street, road, or lane, or up, down, or along a river, from or to an object, such boundary shall be understood to proceed, or such distance to be measured (as the case may be), from or to that point in the middle of such road, lane, or river from which the shortest line would be drawn to the centre of such object, as nearly as the centre thereof can be ascertained:

VIII. That the point at which any wall, march, boundary, street, road, lane, loaning, avenue, railway, walk, path, river, stream, canal, or burn is said to meet, join, cross, reach, or leave any march, boundary, street, road, lane, loaning, avenue, railway, walk, river, stream, canal, or burn shall be understood as that point at which a line passing along the middle of the march, boundary, street, road, loan, lane, avenue, railway, walk, river, stream, canal, or burn, so met, joined, crossed, reached, or left, would be intersected by a line drawn along the middle of the wall, march, boundary, street, road, lane, loaning, avenue, railway, walk, path, river, stream, canal, or burn so meeting, joining, crossing, reaching, or leaving, if such line were prolonged sufficiently far; and that the point at which any burn or river joins any firth or the sea shall be understood as that point at which a line passing along the low water mark of such firth or the sea would be cut by a line to be drawn along the middle of such burn or river, if such line were prolonged sufficiently far; and that the point at which a burn or feeder joins a loch shall be understood as that point at which a line drawn along the shore of such loch would be cut by a line drawn thereto along the middle of such burn or feeder:

IX. That when a line is said to be drawn to a road, lane, river, stream, or canal, such line shall be considered as prolonged to the middle of such road, lane, river, stream, or canal:

X. That by the words "sea" and "shore" shall be understood the low water mark:

XI. That if any deficiency shall be found to exist in the line of any boundary described in the said schedule to this bill annexed by reason of the intervention of any space between any two immediately consecutive points, such deficiency shall be supplied by a straight line to be drawn from the one to the other of such two immediately consecutive points.

SYNOPTICAL GUIDE FOR REGISTRATION.*

* The Editor is indebted for this Guide principally to the labours of D. R. Pigot, Esq. Barrister at Law, Dublin, who published them in the "Dublin Evening Post," and liberally invited Printers and Publishers to avail themselves of the same.

COUNTIES.

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

- CLASS I.
- Title 1. 50*l*. Freeholder, 1. In fee, of which 20 years' possession, or enjoyment, without payment of rent, is prima facie evidence.
20*l*. Freeholder.
2. In tail.
3. For life or lives.
4. Whether the claimant holds singly or jointly with others.
5. Whether the estate be legal or equitable; that is, whether it is or is not vested in a trustee, or mortgagee; or whether the lands are held under a lease or conveyance, or under an article, or contract for a lease or conveyance.

Occupation and Residence as to the foregoing Titles.

Need not occupy.

Receipt of Rents or Profits as to the foregoing Titles.

1. Must be in possession of the premises, or in receipt of the rents or profits, for six months before registry. [Let every person, nevertheless, seek the franchise and serve his notice, whose title shall have accrued within six months of the probable actual time of registry.]
2. All those whose title shall have come by descent, succession, marriage, marriage settlement, devise, (i. e. will,) or promotion, are expressly made entitled at once to register, by the reform act.
3. If the mortgagee, or trustee, of the lands be in actual possession, or in receipt of the rents, he can register, and the mortgagor or cestui que trust, cannot.
4. If the mortgagor, or cestui que trust, be in possession, or in receipt of the rents or profits, he can register, and the mortgagee, or trustee cannot.

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

- Title 2. 50*l*
20*s*.
- Each must be freehold; that is,
1. Held in fee.
2. Or in tail.
3. Or for life or lives.
4. And the claimant can register, whether he be entitled singly, or jointly with others, provided his share or interest be, bona fide, of the yearly value of 50*l*. or 20*l*.

Occupation and Residence as to the foregoing Titles.

Need not occupy any lands.

Receipt of Rents or Profits as to the above Titles.

1. Must be in the receipt of the rent for six months before registry. [Let him, however, serve his notice, if his title shall have accrued at any time within six months of the probable actual time of registry.]
2. And see above, in this column, title 1, observations 2, 3, and 4, which apply here.

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

- Title 3.—10*l*. Freeholder.
- 1, 2, 3, 4. The tenure must be as above, title 1, observations 1, 2, 3, and 5, in this column.
5. Let the claimant serve his notice, whether he holds singly, or jointly with others; and whether he does or does not hold under a lease made after the 19th July, 1832.
6. A mortgagee or trustee, in possession, can register.
7. The mortgagor, or cestui que trust, if in possession, (although the estate is vested in a mortgagee or trustee,) can register.

Occupation and Residency as to the foregoing Title.

1. Must occupy. If lands by tilling or grazing. If a house by residing. If both house and land, by residing in the house, or by tilling, or grazing the land.

2. Let the claimant serve his notice and claim his franchise, although he has sublet a part of the premises, if he tills or grazes, or otherwise occupies, so much as is worth him bona fide 10*l.* a-year, howsoever estimated; for instance, if he has sublet a part of a profit rent, he may apportion the rent, so that if what he retains is of the value to him of 10*l.* yearly, he can register.

Receipt of Rents and Profits as to the foregoing Title.

Receipt of rent is not sufficient. But if part be sublet let the claimant still serve his notice. Let him take some friend with him to the Sessions who knows the premises, and will support his own statement, if necessary, of the value of what he occupies.

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

Title 4.—10*l.* Leaseholder for any residue of any term of [sixty years or more.

20*l.* Leaseholder for any residue of any term of fourteen years or more.

1. This franchise exists where a person is entitled to any lands or tenements for any residue of any term which was originally created for a period of sixty years or upwards, worth 10*l.* a-year; or any lands or tenements for any residue of any term which was originally created for a period of fourteen years or upwards, worth 20*l.* a-year. This value is to be estimated as mentioned below. (See “Further Directions.”)

2. The claimant so entitled can register, however small the portion is of the term which remains.

3. If a lease be made for lives and years, and the lives are dead, and any of the years are unexpired, the claimant may register. If the lease be for years determinable upon lives, the claimant may register.

4. He may be the original lessee.

5. He may be the assignee of the original lessee, that is, he may derive from the original lessee either under a will or as next of kin; or by a deed or article; or by all these ways.—He is an assignee under the act, if the whole residue that remains of the term is vested in him, or in a trustee for him, upon trusts which give him (the claimant) a subsisting interest in the rents or profits. He is an assignee under the act if he is married to the person who, when he married her, was entitled to the premises for the residue of the term, provided no settlement was then made, or the property has not since been disposed of.

6. He may be a sub-lessee or an assignee of a sub-lessee; that is, he has the franchise whether his landlord be or be not the owner of the fee, or ground landlord.

7. He may hold singly, or jointly with others, and can register if his share or interest be respectively bona fide of the yearly value mentioned above; i. e. 10*l.* yearly if held for any residue of a term of sixty years; or 20*l.* yearly if held for any residue of fourteen years.

8. He can register whether the estate be legal or equitable, as above stated in this column, title 1, observation 5, which applies here.

9. and 10. See above under this head, title 3, observations 6 and 7, which apply here.

Receipt of Rents and Profits as to the foregoing Titles.

1. If he be the original lessee of the term, or the assignee of such lessee, and if he holds immediately under the owner of the fee, (or ground landlord,) he need not occupy.

2. If he be a sub-lessee, or the assignee of a sub-lessee, (that is, if his immediate landlord holds under another landlord,) the claimant must occupy for six months before registry.

3. It is, however, of importance to remember that the reform act makes payment of rent prima facie evidence that the person to whom it is paid is the owner in fee. If, therefore, the claimant, when he appears before the barrister, shall be found not to know who is the owner in fee, his statement that he pays rent to his immediate landlord, will give him a right to register, though he does not occupy, unless it be shown in evidence that his immediate landlord does not hold in fee.

Receipt of Rents and Profits as to the foregoing Titles.

1. If he be the original lessee or the assignee of such original lessee, and if he holds under the head landlord or owner in fee, receipt of rent for six months before registry will be sufficient. He may, however, occupy.

2. It will be sufficient if the claimant be in the receipt of rent out of part, and occupies the remainder.

3. If this interest came to him even within the six months, by will, marriage, marriage settlement, or succession, he may register.

4. If the claimant hold under a middleman, let him nevertheless serve his notice, and at all events insist upon his right to register, if any part of the premises which he occupies be, considering the manner in which he has disposed of the remainder, of the value of 10*l.* yearly; and let him take a friend with him to the Sessions, who knows the premises, and will be able to support his own statement of their value.

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

Title 5.—10*l.* Leaseholder for any residue of any term of twenty years or more.

1. This franchise exists where a person is entitled to any lands or tenements for any residue of any term which was originally created for a period of 20 years, or upwards, worth 10*l.* a-year. The value is to be estimated as mentioned below. (See "Further Directions.")

2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10. All the observations under this head, title 4, apply here, except observation 1.

Occupation and Residence as to the foregoing Title.

1. Must occupy for six months before registry; but a single day's occupation will suffice, if he became entitled by will, marriage, marriage settlement, or succession.

2. Let the claimant serve his notice, if any part which he occupies be, considering the manner in which he has disposed of the remainder, of the value of 10*l.* yearly; and let him take a friend with him to the Sessions, who knows the premises, to support his own statement of their value.

Receipt of Rents and Profits as to the foregoing Title.]

Receipts of rents will not suffice.

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

Title 6.—10*l.* Copyholder.

This franchise exists where a person is seized at low or in equity, of any lands or tenements of a copyhold tenure, for any life or lives, or for any larger estate, of the clear yearly value of 10*l.* or upwards, above all rents and charges payable out of or in respect of the same. It is a very rare tenure in Ireland. It is believed not to exist in any county of a city, or county of a town, but if it does so exist, it gives a franchise there as well as in a county.

Occupation and Residence as to the foregoing Title.

Need not occupy.

Receipt of Rent and Profits as to the foregoing Title.

Must be in receipt of the rents or profits for six months before registry, unless he derives title as above, in this column, title 1, observation 2.

CLASS II.

COUNTIES OF CITIES AND COUNTIES OF TOWNS.

THESE ARE — CARRICKFERGUS, CORK, DROGHEDA, DUBLIN, GALWAY, KILKENNY, LIMERICK, AND WATERFORD.

In Counties of Cities and Counties, and Counties of Towns, any person can register and vote in respect of any franchise which, if it were in a County, would give a vote for such County. The franchises contained in CLASS I. are therefore all to be here referred to. In addition to these, there are in Counties of Cities and Counties of Towns the following franchises :

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

Titles 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6, for which see CLASS I.

Title 7. — 10*l.* Householder.

1. This franchise exists, where any person in a city, town, or borough, occupies, as tenant or owner, within the electoral district any house, warehouse, countinghouse, or shop, which, separately or jointly with any land within such district, occupied therewith by him, as tenant under the same landlord, or as owner, is, bona fide, of the clear yearly value of 10*l.* or upwards.—2 and 3 W. IV., c. 88, sections 5 and 7.)

2. It is totally immaterial by what tenure the claimant holds; whether as owner or as tenant at will, or by the week, or month, or year; whether he pays rent, or holds rent-free, whether he holds by a verbal or a written contract; or whether, by his contract, the cesses, rates, or taxes are to be paid by him or by his landlord.

3. A shop, a warehouse, a countinghouse (as a banker's, merchant's, or attorney's office), gives the franchise as well as a dwelling-house.

4. A butcher's stall in a market, (as an instance) is plainly a shop, within the meaning of the statute.

5. Such shop, warehouse, or countinghouse, may, it is considered, be in an upper story, or even in a cellar (if of sufficient value) as well as on the ground floor.

6. It has been considered, that in estimating the value of the holding, no deduction whatever is to be made for rent, charges, cesses, rates, or taxes, and in fact, that the rent, in the absence of any other test, may be taken as a measure of the value; for instance, that if the claimant pays 10*l.* a-year rent for holding, and it is worth that sum yearly, and no more, the occupier may register.

7. The claimant should serve his notice if he occupies a house, a warehouse, or a countinghouse, which either alone, or together with any land, (as a yard, garden, &c.) occupied with it by him as tenant under the same landlord, or as owner, is worth, bona fide, 10*l.* a year, as it stands.

8. He should serve his notice and seek his franchise, whether he holds singly or jointly with others. Joint tenants and tenants in common appear plainly to be entitled to this franchise, if they hold and occupy bona fide; and if the holding be worth 10*l.* multiplied by the number of owners who tenant or own it, in common.

9. The estimate of value may be made by taking into account any land, yard, out-office, &c. occupied with the house, warehouse, countinghouse, or shop, by the claimant, as tenant under the same landlord, or as owner.

Occupation and Residence as to Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4, of the foregoing Title.

1. The claimant must occupy for six months before registry.

2. The mode of occupation will vary according to the nature of the holding. If it be a dwelling-house the proper occupation is residence. If it be a shop, and it be used for exhibiting goods for sale, that will be sufficient occupation, though nobody resides on the premises. If it be a warehouse, the keeping of goods stored there is an occupation, though there be no residence. And if it be a countinghouse, the use of it by the claimant or his clerk, at the usual times of business, is a sufficient occupation, without residence.

3. The claimant need not reside in the city or town, if he otherwise occupies the premises, within the meaning of the act, as above expounded.

4. And he should serve his notice, if he be the owner or tenant of a house which is in the care of his servants, or occupied by any of his family.

Receipt of Rent or Profits as to Nos. 1, 2, and 3 of the foregoing Title.

1. No receipt of rents will suffice.

2. But if part be let, and if the claimant retains a shop, warehouse, or countinghouse, which, alone, or together with any land occupied therewith by him, as tenant under the same landlord, is of the value of 10*l.* yearly, he is entitled to register and vote, and should serve his notice accordingly.

3. If the part retained by him be not a shop, warehouse, or countinghouse, let him nevertheless serve his notice, describing the holding as a house.

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

Title 8.—40*s.* Freeholder, 1, 2, 3, 4. The tenure may be as stated in title 1, observations 1, 2, 3, and 5.

5. No person can vote as a forty-shilling freeholder who has derived his title since the 1st of March, 1831, unless he has so derived title by descent, succession, marriage, marriage settlement, devise (i. e. will) or promotion to a benefice or freehold office.

6. To serve his notice whether he holds singly, or jointly with others.

Occupation and Residence as to the foregoing Title.

1. Must occupy the premises in respect of which he claims a franchise, unless he holds for lives renewable for ever, or under a lease for ever, or in fee farm, or in fee, or paying no rent save quit and crown rent, in any of which cases he need not occupy.

2. But he must have resided in the city or town, or within seven miles of the usual place for holding elections, for six months before registry.

3. In every instance in which the claimant would be entitled to register under the former law, and held the lands before the 1st of March, 1831, or has since derived title to serve his notice, although not already registered, and contend before the barrister that the word "registered" in the oath Schedule C, No. 9 of the Reform Act, must be expunged, as repugnant to the 10th section.

Receipt of Rents and Profits as to the foregoing Title.

Receipt of Rents will not suffice, unless the claimant holds under a lease for lives renewable for ever, or under a lease for ever, or in fee farm, or in fee, or paying no rent save quit or crown rent; in any of which cases receipt of rents or profits is sufficient without occupation.

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

Title 9.—Freemen.

1. Freemen by birth, servitude, or marriage, or by any statute, whensoever admitted.

2. Honorary freemen if admitted on or before the 30th of March, 1831, but not otherwise.

Residence as to the foregoing Title.

Must reside in the city or town, or within seven miles of the usual place for holding elections, for six months before registry.

[CLASS III.]

CITIES, TOWNS, AND BOROUGHES, NOT BEING COUNTIES IN THEMSELVES.

In one of these, Mallow, the franchise, before the Reform Act, was vested in freeholders only. These are retained as below. In others, as in Downpatrick, Lisburn, and Newry, the franchise was in 5*l.* householders only. These are retained as below. In one, Dungarvan, the franchise was in freeholders and 5*l.* householders. These are retained as below. In all the rest, the franchise was in freemen, burgesses, &c. These are still retained, but with the restriction that the claimant must reside for six months before registry within seven miles of the usual place for holding elections. In all the 10*l.* household franchise has been added.

Tenure—Estate— Quality of Franchise.

The tenures may be as above in this column at the respective Titles.

Titles 1, 2, and 3, being

50*l.* Freeholder.

20*l.* Freeholder

50*l.* Rent Charger.

20*l.* Rent Charger.

40*s.* Freeholder.

N.B.—These franchises still exist in Mallow and Dungarvan.

Occupation and Residence as to the foregoing Title.

Occupation—Residence.

Must in all cases where the franchise is to be exercised in any borough, reside within seven miles of the usual place for holding elections for six months before registry.

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

Title 7.—10*l.* Householders. As in Title 7, in Class II. This franchise, created by the Reform Act, is to prevail henceforward in every borough.

Occupation and Residence as to the foregoing Title.

As Title 7, in Class II.

Rent and Profits as to the foregoing Title.

As Title 7, in Class II.

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

Title 9.—Freemen.

See above class II. Title 9. This franchise is retained in all the boroughs except Downpatrick, Dungarvan, Lisburn, Mallow, and Newry.

Occupation and Residence as to the foregoing Title.

As Title 9, in Class II.

Tenure—Estate—Quality of Franchise.

Title 10.—5*l.* Householder. This franchise consists in mere residence in a house within the borough, worth (with or without its offices and back, or other yard) 5*l.* a year as it stands. The claimant must be a resident housekeeper of the borough, and answerable for the payment of the usual customary taxes and cesses therein (35 Geo. III. c. 29, s. 55, and 2 and 3 William IV., c. 88, s. 23.)

N.B. This franchise still exists in Downpatrick, Dungarvan, Lisburn, and Newry.

Occupation and Residence as to the foregoing Title.

The claimant must reside for six months before registry. No other mode of occupation than residence will be sufficient.

FURTHER DIRECTIONS.

VALUE.

1. In all the freehold, leasehold, and copyhold franchises the property is to be estimated at the prescribed value over and above all rent and charges; but no public or parliamentary tax, county, church, parish cess or rate, or any cess or rate upon any townland, or division of any parish, barony, or half-barony, is to be deemed "a charge" in so estimating that value. [35 Geo. III. c. 29, s. 51; 4th Geo. IV. c. 55, s. 7; 10 Geo. IV. c. 8, s. 2; 2 and 3 Wm. IV. c. 88, s. 10.]

2. The value of the holding which gives the 10*l*. household franchise is not directed by the act to be estimated by any reference to rent or to charges of any kind. See title 7, head, Tenure.

3. The value of rent charges is to be over and above all charges. No public, &c. tax, nor county, &c. cess or rate, is to be taken into account in estimating this value.

4. In every case where the claimant's franchise requires occupation, whether as freeholder, leaseholder, or householder, he should insist upon his right to register, although he has demised, or otherwise bona fide disposed of, a part of the holding, if that portion which he retains (whether it consists of a house or of part of a house, or of land) is of the required value. That value may be estimated, by considering the rent, or other profit derived from the disposition made of the unoccupied part, as increasing the value of the portion occupied; and as (in the case of leaseholds and freeholds) applicable in reduction of the rent or charges that affect the premises.

PAYMENT OF GRAND JURY CESS AND MUNICIPAL CESSES, RATES AND TAXES.

1. This is necessary in the household franchise only. In this case the claimant, when he tenders his franchise for registry, must swear that not more than one half year's grand jury or municipal rates, cesses or taxes are due or payable by him in respect of the premises for which he seeks to register.

2. The grand jury cess is sufficiently known.

3. "Municipal cesses, rates, and taxes."—Considerable difficulty exists in construing these terms. Until the meaning of the act shall be settled by decision, or by a resolution of the House of Commons, the only safe course, and that to which the claimant is earnestly advised, is to take care that all the cesses, rates, or taxes payable in respect of the holding on which he relies for the household franchise, have been paid, leaving, at the utmost, not more than a half year's portion of any of them due.

4. The statute makes no express provision for the case of a householder holding under a contract by which his landlord is bound to pay the rates, cesses, or taxes. In all cases of this nature the claimant ought to see that his landlord has paid, or require him at once to pay them. If the landlord neglects to do so after notice, the claimant should himself discharge them, and insist on being allowed them out of his next gale of rent. The payment may be made at any time before registry. In any case the notice to be served.

5. The occupier should, in no instance, wait for a demand of the rate. He should immediately ascertain its amount, (if he has not already done so,) and pay it. He should, in no case, be satisfied with a tender. He should actually deposit the amount, and should do this, either through the medium of another person, or by himself, in presence of a witness or witnesses, in case any difficulty exists, or is apprehended, in procuring a receipt acknowledging the payment.

NOTICE OF REGISTRY.

Prepare Forms of Notice as follows:—

To the Clerk of the Peace, or his Deputy, acting for the County of _____ [or "city of," or "town of," or "borough of," according to the name given to the electoral district in the Boundary Act.]

SIR,—Take notice that it is my intention to apply to be registered, as a person entitled to vote at elections of a member or members, to serve in Parliament for the "county of _____ [or "city," "town," or "borough,"] and the particulars of my claim are as follows:—

CHECK MEMORANDUM.	Name, descrip- tion and resi- dence of ap- plicant.	In what right claiming.	Description of property (if the same be in the respect of property), with the name of the barony, townland, parish, street, or denomination, or place where situate.	Yearly value to be registered

DIRECTIONS FOR FILLING AND SERVING THE ABOVE.

1. In the first column write the NAME [Christian name and surname] of the claimant, his DESCRIPTION [viz. his trade, as "shoemaker," or business or occupation as "merchant," "grocer," "shopkeeper," "farmer," or his rank or degree, as "esquire," "gentleman," "yeoman,"] and his RESIDENCES, [i. e. his present or usual place of abode].
2. In the second column state the right in which the claimant seeks his franchise, by one of these general words, "freeholder," "leaseholder," "householder," "freeman," "rent-charge," The term "householder" will apply here, although the holding is in the next column described as a shop, &c.—the former being the general term which the Act gives to the owner of that franchise.
3. In the third column state—1st. The description of the property to be described with as much brevity as is consistent with accuracy, thus—"a piece or plot of land," "a shop," "a warehouse," "a countinghouse," "a shop and land," "a shop and premises," "a rent-charge issuing out of a piece of land." 2d. The situation. If in a county, state the barony, parish, townland, [if known,] and the street, or denomination or place, as "situated at" [the name of the place, or the name by which the lands are known,] in the townland of in the parish of and barony of . If in a county of a city, or county of a town, situated at street, or "at" [stating the name of the place, or the name by which the lands are known,] in the parish of in the county of the city of . If in a borough or town, "situate at" [stating the name of the place, or the name by which the lands are known,] or "at street, in the parish of and barony of within the borough of . If in that part of the county of Dublin, added by the new act to the city, state "situate at" [stating the name of the place, or the name by which the lands are known,] or "situate at street, in the parish of in the barony of within the Circular Road."
- If possible, the barony to be in EVERY case stated in describing property in a county. The arrangement of booths at the place of polling is directed by the act to be made with reference to the number of voters appearing registered in the books of the clerk of the peace for baronies and half baronies. See 2 and 3 W. IV., c. 88, s. 51. This reason does not exist for specifying the baronies in cities, towns, or boroughs. Nevertheless let it be stated when known.

In all cases, such description should be given as will be sufficient to enable a person desirous of investigating the franchise to find out, with ordinary diligence, the spot in respect of which it is claimed.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS.

1. The claimant (or some person authorized by him) to sign his (the claimant's) name at the foot of the notice. It may be filled up and served by any person. It ought to be filled up by or in the presence of some person who will enter on the margin, headed "Check memorandum," the substance of the notice. That person should serve the notice, and preserve the memorandum (on which he should enter the day of service,) in order to be able to prove such service, if that should become necessary, either to remedy any miscarriage in the office of the clerk of the peace, or to recover the penalty of 100*l.* given by the statute for every act in contravention of its provisions. These forms may be bound up in books for more convenient use, in the offices where the notices are prepared, and the notices, when several are filled, may be cut out and served in counties, upon the clerk of the peace or his deputy, or upon the high constable of the barony; and in cities, towns, and boroughs, upon the clerk of the peace who, in counties of cities and counties of towns, is called the town-clerk. It should be served by the clerk or agents who has filled up the forms, and entered the substance or copy of the notice on the check memorandum. This is the course of business adopted at the office of the Dublin Registry Committee.

2. Whenever any doubt exists in which of several capacities the claimant can register, and there is not time for due investigation, let two or more notices be served. This should, of course, be avoided, unless a reasonable doubt exists. These double notices should, in all cases, be dated the same day, and be served at one and the same time. This will take away all excuse from the officer for contravening the provisions of the Act, by not posting a claimant in each capacity, which he is unquestionably bound to do, under a penalty of 100*l.* for each omission.

3. It is of importance that in counties of cities, and counties of towns, every person who has a freehold or leasehold franchise should serve a notice claiming as such, because these franchises do not require payment of rates, cesses, or taxes. On the other hand, every such person should also, if qualified, serve his notice as a householder, to guard against any miscarriage of the former; for the proof of the household franchise is so easy, that failure is hardly possible when the right to it exists. Whenever a householder has any reasonable ground for claiming as a leaseholder or freeholder, he should serve his notice in each capacity. In no case should a householder omit to claim as such.

4. In all cases when it is practicable, the deeds (leases or assignments) should be inspected, in order to determine the capacity in which the claimant should serve his notice; viz., whether as freeholder, or leaseholder, or rent-charger; and also, in order to enable any intelligent person who superintends the registry, to advise the claimant, whether he must occupy; whether receipt of rents be sufficient to entitle him to vote; and (if there be time) what documents or proofs he should be prepared with at the sessions.

5. Where the franchise has been registered before, the certificate of the former registry, or the affidavit of it, (of which the clerk of the peace has the custody,) is prima facie evidence of the franchise. Such previous registry should (except in the case of a 50*l.* freehold) be within eight years. Notice should be served on the clerk of the peace, at a convenient time before the sessions, to produce the affidavits of those persons who intend relying on the former registry, but who have lost their certificates. It is recommended that every person who has not his certificate of his former registry, shall, if possible procure one. Difficulties may be interposed to his so doing. It may be right to state, that the clerk of the peace in every county is bound, within ten days after request of any freeholder, to give an attested copy of the registry of all the freeholders, on being paid at the rate of three pence for every hundred names (35 Geo. III. c. 29, s. 43; 45 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 11; 10 Geo. IV. c. 8, s. 29). A similar provision is made by the 4th Geo. IV. c. 55, s. 20, respecting counties of cities and counties of towns. And in boroughs by the 35th Geo. III. c. 29, s. 58, the book of registry is to be open between the hours of twelve and two in the day time for the inspection of any registered inhabitant, (except on Sundays and feast days,) on the clerk of the peace receiving twenty-four hours' notice, and a fee of one shilling; and the clerk of the peace is bound, at the requisition of any person having, or claiming a vote in the borough, to give him a copy of the registry book, or of any part of it, at the charge of two pence for every four registered inhabitants; and is further bound, on ten days' notice, to furnish any such person with a copy of the index to such registry book, at the charge of one penny for every ten names of inhabitants contained in such copy.

6. OBSERVE, that any person who has property, freehold or leasehold, within the electoral boundaries of any city, borough, or town, situated in the county, and of such value and term as would otherwise give him a vote for the county, may register a county franchise, provided such property do not consist of a house, or warehouse, &c., (or a house and premises held with it,) which would give him a householder's franchise in the city, town, or borough. This observation applies to no county of a city, or county of a town, except so much of the electoral district of Dublin as consists of portions of the county of Dublin within the Circular-road. To these portions of the Dublin electoral district this observation applies.

Finally, let these three things be especially remembered :

1st. That no man can vote at the next Election, who shall not serve his Notice twenty clear days before the 10th of October next.

2d. That whenever a man has reasonable grounds for claiming a franchise in one or other of several capacities, and a reasonable doubt exists as to the capacity in which he may be able to establish his franchise, he should serve duplicate notices (delivered together to the clerk of the peace or his deputy) accommodated to each capacity ; but this should of course, not be done unnecessarily, nor where reasonable doubt does not exist.

3d. That although the franchise be doubtful, STILL THE NOTICE SHOULD BE SERVED.

End of Analysis of the Irish Reform Act, which received the Royal Assent on the 7th day of August, 1832.

THE END.
